CHICAGO AREA PAYS 22 MILLION IN INCOME TAX

6 Million More than Last Year.

When the midnight deadline for payment without penalty of taxes on 1934 incomes was passed last night tax payments totaling $21,978,842, on returns from the northern district of Illinois, including Chicago, had been tabulated.

This figure, approximately $6,326,000 more than had been paid at the same time last year, was expected to be increased considerably when several thousand accumulated returns filed by mail are opened.

The increased returns here mirrored those in other parts of the country. From Washington came the news that Guy T. Helvering, commissioner of internal revenue, had reported to the President that government revenues, including all the varied taxes, were running $393,000,000 ahead of last year's returns.

Reflects Earning Gains.

He pointed out that this reflected an increase in earning power, just as the higher returns from excise taxes show an increase in the purchasing power of the nation.

For the northern district of Illinois a total of 83,800 taxable returns had been filed by midnight, according to the tabulations made by Carter H. Harrison, collector of internal revenue. Last year 84,300 returns were made during the same period, but the total amount collected was far below this year's figure.

These figures, of course, like those on the tax payments, take no account of the hundreds of returns which were dropped into the mail last night.

Thousands in Final Rush.

All through yesterday thousands of last minute taxpayers jammed the corridors of the United States courthouse and a full force of clerks under Mr. Harrison and his chief office deputy, Miss Elizabeth Eckert, was on duty until 10 p. m. A skeleton force remained on until the midnight deadline.

A survey of returns just before midnight showed the highest tax declared was $2,400,000, which would indicate an estimated net income of $21,000,000 for 1934. This was filed by a corporation. The lowest tax declared by a corporation was for one cent.

The largest individual tax declared was $944,000, indicating an income of some $1,800,000.

Although the majority of returns in the Chicago district were by mail, there were still thousands who either preferred to appear in person or who needed the expert help of deputies in properly filling out the blanks.

Puzzled by Pink Slips.

The greatest number of questions asked by perplexed taxpayers concerned the publicity "pink slips." Some were uncertain as to whether it was necessary to file them, while many others didn't even know what the "pink slips" were. All questioners were told that the slips must be filed with the regular returns. The house in Washington already has repealed the pink slip legislation, but action on the measure still is pending in the senate.

Deputy Collector Paul Hankins received an extremely insulted look from one lady to whom he put the question:

"How about your pink slip?"

Mr. Harrison expressed the belief that the government campaign against tax dodgers had frightened numerous persons who had not filed in previous years into doing so this year.

CHICAGOAN IS SHOT TO DEATH AT SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, Ill., March 15.—(AP)—A well dressed man, believed to have come from Chicago, was found shot to death tonight in an alley near the Alton railroad station. Police said he had apparently fired a shot into his mouth from a gun they found beside him.

All identification marks had been removed from his clothing excepting his hat, which contained the trademark of a Chicago store [Arthur's, 34 West Van Buren street]. Even the laundry marks had been removed from his underclothing. Police said they found about $10 in his pockets.

The dead man, police said, was about 60 years of age, weighed 180 pounds, and was five feet seven inches tall. He wore a dark blue overcoat, a striped blue suit, and was bald.

CAPTAIN LOSES LIFE AS TRUCKS COLLIDE IN LOOP

Capt. Frank O'Connor of rescue squad No. 1 of the fire department was killed and ten firemen were injured early today in a spectacular crash of the squad's truck with the engine of Fire Company No. 13 at State and Adams streets.

The condition of three men belonging to Capt. O'Connor's command was said to be critical. They are Lawrence O'Connell, 7530 Coles avenue; Martin J. Carney, 4918 Merrimac avenue, and Peter Doyle, 4007 Rosemont avenue. Each of them suffered a fractured skull. With the other injured they were taken to St. Luke's hospital.

Other Injured Firemen.

Other members of the rescue squad kept at the hospital are John J. Sullivan, 3955 North Lamon avenue, and Philip Kelly, 4151 North Central Park avenue. The injured belonging to engine company No. 13 are Edward Banks, 506 North Hamlin avenue; Howard Cook, 7450 North Campbell avenue; Daniel O'Gorman, 8130 South Winchester avenue; Frank J. Beyereau, 5605 Nagle avenue, and John Keehan, 4533 North Troy street.

Of these, the most seriously injured is Kelly, who suffered a fractured spine and two broken ribs. Banks, Cook, and O'Gorman had broken arms and Sullivan's left hip was fractured.

Both the squad and the engine company left their joint headquarters at Lake and Dearborn streets shortly after midnight to answer a fire alarm at Wabash avenue and Jackson boulevard.

Crash at High Speed.

The engine company first went east to State street and then turned south. Meanwhile the truck of the rescue squad was driven south in Dearborn street and then east in Adams. The sirens of both vehicles were sounding as they approached the State-Adams intersection at high speed.

The truck, eastbound, was the merest fraction of a second ahead of the engine as it reached the center of State street, and its rear end caught the brunt of the speed and power of the heavy engine.

Hurled up on the sidewalk at the southeast corner, the truck barely missed crashing into the windows of a clothing store. It then toppled on two wheels and overturned, spilling its entire crew onto the Adams street pavement.

Engine Not Upset.

The fire engine remained upright and those of its force who were unhurt aided in picking up the injured of both units and placing them in taxicabs and passing cars, which transported them to the hospital.

F. Lappin, 4650 South Hamlin avenue, Checker cab driver, and Milton Altheimer, 5333 Dorchester avenue, witnesses, said that it was difficult to understand how any of those on the rescue truck escaped death.

Fireman Carney was driver of the truck. Fireman Jerry Hartsema, who drove the fire engine, was not hurt.

Capt. O'Connor, who was a veteran of the department, resided at 6431 South Campbell avenue. He was married and had two children. He was sitting with the driver and was pinned beneath the wreckage. Apparently he was killed instantly.

Carney a Tribune Hero.

Fireman Carney has been a member of the department for eight and a half years and was awarded THE TRIBUNE'S monthly hero prize of $100 in June of 1932. At the risk of his life he rescued two comrades who had been burned and rendered unconscious by high voltage wires which fell on them as they were fighting a $300,000 blaze in the old Kohlsaat bakery building at 1701-21 South Wabash avenue. In addition to the cash award, Carney received highest praise from Division Fire Marshal Joseph A. Mackey.

Priest Called to Hospital.

Fire department physicians and Father William Gorman, chaplain of the department, were called to St. Luke's to attend the injured.

In another accident three policemen of the Lawndale station were injured yesterday when their car skidded and crashed into a telephone post. They are Joseph Vavra, 2529 South Homan avenue; Fred Young, 63 North Latrobe avenue, and Joseph Bothen, 2251 South Homan avenue.

TWO BOYS KILLED

Two small boys, one in Chicago and one in North Chicago, were killed in automobile accidents yesterday.

Oxygen Fails 60 Miles East of Cleveland

Victory Was Near

New York, March 15.—(AP)—Wiley Post, whose second stratosphere dash across the continent ended today with a forced landing in Cleveland, disclosed tonight he "would have passed out in a few minutes" from lack of oxygen if he had not turned the nose of his fast plane earthward. The oxygen gave out about 100 miles east of Cleveland.

"At that altitude [about 30,000 feet] it doesn't give you much notice," Post said, describing the flight and its hazards. He said temperatures ranged as low as 70 below zero.

The trip from Cleveland to Newark was made in a regular transport plane. Post said he could have flown the route in 55 minutes in his own plane.

"I came down through the clouds and lost a couple of cylinders doing so," said Post as he sat with Frank Phillips, the oil man who backed his flight. He explained that the moisture in the clouds condensed and "threw the machine."

"Do you want to make another attempt?" asked Phillips.

"Just let me try it again," urged Post.

In Newark Post said the highest altitude he reached was 34,000 feet and that his plane seemed to make the best speed at about 33,000 feet.

"I was going 400 miles an hour," he insisted.

Cleveland, O., March 15.—[Special.]—Balked on a second attempt to blaze a cross-country trail through the stratosphere, Wiley Post, round the world flyer, was forced down here late today. He reached a point 60 miles east of Cleveland, then had to turn back and glided down to the airport.

He safely landed his famous plane, the Winnie Mae, at the Cleveland airport at 5:20 p. m. [E. S. T.]. The plane skidded to a safe stop on its belly, its retractable landing gear having been dropped as the ship left the ground at Los Angeles, Cal., at 9:16 a. m. [E. S. T.].

Post was forced to abandon his attempt to break the transcontinental speed record when his supply of oxygen ran too low for him to breathe as he sped through the rarefied air of the upper reaches.

Speed 279 Miles an Hour.

Airport officials said the noted aviator flew the 2,044 miles between Los Angeles and Cleveland in 7 hours and 19 minutes at an average speed of 279.36 miles an hour. He had hoped to make the 2,447 miles from the Pacific coast to New York in 8 hours or less. Airport officials said his average speed was a record for sustained flight.

After passing Cleveland by sixty miles, Post discovered his oxygen supply was dangerously low. He swung back to the airport here and made a "dead stick" landing.

Two cylinders of his engine went dead from the ice that condensed on the induction coils of his motor as he sped downward, but that trouble didn't hamper his landing maneuvers. He had flown most of the trip at an altitude of more than 30,000 feet.

Too Deaf to Talk.

As the aviator climbed smiling from the plane in his pressure suit he was met by Maj. John Berry, superintendent of the airport. Post put off questioners as he hurried away to the airport showers, explaining that he was too deaf to talk until his ears had

SENATE STRIKES OUT PREVAILING WAGE ON WORKS

Reverses Itself by 50 to 38 Vote.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 15.—[Special.]—The senate late today defeated the McCarran prevailing wage amendment to President Roosevelt's five billion dollar work relief bill by a vote of 50 to 38.

The rout of the prevailing wage forces, whose amendment threatened for almost two months to wreck the President's work relief program, came at the close of an all day parade of alibis, led by the professed champions of organized labor who had been induced to switch their votes but nevertheless wanted the record to save their faces.

The defeat of this amendment, which would have increased the cost of putting 3,500,000 men to work by upwards of 2 billion dollars, paved the way for almost certain success of the bill in a form that will be acceptable to the President.

Much Debate to Come.

There still remain, however, many days of debate on other amendments before the bill leaves the senate, for efforts will be made to increase the appropriation to 10 billion dollars, to cut it down to 1 billion 880 million, to pay for it in greenbacks, to finance it in part with increased silver purchases, and to pay the two billion dollar bonus out of it.

Immediately after rejecting the McCarran amendment the senate adopted by a vote of 83 to 2 the administration's so-called compromise submitted by Senator Richard B. Russell [Dem., Ga.]. This provides for the payment of the going wage rate of all permanent buildings constructed in the United States for any government department.

The Russell amendment will not apply to such projects as bridges, canals, grade crossings, etc., nor to construction work carried out by the states and municipalities with grants and loans. It applies only to federal buildings, such as postoffices, courthouses, etc., and this type of construction is not included in the classifications contained in the bill.

Wagner Swings Tide.

Rejection of the McCarran amendment was a foregone conclusion, since Senator Russell had told the senate the day before that his substitute would secure the vote of Senator Robert F. Wagner [Dem., N. Y.], one of the most vehement supporters of the McCarran amendment when the senate three weeks ago adopted it, 44 to 43.

Wagner was expected to carry with him at least half a dozen senators, but when these gentlemen spent the day explaining how they had found a way to support the President without deserting labor the break in the McCarran forces turned into a stampede.

Senator Wagner was the target of withering blasts from the Republican insurgents and such Democrats as stood by their guns throughout the day. The senators made the atmosphere so uncomfortable that he left the chamber shortly after delivering the opening speech and did not return until just before the vote was taken.

Long Attacks "Deserters."

The merciless Huey Long, "kingfish of Louisiana," who had manipulated the original victory for the McCarran forces, led off the assault on the Wagner "deserters" with the story of Moses leading the children of Israel out of the Egyptian bondage.

"There were so many lures and pitfalls along the way," Long said, "that only two of them finally reached the promised land. This senate will at least have as good a record as Moses, for the senator from Nevada [McCarran] and I will stick by it to the end."

Wagner insisted that he had not repudiated the principle of the prevailing wage. But he said the Russell compromise was the only hope of saving the work relief program and then maintained that it will "practically" assure the prevailing rates.

"What is the difference between the McCarran amendment and the Russell amendment?" asked Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho].

"In my candid opinion the only difference is that the President will veto one and he will approve the other," Wagner replied.

Borah Doubts Explanation.

"I don't challenge the motives of senators in casting their votes," said Senator Borah. "The intellectual processes which determine such conclusions

Father Loses Boys' Custody to Ex-Convict

Denver, Colo., March 15.—[Special.]—The friendship and love which bound together two small boys and an ex-convict, with a long record of slayings, safe crackings, and burglaries, proved stronger than the ties of parenthood in an unusual decision handed down in the Juvenile court here today.

The principals in the case were Vernon and Johnny Porter, 11 and 14; John Porter, erstwhile trucker, miner, and day laborer, the boys' father, and Charles D. Smith, alias Pat Smith, alias Larry O'Fallon, many time loser in his quarrels with the law.

Making use of his knowledge of court procedure gleaned from many trials in which he was defendant, "Pat" Smith, acting as his own lawyer, tried to show that he, rather than John Porter, should be the legal guardian and protector of the two youngsters.

Smith Gets His "Pals."

And today, after four days of harrowing questioning and cross-questioning, Smith walked from the courtroom with an arm around each of his "pals." He had won his case. Vernon and Johnny are to remain under his care as guardian until the end of the school term, then the judge was going to see about a permanent arrangement.

Smith filed the case for permanent custody of the boys because, as he expressed it, "fear that the kids might be taken from me some day kept gnawing at me until I couldn't stand it. I just had to know they'd be mine as long—as long as they wanted to be."

Vernon and Johnny were in the front spectator's row, their chins resting on the court railing, when Smith, the man they call "dad," took the stand as his own witness.

Abandoned by Father.

"Your honor," he said, "when these boys came into my life three years ago they were starting just like I started when I was a kid—wrong. Their real father had left them to shift for themselves. They were dirty and hungry and had bad habits. The first thing Johnny did when I took them into my place was steal a quarter out of my pocket.

"I knew where they were headed, judge. I've been there. But we all kinda took to each other and we've helped each other go straight. I haven't done a thing I'm ashamed of since we've been together. You can see the kids for yourself; they're the finest in the world."

He told about the little home where they stayed.

"Nothing fancy, but clean and shipshape." He told about sending the boys to school, their good grades, their evenings together, reading, playing games, boxing, and wrestling.

Bares Own Crime Record.

Smith gave details of his criminal record beginning with a sentence in the Kansas Industrial school when he was 11, and including terms in the Colorado Industrial School and Reformatory for burglary, two terms at Jefferson City, Mo., for manslaughter and a stretch in the Kansas penitentiary for burglary and manslaughter.

Business men, judges, housewives, school authorities, and social workers all testified to his present good character. He told the court he made enough money shining shoes, housecleaning, and doing odd jobs to support the boys.

The boys' father, who is working at a mine in the mountains near Denver, protested the suit. When the decision was given, however, he shook hands with Smith and with tears in his eyes said: "I know they're happy with you, Pat. I'll send you what I can to help take care of them."

Cares for City's Millions, but Can't Keep Own $40

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—Budget Director Rufus E. McGahen, who supervises the expenditure of the city's $553,000,000 budget this year, ruefully reported today that his pocket had been picked of $40 last night.

23 Prisoners in Train Crash; 6 Others Hurt

Rockford, Ill., March 15.—[Special.]—Twenty-three federal prisoners on the way from Chicago to Leavenworth in the personal custody of United States Marshal William H. McDonnell narrowly escaped serious injury or death when the train on which they were riding was derailed near Davis Junction, 15 miles south of here tonight.

The train was the Arrow, crack passenger flyer operating on a twelve hour schedule between Chicago and Omaha on the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad.

Colored Employés Hurt.

The dining car and seven Pullmans left the track when a defective rail broke while the train was passing over it. Six persons, four of them colored employés on the dining car, were injured and taken to Rockford hospitals in ambulances dispatched from here. De Kalb, Sycamore, and Rochelle. The injured passengers are F. Wescott and F. G. Tompsett of Omaha, Neb. Wescott is believed to have suffered a broken back.

The four colored Pullman car employés injured are Walter Thomas, Jack Rhodes, John Bartley, and Houston Spencer, all of Chicago.

Belief was expressed that many lives were saved by the high banks on either side of the tracks, which held up the train and prevented the cars from toppling over.

Had the wreck occurred a hundred yards farther along the derailed cars would in all probability have plunged down a 50 foot embankment into a creek bed, railroad officials said.

Prisoners Not Injured.

Marshal McDonnell reported to his Chicago office by telephone immediately after the wrecking, stating that none of the prisoners or the ten guards with him had been injured outside of minor bruises.

Railroad officials made arrangements for a new train to be sent from Chicago to the scene of the wreck to carry passengers on to their destinations. The marshal planned to take his prisoners on that train.

4 Die, 150 Hurt as Panic Seizes Wedding Parade

AJMER, Rajputana, India, March 15.—(AP)—Four persons were killed and 150 injured in the stampede of a marriage procession today at Rupaheli Thikani, in the state of Udaipur. The guests were thrown into a panic by the premature explosion of fireworks which were to have been used in the course of the wedding ceremony.

WHAT'S A GOOD BOOK TO READ?

To keep in touch with the newest fiction and non-fiction released by America's foremost publishers, read the reviews every Saturday in the enlarged Tribune book section, edited by Fanny Butcher. "Shining and Free," a new novel by G. B. Stern, is the subject of one of the many reviews presented today.

are one of the interesting aspects of human nature. But I wonder whether there is anybody here who believes the President would approve one amendment and veto another without a substantial reason for doing so.

"If there is no difference between these two amendments, we have solved the ancient problem of tweedle dee and tweedle dum. The President is opposed to tweedle dee but he approves tweedle dum. Now that doesn't do credit to the President of the United States."

Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, Senator James F. Byrnes [Dem., S. C.] the President spokesman and Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], chairman of the appropriations committee, spoke with much more candor than Senator Wagner. They frankly admitted that the Russell amendment would permit so-called subsistence wages on soil erosion prevention, reforestation and all types of "made work" projects but insisted that it would not permit the dragging down of industrial wages.

Others Explain Switch.

Besides Senator Wagner, the senators who spoke under the 20 minute debate limitation and "laid the foundation" for switching their votes included La Follette [Rad., Wis.], O'Mahoney [Dem., Wyo.], and Costigan [Dem., Colo.], all of whom participated in conferences with the administration leaders two weeks ago, which ended in the breaking of the deadlock.

Senator Costigan, however, did not go as far as the others. He said he found the Russell amendment acceptable but nevertheless would vote for both measures. At the time he spoke the McCarran amendment had no possible chance of adoption, so he was on safe ground.

Senators Austin and Gibson of Vermont, both Republicans, also were numbered among the switchers. They had been promised tender and solicitious treatment when the flood control money was ready for distribution.

Senator Wagner, it was believed, had an understanding that the administration would look with some degree of tolerance upon his drastic labor disputes bill.

Hastings Assails Substitute.

Senator Hastings [Rep., Del.], who voted for the McCarran amendment both times, presumably in the hope of wrecking the spending program, joined the insurgent Republicans in assailing the substitute. He said the provision giving the President authority to institute the going rate of pay whenever wages in private industry were being depressed, "simply means nothing except that the President has authority to do what he pleases."

Senator Norris [Rad., Neb.], an ardent New Dealer on most occasions, quoted from Wagner's speech on the original vote, saying it was "fundamental that wages seek the lowest levels," that "you cannot pay one wage on one side of the street and another on the other side with any hope of success."

"I agree with that," said Senator Norris. "But I also agree with the President that there is a great difference between these two amendments."

Senator Hiram Johnson [Rad., Cal.] said the difference between the two amendments was "the fundamental principle involved."

"If that is true," he added, "there isn't any cushion that can be given for these gentlemen to fall on."

McCarran Taunts Colleagues.

Senator McCarran taunted his colleagues for deserting him "because somebody says you can't vote that way."

"Isn't this a democracy? Aren't we responsible to the people who put us here?" he asked. "Are we going to say to those people, 'We can't vote for you, for the President will veto it.'"

The roll call was a prosaic affair compared to the first one, when the "ayes" and "nays" ran in a continuous tie and Huey Long was all over the floor engineering pairs that decided the final and winning vote. Today Long sat dejected, while a glow of deep satisfaction illumined the faces of Senators Robinson and Byrnes.

LOUIS M. HOWE, WHITE HOUSE AID, SERIOUSLY ILL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 15.—[Special.]—Col. Louis McHenry Howe, secretary and close personal friend of President Roosevelt, is seriously ill at the White House, it was announced today. Howe, who is under the care of the President's physician, Dr. Ross T. McIntire, was in a critical condition Tuesday and Wednesday, but has since shown some improvement, it was stated.

Howe, who has not been in good health for several years, has been confined to his bed suffering from a bronchial disorder complicated by a cardiac weakness since he accompanied the President to Boston recently. Dr. McIntire said the secretary overtaxed his strength in making the trip.

Howe is 64 years old and has been associated with the President since 1910 when the latter first went to the New York legislature. Because of their long association the President and Mrs. Roosevelt are concerned about the illness. Mrs. Roosevelt canceled a speaking engagement in Boston tomorrow to remain near Howe.

Child Falls from 3d Floor and Lands Unhurt in Mud

George Cook, 4 years old, 6230 Kenwood avenue, fell from the porch of his third floor home yesterday and landed, apparently unhurt, in the soft mud of the back yard. According to his mother, Mrs. Leona Cook, the boy leaned against the porch railing, which gave way.

Evanston's Civil Service Secretary Is Suspended

John A. Kappelman, for the last eight years secretary and chief examiner of the Evanston civil service commission, has been suspended for thirty days without pay, it was announced last night by Russell Whitman, president of the commission. Kappelman, an insurance agent, was charged with "improperly soliciting" Franklin M. Kreml of the police department to purchase insurance from him, just before Kreml, a sergeant, was to take an examination for a lieutenant's post.

AAA SHOWDOWN ON NEW POWERS DUE IN CONGRESS

Wallace Demands Rule Over Processors.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 15.—[Special.]—While congress is debating how much of the tottering NRA is worth saving the lawmakers are being called upon to decide the fate of another major institution of the New Deal—the Agricultural Adjustment administration.

The farm organizations, backed by the AAA, are at war with the packers, millers, canners and other food processors over pending amendments to the agricultural adjustment act which, if adopted by congress, would enable the President through the secretary of agriculture to impose complete regimentation upon producers, processors, middlemen, wholesale and retail dealers and all other handlers of foodstuffs.

Demanded by Wallace.

According to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace the amendments are necessary to whip recalcitrant processors into line and otherwise to enforce the program of increasing returns to the farmer by limitation of production. According to the processors the amendments would make the secretary of agriculture the dictator not only of agriculture but of a large part of industry and trade.

Under the act as it now stands Mr. Wallace holds that he possesses the power to control a processing industry through a system of licenses to do business when a majority of the processors agrees to such regimentation. Under the proposed amendments he would have the power to impose licenses even when a majority of the processors is opposed to such action.

Regardless of their attitude, "processors, associations of producers, and others engaged in handling any agricultural commodity" could be placed under license for the purpose of eliminating unfair practices or charges that are deemed by the secretary to tend to defeat the purpose of the act. Subject to court review the interpretation of "unfair practices and charges" devolves upon the secretary of agriculture.

Big Companies in Command.

The secretary would have the licensing power to make effective any marketing agreement signed by the handlers of not less than 50 per cent of the volume of business involved. It has been pointed out that under this provision a small number of big packers, millers, or other producers handling more than 50 per cent of the product would be enabled to impose their will upon an entire industry.

Under another amendment the secretary could bring an entire industry under license control against the will of the overwhelming majority of the unit involved merely by causing a marketing agreement to be proposed and holding a hearing thereon.

"Even though the marketing agreement were to be rejected overwhelmingly by the industry the secretary could impose licenses by determining, with the approval of the President, 'that the refusal or failure to sign such proposed agreement by the persons handling more than 50 per centum of the volume of business' involved 'tends to prevent the effectuation of the declared policy with respect to the commodity or product covered by such proposed agreement.'"

The secretary furthermore would be empowered to invoke the license system of control of processors if he should deem such recourse "the only practical means of advancing the interests of the producers of such commodity pursuant to the declared policy" of the act.

Having imposed licenses on the processors the secretary would be enabled to dictate their methods of doing business, the prices they pay producers, and the prices they charge consumers, their expenditures for salaries, wages, business promotion, advertising, and other details.

In the hearings before the senate and house committees on agriculture the processors contended that the secretary would have power to determine the conditions under which products could be purchased from the farmers, the price to be paid and the quantity to be purchased. He could forbid processors to buy from farmers who had refused to sign crop limitation and other agreements with the AAA.

In this connection it was pointed out that the government already has coerced farmers by refusing to buy their drouth stricken cattle or to make crop and seed loans till they signed up to accept AAA regimentation for several years to come.

The secretary also would be authorized to examine all books and correspondence of the licensees and of all persons connected therewith. He could even examine the private correspondence, books, and other investment records of any officer of a licensed concern. By examining the books the secretary could determine whether in his opinion the industry might pay higher prices to the farmers through elimination of certain expenses or reduction of profits.

Another amendment provides that benefit payments may be made to the farmers in kind. Thus corn-hog contracts could be liquidated in cotton and cotton planters could be paid in corn or wheat.

Both Secretary Wallace and Chester C. Davis, head of the AAA, argued before the committees that the amendments confer no greater power than the act as it now stands.

Davis Gives Explanation.

"Just as it is essential to provide that marketing agreements can be supported by licenses, so it is equally vital that the reserve authority be available to issue licenses even though a majority of processors or handlers do not sign an agreement," said Mr. Davis. "Otherwise a group of handlers would be able to dictate the terms on which any marketing plan needed by farmers could be placed in operation, or even veto such a plan altogether."

"Our experience with marketing agreements and licenses has shown that a great many processors and distributors are agreeable to coöperating in marketing plans intended to help producers," said Mr. Wallace. "To carry out these marketing plans it is not necessary and there is no intent to regulate the activities of large number of processors and handlers."

ROOSEVELT SITS UP LATE TO MAKE OUT INCOME TAX BLANK

Washington, D. C., March 15.—(AP)—Suppressing a yawn at his press conference, President Roosevelt today explained that he had sat up late last night to finish making out his income tax blank.

The presidential blank had attached to it a pink slip which will be open to public inspection unless congress repeals that section of the law. A bill to repeal it is pending in the senate and Senator Royal Copeland [Dem., N. Y.] predicted today that it would be passed there. The house has already approved.

3 ASSASSINS SLAIN TRYING TO KILL ARABIAN KING

Attack Ruler and Son with Knives in Mosque.

MECCA, Saudi Arabia, March 15.—(AP)—Three thugs stealing into ancient Mecca's most famous mosque were shot down and killed today as they attempted to assassinate tall, bearded Ibn Saud, "warrior king" of Saudi Arabia.

The assailants, identified as natives of Yemen, launched their sudden, daring attack as Ibn Saud and his son, the crown prince, Emir Saud, joined 200,000 pilgrims in celebration of the sacred Mohammedan "feast of sacrifice."

The king's armed bodyguard shot two of the would-be killers before they reached the spot where he stood. Emir Saud himself grappled with the third, staying his knife until pistol shots stretched him lifeless.

Fall Near Sacred Throne.

The three fell close to the sacred black throne, an object of especial reverence to every Mohammedan making the pilgrimage to Mecca, which followers of Islam believe the Angel Gabriel gave to Abraham.

An official announcement said:

"It has now been proved that the would-be assassins were Zeidis [presumably residents of the Zeidi river area in Trans-Jordan] from Yemen. Investigations are proceeding to ascertain their motive and find out whether they had any accomplices."

Last year Ibn Saud defeated the Imam Yahya of Yemen in warfare started by border disputes, capturing the port of Hodeidah and other Yemen territory. A treaty concluded last May 13 ended the war. The Imam Yahya accepted Ibn Saud's peace conditions.

Ruler "Laughs It Off."

The eed al-adha [feast of sacrifice] has as its highlight the ceremony that Ibn Saud, who follows his Mohammedan creed strictly, was performing at the time of the attack.

Seven encirclements of the Kaaba, the nearly cubical stone building built in 1626 to reproduce the temple of Mohammed's time, which contains the sacred stone, conclude the ceremony of sacrifice. The king and crown prince were making the fourth encirclement when the assailants rushed forward.

Afterward, the official announcement said, Ibn Saud and the Emir Saud completed the circuits of the Kaaba, entered, kissed the stone and returned to the palace "as if nothing had happened."

A picturesque figure in his flowing Arabian headdress, the 55 year old monarch, sometimes called the "Cromwell of the Hedjaz" for the fearlessness and hard handedness of his rule, stands 6 feet 4 inches. His beard is coal black and he wears glasses.

BRUNO HAUPTMANN BIDS TRIO FAREWELL AS THEY GO TO CHAIR

Trenton, N. J., March 15.—(AP)—Three men died in the electric chair at Trenton state prison tonight after receiving a handshake and a word of encouragement from Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Each paused briefly at Hauptmann's cell on his way to the "little green door." Hauptmann, a prison official said, looked silently into each face, grasped each hand, and said:

"Pray to God."

Then Michael Mule, 24; Connie Scarpone, 28, and George De Stefano Jr., passed on to pay with their lives for the slaying of John Szczytakowski, 37, of Trenton.

Scarpone, first to go, smilingly made a statement in which he attempted to involve a fourth man in the crime. As the mask was slipped over his face he smiled again and settled down in the chair.

"I'll go like a man," he said.

Both Mule, the next to go, and De Stefano, were silent. The three executions took less than 20 minutes in all.

MAYOR IN BOOTS PUTS HOMEWOOD FLOOD TO ROUT

Some sort of flood control for the village of Homewood seemed in order last night after a 14 inch water main, part of a $50,000 PWA project, burst and inundated a portion of the town with 150,000 gallons of water.

Two tanks, the 80,000 gallon tank of the town itself and a 40,000 gallon tank supplying the nearby Ravisloe Country club, were drained, and pressure in the faucets of the town went down almost to zero.

Aid came in the form of Mayor Joseph Schwarz, who is versed in the operation of water systems. He donned hip boots and overalls, conscripted help, and splashed about, turning off valves to stop the leakage and eventually rerouting the water through supplementary pipes until service was restored.

The main which burst is some 5 feet underground, and its bursting was heralded by a geyser of water and mud shooting many feet into the air. The break occurred within a block of the business district, and vacant lots, highways and basements were flooded. The cause of the break was not determined.

DEPUTY SHERIFS COLLECT $94,000 DUE SINCE 1933

One hundred past and present deputy sheriffs who in 1933 worked as county highway policemen without pay for half a year because the county board had failed to appropriate their salaries as an economy measure were paid a total of $94,000 yesterday. Herbert H. Burns, chief of the highway police, handed out the checks yesterday. The money was appropriated by the county board in its 1935 budget as the result of a mandamus order upheld by the Illinois Appellate court.

SPRING IN MANY FORMS PLAYS A ONE DAY STAND

Temperature Sets Record at 72 Degrees.

It was only for a one day stand, but spring sifted blithely into Chicago yesterday on strong south and southwest winds.

The highest temperature, 72.2 at 2:30 p. m., made the day not only the warmest March 15 in official weather history but also the warmest the city has ever known so early in the year. Previously the highest reading for the date was 68 in 1921, while the champion early season temperature was 71 on March 8, 1879.

Cloudy, Much Colder Today.

Forecaster W. P. Day said that it would be cloudy and much colder, probably with rain, today, and that it would be fair and moderately cold tomorrow, with an indicated minimum near the freezing point.

Observers said that yesterday's early incursion of spring had been taken seriously by Mother Nature and that buds were swelling, bees taking to the wing and migrating birds moving in rapidly from the southland.

In Oak Park tulips stood from 4 to 5 inches high, and with more warm weather will be in bloom in a week or ten days, said Gustave A. Lindberg, superintendent of the park district there. He issued a warning to optimistic amateur gardeners, however, ever, not to yield to their enthusiasm over spring and uncover their tulips now.

Bees Find Pussy Willows.

A plentiful supply of pussy willows are in bloom in Homewood, bees found on one of their first exploring flights of the season, reported P. C. Keller. He has 25,000 bees, all of which took to the air and limbered up during the day.

Elsewhere in Homewood robins, an occasional cardinal and bluebirds were seen, and tulips and daffodils were showing their dark green spikes. Iris and violets were showing green, and chrysanthemums sprouting. Most certain sign of spring—a few Homewoodites were seen with their pocketknives open, harvesting the first dandelion greens.

Even the north shore gave evidence that it had felt the touch of spring. Desk Sergeant Frank Whalen of Lake Forest looked dreamily out of a window in the station and spoke of the pussy willows in bloom in his yard, while Chief of Police Frank Tiffany became poetic over the meadow larks he had seen in the morning.

Robins Disturb Sleep in Suburbs.

Harold D. Kelsey of Barrington, president of the Lake county board of supervisors, awoke out of a sound sleep at 6 a. m. because four robins were passing the time of day on his front lawn, he said. Chief of Police William F. Helke of Glencoe bettered him by reporting five robins.

In Evanston a survey of neighborhoods sheltered from the lake revealed the presence of meadow larks and cardinals, according to residents. They added loftily that they had had robins there all winter. Two crocuses which had pushed their way out of the ground were found in northwest Evanston, and lots of violets were up. Ten children in Evanston succumbed to spring wanderlust yesterday and were reported lost to the police. All were found.

Chicago was not far behind the suburbs in a spring showing. A tour along Lake Shore drive and through Lincoln park revealed that grass was greening nicely and lilacs swelling. Nursemaids walked bareheaded behind perambulators.

Even a Doorman Is Affected.

A doorman in fancy regalia standing before a formal entrance on Lake Shore drive pushed back his top hat and stretched leisurely, then quickly resumed his correct posture. A policeman cocked one foot on a park bench, bent forward and addressed a girl in a gay sweater with hair flying in the breeze. A girl in socks walked with her young lover's arm around her waist and stood watching baby ducks swimming behind their mammas in a park lagoon where only a patch of thin ice remained.

Ragged men sunned themselves on park benches. A couple sat munching sandwiches, his arm around her shoulders. A woman with frayed blonde hair and paint which failed to hide the wrinkles in her cheeks daydreamed on a park bench. A group of boys in green and white trunks and white sweaters practiced hocky on a field in the park.

Bock Beer Season Arrives.

It was announced that the bock beer season began yesterday. The beer will be distributed by breweries for three weeks, the correct bock beer season, according to the Wahl-Henius institute.

Meanwhile August Koch, chief horticulturist of the Chicago park district, was feeling cheerful because park flowers and shrubs were not showing too many signs of spring. If they take their time about budding, a late frost is less of a menace.

The Missouri flowering currant, the buckeye, the bush honeysuckle and especially the lilacs, are bursting into green, and the hawthorn and buckthorn are only a trifle behind them in budding, Mr. Koch found. The forsythia, the spring's first flower, is swelling, but Mr. Koch learned the buds suffered from cold weather and are black within. The tips of daffodils and narcissus are out of the ground, hyacinths are up, and pussy willows are in full bloom in sheltered spots, he said.

A good year for the growth of trees, shrubs, flowers and grass is expected by Mr. Koch, who said that the ground is soaked to a depth of 6 feet. The weather bureau reported that precipitation since Jan. 1 was 5.22 inches, in contrast to 1.73 inches for the period in 1934. Conditions indicate heavy crops in the eastern and southern parts of the corn belt, according to precipitation records. Weather bureau officials said the latest killing frost last year was on April 13, 1934. A killing frost has occurred as late as May 23, in 1917.

The bird colony in the Chicago area has been augmented recently by arrival of the bronze grackle, meadowlark, killdeer, robin, brown creeper, bluebird, fox sparrow, white throated sparrow and song sparrow, said Earl G. Wright, ornithologist of the Chicago Academy of Sciences. He has seen specimens of all of these in the last few days.

Children Enjoy Skating as City Gets Touch of Spring

Ex-Convict Arrested as He Hunts for a Suit That Fits

Joseph Gurczewski, 38 years old, 1048 West 32d street, an ex-convict, was arrested early yesterday after he smashed a window in the clothing store at 11258 Michigan avenue and tarried long enough to try to find a suit in the display that fitted him.

NIGHT CLUB GIRL REBUKED; DRYDEN FREE IN 'DUNKING'

Contempt Action Dropped When She Explains.

A second charge of assault and battery against George Eastman Dryden, grandnephew of the late George Eastman, camera manufacturer, was dismissed yesterday by Municipal Judge Joseph H. McGarry. The complaint arose out of an early morning party Jan. 15 in Dryden's apartment at 815 Rush street, during which a night club hostess was given an involuntary bath. On Feb. 8 Dryden was found not guilty of the assault charge made by Miss Vera Read, 21 years old, the hostess, who was "dunked" in the tub.

The complainant in the case yesterday was Vera Read's sister, Hazel, 24 years old, who charged that Dryden struck her when she went to Vera's aid.

Hazel Fails to Appear.

When the case was called, Dryden, who is 34 years old, was in court with his attorneys, who announced that he was ready for trial. Hazel, however, was not present, and a long wait ensued. When it became apparent that she did not intend to appear, Judge McGarry ordered her summoned from her home, 808 Junior terrace.

When Miss Read finally did appear, after the court had been at a standstill for more than two hours, she announced she did not wish to prosecute. Judge McGarry immediately ordered Assistant State's Attorney John C. Connery to prepare a contempt of court citation, but relented when the prosecutor and David Branower, Miss Read's attorney, explained that she had understood the case was to be dismissed and did not realize it was necessary that she be present.

Then Hazel explained to the judge: "My sister's case was a stronger one, and when Mr. Dryden was found not guilty on her charge I was not anxious to press my action."

Lectured by Judge.

"You failed to show respect and courtesy for the court by your absence," the judge told her, "and you did not cooperate with the state, whose witness you are. You accused Dryden of a crime and then would not come here to give him a chance to defend himself until I ordered you to do so. I intended to hold you in contempt, but will abide by the explanations of your attorney and the prosecutor."

Vera Read testified at the first trial that she and her sister were hostesses at the Club Alabam, 747 Rush street, when Dryden invited them to his apartment. She said she rejected his advances at the apartment and he fought with her, finally flinging her with all her clothes on into a tub of boiling water.

Dryden denied that he had attempted to attack Vera. He said she was intoxicated, which led to his suggesting the bath. The water was not hot, and Hazel aided in getting her sister in the tub, he asserted.

SIXTY-MILE WINDS AND DUST STORMS HIT FOUR WESTERN STATES

Denver, Col., March 15.—(AP)—March winds lifted a great storm of dust from the parched fields of four states today, tore at flimsy buildings and disrupted plowing and planting.

The silt swept across wide areas in Colorado, Nebraska, Wyoming and Kansas while snow fell along the Montana-Wyoming border and snow and rain brought welcome moisture to the ranges of southern Montana.

The pilot of a plane between Cheyenne, Wyoming, and Denver reported gusts of dust at altitudes as high as 11,000 feet. Winds reached 60 miles an hour at some points.

A building at a transient camp near Florence, Col., was blown down. At the Bald coal camp the powder house was smashed and explosives were scattered, but did not ignite. Two chimneys crashed through a skylight at the state prison at Canon City, Col., but discipline was maintained among the convicts. Some show windows were wrecked at Scottsbluff, Neb.

Snow and sleet spread along the line of the Union Pacific in Wyoming and half a foot of snow threatened to block highways near Sheridan, Wyo.

Sheridan has basked in a temperature of 75 only yesterday. High temperatures prevailed over most of the area. It was 83 at Sioux City, Ia., 72 at Kansas City and 56 at Dodge City, Kas., today.

LACK OF OXYGEN FOILS POST ON UPPER AIR HOP

Lands at Cleveland, Short of New York Goal.

Later, before leaving for Newark on a transport plane, Post declined to give details of his flight today or to say whether he planned to make another attempt to span the country in the stratosphere.

Post's failure today was the second time the one-eyed Oklahoman had fallen short of his goal in recent efforts to span the country by traveling through the less restricted regions of the upper air at a speed of around 350 miles an hour, nearly six miles a minute.

Fails on Second Attempt.

His first stratosphere attempt several weeks ago ended suddenly when he had to set his motor troubled ship down on the Mojave desert less than an hour away from his start at Los Angeles.

He subsequently charged that "some one" had placed a foreign substance —steel filings or emery dust—in the engine of his plane. While he did not elaborate on this allegation, it was said that United States aeronautical officials at Los Angeles had started an investigation.

His takeoff today had previously been canceled because of unfavorable weather conditions. However, toward dawn a heavy fog from the Pacific ocean rolled off the Burbank, Cal., terminal and reports from other points along the route were sufficiently satisfactory to indicate no trouble from that source.

Drops Landing Gear Safely.

Post climbed into his 16 pound "stratosphere suit," specially designed for his flight, and sped away. His takeoff was without mishap and the landing gear was dropped midway down the runway to lighten the ship.

The flyer headed due east, pointing the nose of his ship at an abrupt upward angle to gain as quickly as possible the strata he sought for his cruising altitude. He had planned to fly at a height of between 33,000 and 40,000 feet.

Because of this extreme height the progress of his flight was not known until his landing here. His radio equipment had no sending apparatus.

Hoped to Set Record.

Though Post had been hopeful of breaking the transcontinental speed record of 10 hours and 2 minutes now held by Col. Roscoe Turner, he had previously explained that his flight was not primarily a speed dash.

His major purpose, he said, was to demonstrate the feasibility of passenger air travel at faster speed through the upper regions of the sky. Because of its thin, low resistant air he had believed the stratosphere an ideal medium for superspeed "up above the weather" over both land and ocean.

The flyer's pressure suit and accouterment, which apparently failed him and forced him to come to earth here, had been designed under his direction for flying in the lighter air regions.

It was necessitated by stratosphere temperatures of around 60 degrees below zero Fahrenheit and an air pressure of only about one-third the sea level normal of 14.7 pounds to the square inch.

In such thin air he could not breathe long if the suit and its attached oxygen tank failed him for the hypopressure would cause his nose, ears and possibly his eyes to bleed. A generator in the cabin of his plane feeds his helmet with oxygen under pressure.

When he is in this unique costume, Post resembles a deep sea diver or a person from another planet. He unwittingly achieved this latter effect when he was forced down on Feb. 22 on his first stratosphere attempt.

A desert gold prospector, working with his head under the hood of his stalled automobile, did not hear Post's silent plane glide down on the desert near him. Post got out of the plane and approached the man, who was still unaware of his presence.

Unable to make his voice heard through his sealed helmet, Post gave the man his first intimation that other humanity was within miles of him by tapping the prospector on the shoulder. Post said the greatly frightened man fled in terror, but finally returned and explained he had first thought the aviator was a "man from the moon."

ARMY AVIATOR WINS MACKAY TROPHY FOR 2D TIME SINCE 1912

Washington, D. C., March 15.—[Special.]—The young army aviator who, as a second lieutenant in the air pioneering days of 1912 won the Mackay trophy for a "daring" flight from College Park to Washington and return, which required 41 minutes and "completely exhausted" him, today was named winner again of the same trophy. This time it was for leadership and conduct in directing a mass flight from Washington to Alaska and return.

He is now Brig. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commander of the west coast wing of the general headquarters air force. The planes he led on the mass flight last year flew 9,290 miles. The flyers, while in Alaska, mapped 20,800 square miles of Alaskan country for the army air corps.

The huge bombing planes of the expedition were capable of a speed exceeding 200 miles an hour, and could remain aloft more than 1,000 miles on a normal military expedition.

In 1912, the "contraption" Arnold flew was limited to 40 miles an hour, and seldom flew that fast. One of the first military airplanes built by the Wright brothers, it had a 40 horse power engine which whirled two propellers through a series of sprockets, and chains similar to those of early bicycles.

INVENTOR CLAIMS NEW AUTOGIRO HOPS VERTICALLY

Cierva Says It "Jumps" 30 Feet Into Air.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 15.—A straight-up-in-the-air takeoff without any forward run now can be made by autogiros, Juan de la Cierva, their inventor, told the Royal Aeronautical society tonight.

The inventor of the "flying windmill" said that his new autogiro jumps 30 feet into the air in a straight line. The secret of the new machine is the use of the helicopter principle —horizontal propellers, or rotating "butter paddles," driven by a motor —and the flattening out of slant rotor blades, so that when geared to the motor they turn at high speed. When the rotors are going full speed, Cierva said, the slant blades suddenly are shifted back to normal and the machine springs vertically into the air for 30 feet.

When the autogiro is that high the rotors are disconnected from the motor by the clutch and the ordinary propellor pulls them forward.

The principle of the helicopter, Cierva said, is used only for the takeoff. Once in the air, he declared, the autogiro's rotors are not turned by the engine, but by the rush of the wind from the ordinary propeller at 200 revolutions a minute. No new controls are needed to alter the slant rotor blades, which are the biggest secret of the new autogiro, as the changes are made automatically when a certain speed is reached.

It is expected the new autogiro, which has been successfully tested in the last five months, will prove an important development by making takeoffs easier in the event of forced landings.

U. S. SEIZES 1,900 IN CRIME DRIVE; 154 TAKEN HERE

Property Worth Millions Confiscated.

Chicago was one of the scenes yesterday of a national crime drive by federal law enforcing agencies. More than 1,900 arrests were made throughout the country and stills, alcohol, narcotics, and counterfeit money with a value of millions of dollars were seized.

Participating in the drive were 9,000 coast guards, 1,700 members of the alcohol tax unit, 300 narcotic agents, 240 secret service men, 152 operatives of the intelligence unit of the bureau of internal revenue, and 125 customs workers—more than 11,500 in all.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau explained in Washington that the campaign was designed and carried out for two primary reasons: to test the efficacy of the method and to aid in the collection of taxes, which would be defeated by smuggling or by bootlegging of liquor and drugs.

Police Aid United States Squads.

In Chicago the government agents were aided by squads of police from all districts in the city. Late last night it was reported 154 persons had been taken in the roundup here.

The alcohol tax unit, in charge of E. C. Yellowley, seized 60 stills, most of them small, with an aggregate capacity of 8,095 gallons of alcohol daily, 18,870 gallons of liquor, and destroyed 67,620 gallons of mash. Inspections of retail liquor establishments, Mr. Yellowley reported, disclosed 405 violations of law and resulted in the payment of $6,184 in delinquent taxes. Arrests made by the alcohol unit were 92 and property destroyed was figured as being worth more than $15,000.

Seize Dope Peddlers.

Narcotic agents arrested 53 persons in the city and 8 others downstate. All are known as dope peddlers or addicts. Secret service agents seized Mrs. Bertha Evans, 33 years old, 1313 Roosevelt road, widow of a slain gangster, and reported that she had $100 counterfeit bills in her possession.

Anthony Czarnecki, collector of customs, announced that his men had seized 984 packets of sweepstakes lottery tickets with a sale value of more than $1,000,000 and a quantity of obscene literature. The customs men made no arrests.

All over the country, it was said, results were similar. In Baltimore, where the coast guardsmen captured some smugglers, it was estimated the goods seized, including silks and tapestries, would be worth more than $1,000,000.

Raid Plant Near Sing Sing.

More than sixty arrests were made in New York. A completely equipped counterfeiting plant at Ossining, near the Sing Sing prison, was broken up. Numerous stills were smashed and a large amount of alcohol seized.

In San Francisco and San José, Cal., four counterfeiters who are alleged to have passed many thousands of dollars in spurious bills and silver were arrested. A Japanese ship at San Francisco was raided and opium and morphine seized.

San Antonio, Tex., was another of the main sectors of the drive. There 143 arrests were made and numerous seizures of contraband were reported. Agents at Detroit seized a cabin cruiser and eight automobiles on the ground their owners used them in evading customs duties.

Arrests in Midwest.

Forty-four arrests were made in Minnesota, sixty-two in Iowa, twenty-six in Nebraska, eleven in North Dakota and five in South Dakota. Eight Chinese were arrested in St. Paul as narcotic law violators. At Kansas City, Mo., fifty-one were taken into custody as narcotic law violators.

Assistant United States Attorney William T. McCarthy, at Boston, declared that dope sellers had been notified from a source in the federal building there that raids would be made today. To determine the source of the warning he demanded that telephone records showing who made calls to opium dens be produced before a United States commissioner.

Deep secrecy was maintained about the concerted campaign while investigations were being made. This required several weeks. The first activity was in Washington, D. C., where all the members of a ring of dope sellers were arrested early in the morning.

GETS JAIL TERM

WILLIAM SCHUMACHER.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

William Schumacher, convicted of defrauding the Illinois Emergency Relief commission of $895 by posing as an indigent while he and his family were earning $3,065, was sentenced to 30 days in the Bridewell yesterday by Judge Justin F. McCarthy in the Shakespeare avenue court. The court ruled that Schumacher will also have to serve out a fine of $100 which he said he was unable to pay.

Ald. Matt Porten [34th], who appeared at previous hearings of the case to seek leniency for Schumacher, was not present in court yesterday. Schumacher and four members of his family, who live at 2624 Homer street, were on the relief rolls from November, 1931, to July, 1933.

Relief officials said they would proceed in an effort to collect the $895 from Schumacher as soon as he is released from the Bridewell.

3 EX-POLICEMEN DENY ACCEPTING HIJACK BRIBES

Three former highway policemen, charged with forcing bribes from Randolph street commission merchants, took the stand yesterday in their trial before Judge Donald S. McKinlay and denied their guilt.

The trio, Joseph Cantella, Samuel Lucas and Angelo Borello, likewise asserted they had not signed documents in the hands of the state's attorney that were described as "partial confessions." These statements were not admitted as evidence.

It is alleged that the three ex-policemen took $3,800 from John Kliner, 939 West Randolph street, and $1,000 from Joseph Levin, 716 West Randolph street, as bribes. The money was paid, according to the two merchants, when the highway policemen learned they had purchased 17,000 pounds of hijacked butter in Detroit. Cantella declared that he was at a funeral on the day the bribe was said to have been passed. His testimony on this point was supported by Lucas and Borello, who said they were with him.

It is expected that the case will go to the jury about noon today.

MAYOR APPROVES BAR SOLUTION OF JUDGESHIP VOTE

Mayor Kelly yesterday gave his approval to the solution of the judicial election problem proposed by the Chicago Bar association. The plan would save $350,000 by eliminating an election now scheduled for 1937 at which just one judge of the Superior court is to be elected.

The term of Superior Judge Harry A. Lewis expires in 1937 and the elimination of biennial elections of aldermen leaves this judgeship the only place to be filled. The Bar association proposal is to let that judgeship lapse at the expiration of the term and to have the legislature create an additional Superior court judgeship to be filled by election in June 1935.

The association also has approved the mayor's suggestion to advance to next June the election of 24 Superior judges now scheduled for next November.

FRENCH CHAMBER DOUBLES TERM OF ARMY SERVICE

Reason Given for Action Is German Rearmament.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 16.—[Saturday.]—Frank admissions that the treaty of Versailles is a dead letter and that Europe for all practical purposes is back to 1913 marked a ten hour debate in the chamber of deputies last night and early today on military effectives. The chamber early this morning voted the government a free hand to counter the menace of German rearmament by raising the term of compulsory army service in France from one to two years.

Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin did not ask for an organic change in the law of 1928, which set the term of military service at one year, but merely for a vote of confidence on his announced intention to use the power conferred upon the government under an emergency clause in the law to keep conscripts under arms an extra year if necessary.

Socialists Fight Proposal.

Although the deputies eventually gave Flandin the vote of confidence for which he asked by 354 to 210, the reluctance of the left wingers to assume any responsibility for the unpopular two year service was evident and the Socialists rallied a strong minority against the motion. Clear evidence of the temper of the chamber was shown when it rejected an amendment making immediate application of the two year term imperative by 530 votes to 44.

The cass called to the colors in the next few months will be kept altogether eighteen months, Flandin explained. Starting next October and until 1940 each class will serve two years. At the same time the premier announced that the age at which conscrips will be called to the colors would be reduced from 21 to 20 and that volunteers would be sought for France's professional army which Flandin admitted now totals 103,000.

This formula saves the face of the Radical Socialist party, which is nominally hostile to the increased service, by making the two year term appear as an emergency measure which will be abolished after the "lean years" caused by the low birth rate during the war are over, but few serious observers have any illusions about this.

Debate Recalls Pre-War Days.

The debate bristled with tocsinlike declarations reminiscent of similar debates in European parliaments on the eve of the great war. Most restrained, but also most serious, were Flandin's own statements, of which the following excerpt gives the tone:

"At a moment when the effectives of the German army are substantially augmented by a unilateral decision to which neither the French nor British governments can acquiesce, France cannot agree to let its effectives fall below what they were in 1928, when German armaments were officially within their treaty limits."

Deny Charges of Lobbyist Linking Senators and Reds

Washington, D. C., March 15.—(AP)—Denials tonight greeted charges of William B. Shearer, big navy lobbyist, that nine present or former senators had communistic affiliations.

A letter Shearer had written in 1929 was produced today before the senate munitions committee, saying of fourteen who had voted against a cruiser appropriation, nine were so listed by the justice department.

The fourteen included Secretary Claude E. Swanson, the late Senator Robert M. La Follette, and of present members, Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona, Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, Lynn D. Frazier of North Dakota, Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, George W. Norris of Nebraska, and Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota.

"We have no record on communists in the department of justice," a high official said. "It is no crime to be a communist. There is nothing in the federal statutes to prohibit it. Even if such a list were here—and it is not—it would not be made available to Shearer."

Included among questions confronting Shearer as he took the stand were charges that he broke up the 1927 Geneva naval limitation conference, that he threatened death and scandal to big American ship builders, and his assertion that he was in large part responsible for congressional appropriations for cruisers.

Shearer stormed when a senator used the word "cowardly" in connection with his activities.

Denies Death Threat.

Shearer denied he had threatened S. W. Wakeman, vice president of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation, during an altercation with Clinton L. Bardo, president of the New York Shipbuilding corporation.

The story of the death threat was contained in reports of a four year old investigation of Shearer's activities at the Geneva arms conference.

"I charge the department of justice with trying to frame me," he declared. "I would not threaten to kill anybody who owed me money."

Committee members closed the session today without asking him to designate the nine present or former senators he said had communist affiliations.

Others on "Red" List.

Others on the list of fourteen were the late Senator Kendrick of Wyoming, the late Senator Howell of Nebraska, the late Senator Ralston of Indiana, former Senator C. C. Dill of Washington, former Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, and former Senator Magnus Johnson of Minnesota.

The letter dated March 27, 1929, was sent by Shearer to Homer L. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock company. It asked compensation for Shearer's services, drawing attention to difficulties encountered in obtaining an appropriation for cruisers.

"Twelve senators [the correct number later was found to be 14] only opposed the bill, of which nine are recorded in the department of justice records with past affiliations with the communist party," Shearer wrote.

"Who are these senators?" demanded Senator Henry T. Bone [Dem., Wash.]. Shearer pointed to a book entitled "Reds in America." Under the names of the 14 senators listed was the notation that they were "endorsed by the conference for progressive political action."

ITALY PROPOSES "ENTENTE" WITH OLD FOE, SERBIA

Envoy Asks Political, Economic Pact.

ROME, March 15.—(AP)—A lasting political and economic entente between Italy and Jugo-Slavia may grow out of Italo-Jugo-Slav negotiations started in Belgrade today, official circles said tonight.

The discussions got under way after the new Italian minister to Jugo-Slavia presented his credentials to Prince Paul, regent of the Slav kingdom. Count Viola di Campalto, the minister, said in his presentation address:

"I am expressly charged by my government to declare that my activity will be directed toward realizing a positive rapprochement between our two nations.

"No Unfriendly Sentiment."

"They authorize me to repeat that Italy cherishes only friendly sentiment toward Jugo-Slavia and has no intention of disturbing its development and territorial integrity.

"On the contrary, it proposes to develop all the possibilities existing for the purpose of arriving at cordial and concrete collaboration and at an entente in the political and economic field."

To those declarations, regarded from as highly significant in view of the long standing Italo-Jugo-Slav friction, Prince Paul replied that Italy's intention toward an entente in the political field meets with all sympathy in the Jugo-Slav government, which wants to "promote the consolidation of peace."

Seen as Border Guarantee.

The Italian envoy's statement that Italy had no intention of disturbing the development and territorial integrity of the Slav kingdom was termed highly important.

Observers took it to mean that Italy has abandoned any claim to Jugo-Slav territory, such as Dalmatia, and renounced any intention of interfering in any part of Jugo-Slavia, such as the province of Croatia.

PACIFISTS ASSAIL BRITISH 'PREPARE FOR WAR' POLICY

Cabinet Ministers Defend Boost in Expenditures.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 15.—The British government's rearmament policy formed the topic of a heated discussion in many political meetings throughout the country tonight. In London a peace rally was held at which speakers condemned the "prepare for war" policy.

Simultaneously, Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, speaking at Swansea; Minister of War Lord Hailsham, speaking at Lancaster, and Attorney General Sir Thomas Inskip, speaking at Gosport, sought to justify the increase voted yesterday in the expenditure for British fighting forces. Unanimously, they claimed that Britain is disarmed to the limit and cannot continue further.

4,000 Voice Their Protest.

Four thousand opponents of the rearmament program packed Caxton hall, Westminster, in a protest meeting organized by the National Peace council in coöperation with religious and political organizations. The chief speaker was Sir Herbert Samuel, Liberal leader. He lashed out at Prime Minister MacDonald's white paper which, he asserted, showed the government has virtually abandoned hope for a disarmament agreement and has returned to a policy of military preparedness.

Britain is now spending the colossal sum of 565 million dollars annually on its fighting services, Samuel pointed out, and suggested:

"If they are as inefficient and inadequate as is maintained, we ought to have an inquiry."

He did not propose an abolition of defenses and viewed with alarm Germany's rapid rearmament, but he did stress the "vital necessity" of strengthening the system of collective control and of securing through negotiations "as between equals" accords for the limitation of armaments.

Points to U. S. and Russia.

Foreign Secretary Simon in his address denied that the government had thrown over the league of nations. He cited the increased armaments of Russia and the United States and the rearmament of Germany as an excuse for the British government's policy.

"The only disarmament that will last is disarmament that is freely agreed to," he added. "In order to bring about an agreement, it is absolutely necessary to increase the sense of security."

Referring to his forthcoming visit to Berlin, when he will be accompanied by Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, and the latter's subsequent trip to Moscow and Warsaw in the interests of the Anglo-French security proposals for Europe, Simon said:

"I am under no illusions as to the difficulties of our task. Any measure of success will be not only a contribution to the appeasement of Europe, but will be opening up renewed possibilities for the arms agreement for which we have striven so long. That in turn will strengthen the league of nations and the collective peace system."

3 Visits "Equally Important."

The British government attached equal significance to the visits of all three capitals, he asserted.

"The government regards each visit as of exceptional importance and will welcome most sincerely the opportunity thus afforded in the three great capitals of Europe to promote international understanding which is their government's chief concern."

Meanwhile, British heavy industries already are looking forward to better times under the new armaments policy. This was indicated at the annual meeting of the Scottish Iron and Steel company at Glasgow today when William Downs, chairman, delivering a review of the year's operations, said:

"Without expressing any opinion on the policy of the government in regard to the increase in various kinds of armaments, it must be obvious to everybody that the proposed program will provide a considerable amount of additional work for the iron and steel trade, although the additional expenditure might have the effect of making it less easy for the chancellor of the exchequer to grant the much to be desired modification in taxation."

JAIL YOUNG RED UNABLE TO POST BOND AFTER FINE

Overruling a motion for a new trial, Municipal Judge Eugene Holland yesterday assessed a maximum fine of $200 against Jack Kling, secretary of the Young Communist league. Kling was found guilty by a jury on Wednesday of unlawful assembly.

Attorney Irving Krane for Kling filed notice of an appeal, and Kling was locked up for lack of $750 bonds set by Judge Holland. As he submitted to jailers Kling declared the experience will not deter him from his communistic efforts.

Judge Holland ordered that three senders of telegrams demanding Kling's unconditional release be cited before him on rules to show cause why they should not be held in contempt of court. The telegrams were ostensibly from J. Touhy, chairman of the International Workers' order; L. Davidson, secretary of the Youthful International workers, branch 50, and W. Babych, chairman of the United Ukrainian Toilers' youth section, Chicago district No. 350.

FASCIST THREAT IS ADMITTED AT HEARING ON NRA

Williams for Action to Restore Confidence.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 15.—[Special.]—Seeds of Fascism in the NRA were exposed today by members of the senate finance committee after S. Clay Williams, NRA head, had admitted that continuation of the NRA "may destroy" 10 per cent of American business.

While NRA Chairman Williams was testifying before the senate finance committee, Lloyd K. Garrison, dean of the University of Wisconsin law school and former head of the national labor relations board, was telling the senate labor committee that section 7-A of the NRA must be replaced by the Wagner labor disputes bill to safeguard against communism or other radical labor movements.

"Only Thing" to Do.

Williams, after admitting Fascist possibilities under the NRA, told the senate finance committee that the "only thing" congress can do to help business is to restore confidence. His statement was made when Senator Thomas P. Gore [Dem., Okla.] asked if uncertainty was not paralyzing the heavy industries.

"I agree with you that relieving of uncertainty is the greatest thing this congress can do to encourage business and, one step further, it is the only thing it can do," Williams answered Gore.

The tall, drawling cigaret magnate, who will slowly retire from the helm of NRA, admitted frankly that the codes may strangle "inefficient" or "mediocre" stores and factories, and that broad extension of NRA powers over business might produce a Fascist state in America.

Senator Josiah W. Bailey [Dem., N. C.] asked Williams whether NRA did not tend toward a "corporate state" such as that in Italy.

Danger, Williams Admits.

"There is danger of carrying this thing so far that you would be approaching the thing Senator Bailey is talking about," Williams answered, "if congress were to take the position that all business affects the public interest and should, therefore, get authority from the courts to regulate all business, then we are approaching the thing Senator Bailey talks about. But there is no necessity of going that far to serve the desirable social purposes set up for us."

"Granted that Mussolini or Stalin could do it and that Gen. Johnson could have done it [control business] at the time that he had immense popular support behind his Blue Eagle, can you do it in a republic?" Senator Bailey wanted to know.

"I don't believe in tearing down the house because you want to patch a leak in the roof," Williams replied.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings [Rep., Del.] interrupted to ask if the definition given by Donald R. Richberg, New Deal coördinator, to the constitution's interstate commerce clause was not broad enough to allow federal control of all business. Richberg, a spectator at the hearing, asked permission to submit later a brief of his views on the subject.

Fascism in the NRA cropped up in the hearing after Williams had admitted that congress must choose between abandoning the codes and seeing the codes "destroy" an inefficient 10 per cent of American industry.

Sees Harm to Business.

"If the NRA were to work perfectly, wouldn't it put out of business businesses incapable of efficient management; wouldn't it put out of business a lot of industries with mediocre ability?" Senator Hastings asked.

"That's the decision congress has to make," Williams reminded the committee. "We either have to enforce the code on everybody, even on the group we may destroy, or we have to give up the general social purposes on the other side.

"The question is: Are we going to let a few units break down the whole code operation? I have never seen any justification for having 100 men running around competing, fighting, if you please, each with his knife out for his neighbor, and for having the government come in and tie 99 men to a tree, leaving the one man loose with his knife to operate on the others."

Williams refused to express a personal recommendation on whether smothering inefficient industries is less desirable than dropping the codes, saying that was up to congress.

HUNT BULLETS FOR NEW MALOY MURDER TEST

Bullets fired some time ago from a machine gun that was stolen Feb. 2 from a state highway police station at 123d street and Cicero avenue yesterday were found to have been too badly flattened and mutilated to be of any use in ballistic tests to determine if the same weapon had been used in the murder of Thomas E. Maloy, business agent of the moving picture machine operators' union, who was slain Feb. 4. Bullets that had been fired from the gun on a target range were submitted to the coroner's office for the comparison. Chief Deputy Coroner Victor L. Schlaeger said a search would be made for other bullets fired from the weapon before it was stolen. Bullets taken from the body of the car in which Maloy was slain are available for comparative ballistic tests.

GRANDFATHER SENT TO CELL.

Louis Fitzpatrick, 46 years old, 6934 Stewart avenue, who is a grandfather, was sentenced to a year in the Bridewell and fined $200 by Municipal Judge Leon Edelman yesterday for taking indecent liberties with a 9 year old girl.

GRANT EXTENSION ON PERSONAL TAX RETURN FOR 1934

A fifteen day extension for the filing of 1934 personal property schedules by corporations was granted yesterday by County Assessor John S. Clark. He moved the deadline from March 15 to April 1.

It also was announced that all unincorporated businesses and individuals in the townships of Rogers Park, North, Lake View, Hyde Park and in portions of county townships lying within the city limits must file their returns by April 1. Those in the towns of Jefferson, West, South and Lake, whose schedule blanks were mailed late, have until April 6 to file.

It was reported yesterday that only 36½ per cent of the corporations in the county have so far filed schedules. Most corporations were delaying, it was said, in the hope that Assessor Clark would accept 10 per cent of cash and 20 per cent of the value of securities as the basis for assessment purposes, the policy followed in previous years.

The assessor has definitly announced that he cannot lawfully recognize such a practice.

DEFIES NATIONAL NRA ORDERS TO QUIT STATE POST

Miedema Assails Roofing Code Authority.

J. A. Miedema, chairman of the state code authority of the roofing and sheet metal contractors, refused yesterday to resign that position in compliance with orders of the national code authority of the industry.

Announcing open defiance of the NRA officials in Washington, Miedema proclaimed himself champion of 20,000 members of the code in the central west. Otto A. Wendt, member of the national code authority, had declared Miedema's position vacant in a letter yesterday morning.

Demands Voice in Budget Making.

The order followed Miedema's public declaration that code members in the middle west would not pay the NRA assessment until given more equitable representation in the national code authority and a voice in the budget making.

Chairman Miedema announced his refusal to be dismissed in a letter to President Roosevelt. He wrote:

"Because I have seen fit to protest the high handed, unconstitutional, and red tape ridden blunderings of Washington officials guiding the administration of the roofing and sheet metal contractors' code, I have been notified that my position of state code authority has been declared vacant. This action was taken by Otto A. Wendt, national code authority, with the usual disregard for the rules established and then broken at will by those in authority.

"I am a duly elected official, chosen by members of the Illinois code. I do not believe that Mr. Wendt's ruling carries any more official weight than if he had ordered Lake Michigan into the state of Utah.

Asks Where Money Went.

"More than 98 per cent of the 20,000 unfortunates under this code in the middle west have followed my advice in withholding payment of an outrageous assessment. They hold with me that they should be given some representation on the national code authority, and should be allowed some insight into the mysteries of NRA budget making.

"If I resigned at this time there would be no one to ask the following questions, which I have asked without response for the last year:

"1. How much money was spent by the Washington officials in 1934 in administering the roofing and sheet metal contractors' code?

"2. Who spent it and for what?

"3. Why do these same officials demand a total assessment of $1,200,000 demand a total assessment of $1,200,000 for 1935 when an honest administration could be had for one-sixth this sum?

"For the above reasons I am forced to disregard Mr. Wendt's ruling that I am fired."

Blamed at Washington Hearing.

Charges were made against Miedema recently at Washington that he was hindering advancement of the code. A code tribunal heard the charge in Chicago several weeks ago. At that time Miedema announced that he would "go to jail with any member of the code persecuted for failure to pay the assessment until the code is properly administrated."

Miedema has charged that a clique at Washington selected members of the national code authority without giving middle west code members a voice in the proceeding. He also held that policies were laid down in Washington, the budget made there, and the state code authorities allowed only to enforce the policies handed to them.

HOLD UP OFFICE; GET $132.

Three armed men entered the office of the Great Lakes Plating company at 1715 Dickson avenue yesterday and compelled D. P. Hix, an estimator, to surrender $132.

COUNTY SCHOOLS SEEK $262,000 IN FEDERAL FUNDS

Application has been made to the Illinois Emergency Relief commission for $262,276 to keep 38 grade schools in Cook county running, Otto F. Aken, county superintendent of schools, announced yesterday. He said it is hoped that the commission will get the money if the President's work relief bill is passed by congress.

The money is sought to pay back salaries of the 391 teachers of 14,154 pupils, some of which are two years in arrears, and for financing for the rest of the year. While all of the county grade schools are running, Mr. Aken said some are kept going only because parents are raising the necessary funds by private initiative. He recalled that schools in Steger, Midlothian and Tinley Park had to close for a while before Christmas because of lack of funds.

Plunges to Death in River from Madison Street Bridge

An unidentified man about 45 years old climbed to the rail of the Madison street bridge early last evening, plunged into the river and was drowned. Bridgetenders Patrick Culhane and Michael Owen, who saw the leap, ran down to the river, launched a boat and found the body.

NEW STAMP SALE DRAWS CROWDS OF PHILATELISTS

Washington, D. C., March 15.—(AP)—Postal clerks and officials went home tonight after establishing an all-time record for one day's sale of new stamp issues to collectors and dealers.

The official estimate of value of ungummed and imperforate stamps sold today was approximately $529,000. Some 20,000 persons paid out this amount.

Thus the irate philatelists who rose up in vigorous complaint when Postmaster General James A. Farley distributed imperforate sheets to friends demonstrated that they were in earnest.

Only in Washington could the imperforate stamps be bought, and today the capital became a Mecca for the stamp world. More than 100 dealers from New York, Boston, St. Louis, Detroit, and other cities were identified in the seething crowd which awaited opening of the sale at 8 a. m.

PARTIES LAUNCH MAYORAL DRIVES; WETTEN ABSENT

Democrats Praise Kelly; G. O. P. Bewildered.

Democrats and Republicans launched their mayoralty campaigns yesterday, throwing into bold relief the contrast between their activities just sixteen days before the April 2 election.

Nearly 1,000 Democrats exhibited their enthusiasm for the candidacy of Mayor Kelly for reëlection at a luncheon in the Cameo room of the Morrison hotel All remained for the pep talks given by the mayor and State's Attorney Courtney.

A block away at the Hotel La Salle some 200 visitors attended the preliminary opening of headquarters for Emil C. Wetten, the Republican candidate. Mr. Wetten, however, was not there. And later in the day, at the Bismarck hotel, the Republican city committee again failed in an effort to meet its party's nominee face to face. Mr. Wetten was not there either.

Democrats Cite Their Record.

State's Attorney Courtney mentioned Republican apathy in his talk at the Morrison.

"We find that our candidate has practically no opposition," said Mr. Courtney. "His opponent has no issues, has no appeal to the electorate, and is not well known to the people of Chicago. We find also that the Republican leaders are giving excuses, such as being ill, to avoid participation in a defeat.

"But we have other reasons for winning in this campaign. Mayor Kelly has reduced governmental expenses, has lowered taxes, restored the credit of the city, and coöperated with the state's attorney's office in a fight on crime that enabled visitors to the world's fair to gain an extremely favorable impression of Chicago."

Mayor Kelly in his talk enumerated a number of projects that he intends to carry forward to build up the city.

"Chicago," he said, "will be the first of the cities to come out of the depression."

Wetten Attends by Letter.

Opening the session of the Republican city committee, Secretary Edward F. Moore, presiding in the absence of Chairman Oscar F. Nelson, read a letter he had written to Mr. Wetten asking him to set a date for a meeting with the committee. The letter was sent last Monday, but having no answer by Thursday, Mr. Moore issued a call for yesterday and notified the Republican nominee.

Mr. Wetten did not appear, but a few moments before the meeting opened Moore was handed a letter from the candidate. The letter said there had been some misunderstanding as to the date, and hinted that Mr. Wetten might meet with the committee next week. The name Emil C. Wetten was on the letter, but it carried the notation: "Dictated by telephone and not read or signed by Mr. Wetten."

Wetten's absence irked some of the committeemen. They complained of the few days left in which to campaign. Some were sarcastic in questioning supporters of Wetten as to what they had to offer the voters.

"I was struck sharply by the cartoon in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE showing the Republicans asleep at the switch," said Committeeman John J. Hoellen. "However, I do not think the committeemen are to blame as it is only sixteen days to election, and we have no campaign cards or other election materials. The candidate has some responsibility and if he can't be active he should have a spokesman."

A Warning for 1936.

"If you committeemen do not get out and work for the Republican nominee now you'll have a much harder time organizing the wards for the 1936 campaigns," warned Louis Nettelhorst, who was the "master of ceremonies" at Wetten's headquarters.

The upshot of the session was the appointment of a subcommittee of ten to call on Wetten to learn his plans for the conduct of the campaign and what place in it will be assigned to the committee. The subcommittee is under orders to report on Monday.

In lieu of his appearance, Wetten had read before the committee a five page statement in which he set forth some biographical material and nine pledges. The latter included a promise to wage an aggressive campaign in which he would "from time to time" present every issue to the voters.

At the Hotel La Salle headquarters, it was explained that Wetten had gone into seclusion for a few days, but most likely would be there by the first of next week. An official opening, it was said, awaits his appearance.

FRANCE INDICTS U. S. COUPLE AS SPIES FOR RUSSIA

Called Leaders of Ring of 30 Members.

PARIS, March 15.—(AP)—Robert Gordon Switz and his wife, Marjorie, who have languished in jail for 15 months, were indicted today with 30 others accused as members of an international ring spying for soviet Russia.

The Switzes, residents of East Orange, N. J., and New York, face trial early next month with 19 alleged accomplices. Many of the suspects allegedly were involved by the Switzes' admissions. Ten of those indicted are fugitives, and Mme. Maria Schul is in prison in Finland, having been convicted there last year.

The American couple and nine others were arrested Dec. 18, 1933, after secret service operatives had trailed them for eight months.

Third American Involved.

Mrs. Pauline Jacobsen Levine, 32, a third American involved, is one of the 10 members of the band who disappeared before the roundup raids. Police have not identified her except to say she was a friend of Mrs. Switz.

Secret formulas for explosives and gases, plans for the industrial mobilization of French factories in the event of a conflict, and secret lectures delivered at the war school were revealed as having figured in the spy cases.

Switz, a 29 year old aviator described as a co-clef of the band, with Benjamin Bercowitz, a Rumanian, told the investigating magistrate that he was sent to Europe by a mysterious stranger whom he met at Roosevelt field, New York. He first went to London he said.

Wife Cited as Instructor.

Mrs. Switz, the former Marjorie Tilley, 32, was alleged to have instructed members of the group in the reproduction of documents and figured prominently in the photographic work. Her staf, police said, consisted of Mlle. Madeleine Mermet, 23 year old school teacher; Mme. Chana Salman, 25 year old Polish medical student and former artist's model, and Mme. Baila Englard, a Bessarabian student now missing.

Most picturesque of all appears to be the brunette divorcée, Mme. Lydia Stahl, student of languages, chemistry, and mathematics. She said she held a master of arts degree from Columbia university, acquired when she was in the United States between 1927 and 1932. Although she is 48 years old, police accuse her of exercizing a romantic influence over Luis Pierre Martin, French translator in the code room of the navy ministry. Martin, five years her junior, is charged with having betrayed the secrets of his country.

Frenchmen Are Accused.

Other secrets were obtained, the authorities charged, from Col. Octave Dumoulin, retired French army officer; Albert Aubry, explosives expert in a powder factory; Vatroslav Reich, chemist engaged in poison gas research, and Maurice Millice, arms factory inspector.

The prosecution is expected to order a secret trial for Mr. and Mrs. Switz.

MINE OFFICERS INJURED.

West Frankfort, Ill., March 15.—[Special.]—Jack Land, assistant general superintendent of the Old Ben corporation, underwent amputation of his left leg at the knee this afternoon, following an accident at mine No. 8. His condition is serious.

New Post for Green

Despite denials in Washington, reports persisted yesterday that United States District Attorney Dwight H. Green, a Republican holdover, will soon be displaced by a Democrat. Congressman Harry P. Beam of the Fourth district is regarded, it was said, as the man most likely to get the post.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis, who is known to favor the candidacy of Congressman Michael L. Igoe against that of Mr. Beam, said there was no intention of ousting Mr. Green until the Insull cases and certain income tax prosecutions with which he is familiar have been disposed of.

Credence was added to the rumors of the district attorney's impending retirement yesterday when the federal judges offered him a place as referee in bankruptcy, made vacant by the resignation of Edmund D. Adcock. Mr. Green said he would make no decision on acceptance of this place until a new district attorney has been appointed.

Mr. Beam is said to be acceptable to Postmaster Farley, patronage boss of the administration, and to the department of justice. For many years he was a Chicago attorney. He was first elected to congress in 1930.

LICENSE IS JUST ONE WOE AMONG MANY, IT SEEMS

The question is: Should a chauffeur be required to have a chauffeur's license when his employer's economizing forces him to "double in brass" as a gardener, butler, and general handy man.

This came up yesterday in the court of Justice of the Peace Samuel Sorenson in Lake Forest, where state police took twenty chauffeurs employed in "millionaires' row" and charged them with not having 1935 chauffeurs' licenses.

"Driving the car is the smallest of my duties," one of the twenty declared in his own defense. "My boss, like most of them, is cutting down on servants, so I have to keep weeds out of the gladiola bed, serve tea in the drawing room, and wash the glass in the front windows, as well as drive. I'm not a chauffeur, so why should I have a license?"

"You drive a car and that makes you a chauffeur," ruled Justice Sorenson. He fined six of the defendants, who made the same plea, $2 and costs each and continued the remainder of the cases.

WEITZMAN GETS LIFE TERM FOR DAICHES' MURDER

New Trial Plea Is Denied; Widow Gets $67,500.

CRIMINAL COURT.

THOMAS SMITH, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary; ANDREW HATCHER, bigamy, sentenced to 1 to 5 years in the penitentiary.

Irving Weitzman, part owner of a south side bakery chain, was sentenced by Judge Harry B. Miller in the Criminal court yesterday to serve a life term in prison for the murder of Eli Daiches, advertising executive. The judge imposed sentence after overruling Weitzman's plea for a new trial.

Weitzman was convicted several weeks ago by a jury which fixed his punishment at the life term. Daiches, president of the Thomas M. Bowers Advertising agency at 304 South Wabash avenue, was shot to death by gunmen as he rode in his auto at 55th street and the outer drive, on March 3, 1934. The state charged Weitzman had hired the killers in order that the advertising agency, which Weitzman's brother, Louis, is chairman of the board and principal owner, might receive $300,000 insurance on the life of Daiches.

Weitzman accepted the sentence with the same calm that characterized his court appearances during the trial and the reading of the jury's verdict.

Protests His Innocence.

"You are sentencing an innocent man," Weitzman said when asked by Judge Miller if he wished to make a statement.

Defense Attorney Harold Levy based his argument on the new trial motion principally on the contentions that the verdict was contrary to the weight of the evidence, that testimony regarding the insurance was prejudicial, and that the court scene wherein Arthur Emblen refused to testify for the state was also prejudicial. Emblen, a Gary hoodlum who had confessed to the police that he was hired by Weitzman to kill Daiches, but refused to testify after it had been expected that he would be the state's star witness, is now awaiting trial with Walter Murphy. Both were named in indictments charging conspiracy to murder Daiches.

Assistant State's Attorneys John Boyle and Emmett Moynihan opposed the new trial motion on the ground that the verdict and sentence were in accordance with the evidence.

A tense scene was enacted when Mrs. Louis Weitzman, who had been sitting with Irving Weizman's wife and daughter, leaped to her feet and confronted Mrs. Belle T. Daiches, widow of the murdered man, as she and the assistant state's attorneys were about to leave the courtroom.

Cries: "There'll Be Justice."

"As sure as there's a God in heaven," Mrs. Weitzman cried, pointing her finger at Mrs. Daiches, "there'll be justice in this case. Remember that." Court attendants subdued Mrs. Weitzman as Mrs. Daiches shrank from her.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Daiches' attorneys accepted in her behalf two checks from the Bowers Advertising agency amounting to $67,500, and in return moved for dismissal of the widow's equity suit before Circuit Judge Benjamin F. Epstein in which one-half of the agency's assets was sought. Judge Epstein entered the order, which in turn also lifted an injunction tying up the advertising firm's assets.

It was indicated yesterday that two damage suits pending in Circuit court asking $180,000 from Louis and Irving Weitzman and Emlen and Murphy for the death of Daiches will be dismissed today in carrying out the full provision of settlement agreement.

SUES FOR $100,000, CHARGING THEFT OF HIS FAMILY

A. E. Wolf Names Old Friend in Triangle.

Alexander F. Wolf filed suit for $100,000 in the Superior court yesterday against his old friend, William A. Giesecke, charging him with alienating the affections of the former Mrs. Wolf, who is now Mrs. Giesecke.

Henry and Annie Anspach, parents of Giesecke's wife, Elita, are named codefendants. The suit seeks $25,000 for loss of the love of Mrs. Giesecke, and $75,000 for alienation of the affections of Wolf's daughter, Bobbette, 9 years old.

Wolf and Giesecke are insurance men who met many years ago as fellow members of the English Evangelical church, 3062 Palmer square, according to Attorney J. J. Lewisburg, who drew Wolf's will.

Former Recorder Candidate.

Wolf, who was a Republican candidate for county recorder in 1913, has an office at 10 North Clark street. Giesecke's office is at 2881 Milwaukee avenue.

Anspach, who lives at 3738 North Springfield avenue, is secretary of the Armitage Clothing company, 2000 Milwaukee avenue.

Wolf and Elita Anspach were married on June 3, 1922. For nine years, Wolf's bill relates, they lived happily with Mrs. Wolf's parents. Then, in 1931, the bill says, Giesecke began to show unusual friendliness for Mrs. Wolf. Wolf charges he was ordered from the Anspach home that year, and Bobbette was taken to Florida by her grandparents.

Divorced by Wife.

Instead of becoming reconciled, the bill charges, the Wolfs grew farther apart, and on March 28, 1933, in the midst of a crisis in Wolf's affairs, his wife gained a divorce on the ground of desertion. Soon afterward, the bill says, Mrs. Wolf married Giesecke.

Wolf alleges that the ground on which the divorce was obtained was fraudulent.

"The unkindest cut of all," according to Wolf's bill, was the fact that those who allegedly conspired against him to alienate his wife also succeeded in turning the child against her father. Under the terms of the divorce decree Wolf is allowed to see his child only between 1 and 5 p. m. on Saturdays.

BUSINESS BOARD TO CONDUCT QUIZ IN CLEANERS' WAR

Agree to Mayor's Plan for Study of Rates.

Acting on the request of Mayor Kelly, officials of the Association of Commerce announced yesterday that they would appoint a committee to investigate price warfare and alleged racketeering in the cleaning and dyeing industry in the city.

George W. Young, president of the association, said that as soon as the members of the committee were named they would begin their study of the problems of the turbulent service trade by calling in representatives of the Cleaning and Dyeing Plant Owners' association for a conference.

Mayor Refuses to Meddle.

The plant owners' association, which is composed of 94 of the largest establishments in the city, has set a price of 69 cents for cleaning a suit or dress. The independent service chains are charging 49 cents and 50 cents and insist that they can make a fair profit at those rates and still pay their employés union wages.

On Thursday Mayor Kelly told representatives of the plant owners' association that he would not force the public to pay the higher rates, and therefore would not intervene in the dispute to force the independents to raise their prices.

Another service in which the public has suffered hardships recently is the laundry trade. For the last few years and up to Jan. 1 many of the large laundries maintained "will call" branches throughout the city. There were approximately 150 of these branches where the individual could take and call for his laundry and receive a 20 per cent discount.

Drivers' Union Forces Chain.

The Chicago Laundry Drivers' union objected to the discount policy at the branches, asserting that it threw many of its members out of work. On Jan. 1 the Laundry Owners' association capitulated to the union demands and agreed that for the next year it would not allow the discount privilege at the branches, although, as always, the discount can still be obtained if the individual takes his laundry to the main offices.

Union officials said yesterday that 400 drivers have found work since the branches ceased giving discounts.

$32,000,000 in Tax Funds Held Up During February

The report of County Treasurer Sweitzer's office for the month of February, made public yesterday, disclosed that at the end of that month the office was holding $32,235,585 in undistributed taxes due the various governments of Cook county.

This was a reduction of approximately $5,000,000 from the sum held undistributed at the end of January. With the report, prepared by Parker, Howard & Co., auditors for the treasurer, was an analysis showing further deductions which should be made in computing the amount of tax money which can actually be paid out to the governments. According to this analysis the sum which the treasurer's office could disburse, but has not, amounts to approximately $20,000,000.

Seek to Save Interest.

The governments are always anxious to receive the tax payments as promptly as possible, since receipt of the money enables them to retire tax warrants and reduce their interest burden. A month's interest on $20,000,000 amounts to nearly $100,000 at the rates at which outstanding warants were sold.

The deductions from the tax collections on hand at the end of February, as shown by the auditors' analysis, consist of $8,069,924, which was distributed between March 1 and 9, and $5,831,800 held in reserves for various legal reasons. This reduces the undistributed collections at present to $18,333,861, but to this should be added collections since Feb. 28, not shown by the analysis. These collections probably were less than $3,000,000.

The reserves held by the treasurer consist of $3,800,000 in taxes paid under protest, $1,000,000 in penalties on forfeiture held pending a court decision on their distribution, $500,000 for adjustments incident to the "15 per cent" assessment cut, and $531,800 in collection fees due the treasurer's office.

Funds Held on Feb. 28.

The report shows that at the end of February the treasurer's office, which performs a number of other functions besides that of tax collection, held a total of $41,368,853, divided as follows:

Cook county funds	$ 1,215,670
State funds	116,999
Tax collections	32,235,585
Special assessment collections	903,264
Trust funds	6,897,335

100,000 DRIVERS DEMAND STATE CUT AUTO TAXES

Petition Will Go to Horner —Road Waste Opposed

BY HAL FOUST.

The Automobile Tax Reduction league announced at a luncheon in the Palmer house yesterday that it had 100,000 auto owners' signatures to a petition addressed to Gov. Horner and to members of the Illinois legislature asking for a reduction of the gasoline tax from 3 to 2 cents a gallon, a cut in the state license fee to a flat $3 rate, and a curb on municipalities, prohibiting a city wheel tax greater than $2.50.

At the same time, the Illinois Municipal league, representing 500 municipal administrations, including Chicago's, issued a brochure opposing any reduction in the state's collections for pavement construction and maintenance. And from Washington, D. C., came a threat of a 1 cent increase in the gasoline tax to help finance President Roosevelt's five billion dollar work relief bill. From Springfield also came a threat of another 1 cent hike against motor fuel for the purpose of providing additional state money for relief.

Strong Popular Appeal.

The Automobile Tax Reduction league is making an appeal to the public that is popular but is difficult of realization. In response to questions, the organization's manager, Si Mayer, president of the Automobile Club of Illinois, said that more reductions are being asked than he expects to be effected.

The league, organized as a non-profit corporation, is soliciting 25 cent donations from private car owners and donations of $2 and $5 per vehicle from truck fleet operators.

The popularity of the demand for a tax reduction is founded mainly on the public's protest against further extravagance with roads funds and on its protest against further diversion of the road funds to other purposes, such as charity or general corporate expenses. Another impressive argument is that the cost of pavement usage by car operators, paid in license fees and gasoline taxes, has not been deflated in Illinois since the boom era.

Boosts Cut Down Revenue.

T. J. Schmitz, vice president of the league, president of the Elgin Motor club, predicted that with any increase in the gasoline tax there will be a decline in total revenue unless license fees are cut. He declared that the present taxes are curtalling automobil operation.

A bulletin from the American Automobile association tends to substantiate this argument. It cited an increase in gasoline consumption and in automobile registrations in ten states that reduced their license fees for 1934—Delaware, Kentucky, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, South Carolina, Vermont, and Virginia.

The Horner administration, postponing commitments until after the elections next month, has not announced its stand on the question of whether the special taxes against motorists should be retained, lowered or raised.

Improvements Only Justification.

To justify a continuance of the present revenue for roads, the governor must present a program that will reduce the cost of automobile operation more than it would be reduced by a tax cut, it was pointed out. This can be done by building highway facilities, urban and rural, that will lessen costly delays and accidents.

The Illinois Municipal league, however, presents figures purporting to show that a $3 license fee without any reduction in the gasoline tax would deprive the cities and the rural areas of sorely needed trafic facilities. The state highway department's income, with the proposed $3 flat rate registration fee, would be $8,000,000 a year.

The highway department also receives 1 cent of the present 3 cent gasoline tax, amounting to $9,700,000 a year after deductions are made for refunds and for collection costs, making a total of $18,500,000 the department would receive with the proposed $3 license fee and with no change in the gasoline tax.

Charges Would Eat Up Income.

Classed as "fixed charges" against the road fund are items totaling $19,700,000, more than the prospective income. These items include $8,200,000 for interest and principal on outstanding road bonds, $4,400,000 for maintenance, $2,500,000 for administration and engineering, $2,400,000 for refunds to counties for state and roads built in the past, and $850,000 for policing.

With no money for construction, Illinois would be deprived of $5,150,000 federal aid from the regular government contribution toward construction on the federal highway system. This allotment from the government requires the state to match the federal money dollar for dollar.

Chicago's proposed elevated highways are listed among construction projects that would be lost with a tax reduction.

EX-PRINTER STRANGLES SELF.

Edward Cox, 70 years old, a retired Chicago printer, was found dead yesterday in the lonely house near Big Rock, west of Aurora, where he had lived for the last twelve years. Cox had strangled himself by placing his head between the rungs of a chair.

The driver of the car, Thomas Greene, colored, 23 years old, of 150 14th street, North Chicago, was released in bonds of $2,000 after being charged with assault with a deadly weapon, and must appear at the inquest today.

The Chicago victim was Richard Gabelhausen, 5 years old, 1732 School street. He was fatally injured when hit by a delivery truck at Paulina and School streets. The driver, Thaddeus Maski, 5459 Lovejoy avenue, who took the boy to the Illinois Masonic hospital, was held for the inquest.

Others Killed During Day.

The death of Capt. O'Connor and of three other persons increased the Cook county motor toll for the year to 182. Until 4 p. m. yesterday 147 persons had been killed and 2,805 injured in accidents within the Chicago city limits. Other Cook county victims:

Mrs. Mary Labenski, 34 years old, 2315 Asbury avenue. Died in the Evanston hospital of injuries incurred Wednesday when she was struck by a taxicab at Sherman avenue and Colfax street.

William Jantcak, 30 years old, 3412 Seminary avenue. Died in the John B. Murphy hospital of injuries incurred Wednesday when he swerved to avoid another car at 3245 North Clark street and struck a street car.

Albert Rodghier, 20 years old, 7249 St. Lawrence avenue. Died in the Auburn Park hospital of injuries incurred Wednesday when his automobile struck a light post at 89th street and South Ashland avenue.

OUST 2 COUNTY POLICEMEN ON BRIBE CHARGE

Two county highway policemen of the Morton Grove station were discharged from the force yesterday by orders of Chief H. H. Burns after a hearing on a charge that they had accepted a $2 bribe to release a motorist whom they had arrested for speeding near Palatine.

The policemen, who denied the charges, are Thomas Domek, 6125 North Meade avenue, and Charles Lauk, 4320 Castello avenue.

They declare they had stopped the citizen for speeding and he pleaded for release, saying that he was demonstrating automobiles and was hard pressed to make a living. After hearing the story, the policemen said, they told him to "drive on."

The motorist started on, they said, then came back to express his thanks and press $2 on them, saying: "Buy yourselves some cigars or something."

A reduction of 15 per cent in automobile theft insurance rates became effective yesterday. Coupled with a 26 per cent reduction effected last year, the rates in Cook county are now 37.1 per cent lower than they were a year ago. Insurance companies base their rates on the losses. Automobile stealing has been curtailed by an enforcement campaign in which police, prosecutors and the courts cooperated.

Fines Street Car Window Smasher; Orders Inquiry

A. H. Minium, 37 years old, 6050 Langley avenue, who was arrested Thursday night while smashing windows in a Cottage Grove avenue street car at 55th street, was fined $100 by Municipal Judge Thomas A. Green yesterday. Judge Green continued until today a motion to vacate the fine and ordered the appearance in court then of Capt. David Flynn, head of the police trafic division, who recently enlisted street car motormen as spies against motorists who violate trafic laws. "I'm going to do what I can," the judge said, "to abate this snooping campaign, which, I suspect, is behind this defendant's grudge."

LAKE FREIGHTERS PREPARING FOR SHIPPING SEASON

Cleveland, O., March 15.—(AP)—Clouds of smoke and steam issued from many Great Lakes freighters today as their owners laid plans for an early opening of the navigation season which they hope will be the best iron ore and coal tonnage year since the record year of 1929.

Down on the water front of lake ports today there was a bustle of activity that marks the annual awakening of shipping from its long winter's sleep.

Just how soon the first ore boat will head out for Lake Superior none of the shippers is ready to say, but probably not later than April 1.

Meanwhile there is much to be done. Government lighthouse tenders must get buoys and other navigation aids in place. Lighthouse keepers must get their lights and horns a-working. And many of the ships themselves will need a complete conditioning at an average cost of $3,000 apiece.

DROPS CONTEST OVER DU PAGE TREASURER RACE

The contest over the Du Page county treasurership brought last month by John F. Hesterman, Republican candidate who was defeated by 14 votes by Arthur L. Hellyer, Democrat, in the November election, ended yesterday when Hesterman withdrew his petition in the county court of Judge Win G. Knoch in Wheaton.

"I decline to win on a mere technicality," Hesterman said in answer to questions.

Recently Judge Knoch ruled out about 500 imperfect ballots, which gave Hellyer an additional plurality of 124 votes over Hesterman. However, the fate of several hundred votes in another precinct, which if thrown out would have given Hesterman the office by 94 votes, still hung in the balance. The latter ballots had been challenged by the Republicans on the ground that they had been initialed by proxy for an election judge who went home ill early on election day.

Jailed for Trying to Sell Woman Her Baby Carriage

Found guilty of receiving stolen property, Nathan Chizever, 29 years old, owner of the Juvenile Baby Carriage exchange, 3249 Roosevelt road, was sentenced by Municipal Judge Justin F. McCarthy yesterday to serve a year in the Bridewell. He was convicted of attempting to sell to Mrs. George L. Puhr, 5641 North Spaulding avenue, a baby carriage that had been stolen from her.

DELAY ON RELIEF COAL CONTRACTS TO COST $60,000

Commission Balks Over Specification Changes.

In its stormiest session in many months, the Illinois Emergency Relief commission refused yesterday to approve new contracts for purchases of relief coal because a staf official had changed existing specifications. The action amounted to a sacrifice of a potential saving of $60,000, observers said.

Business Manager F. A. Deniston, who has been stripped of most of his powers, but still retains his $450 monthly salary, was under fire on this matter and also in regard to purchases of lumber and glass in large quantities without competitive bidding.

The commission refused to award the coal contracts to the low bidders when it was found that the specifications had been changed without the knowledge of the commission members. Deniston, who formerly was director of purchases, tried to explain that the old specifications, approved by the commission last fall, were not suitable for present conditions.

Delay Cost $3,000 a Day.

Since fall, he said, the NRA has abandoned its fixed prices on relief coal and the changes were desirable in returning the business to a competitive basis.

Each day of delay in taking advantage of the new low prices will cost the taxpayers an estimated $3,000. It is expected that the present delay will be three weeks.

On the motion of Corporation Counsel William H. Sexton, who is a commissioner, the commission voted to postpone the entire matter until March 22. Indications were that at that time the bids will be rejected and others sought under the old specifications. Mr. Sexton said he realized this might mean the loss of three weeks' time in buying at the low prices now available.

"I know that readvertising for bids will give the high bidders a chance to get some of this business," Mr. Sexton said. "We're on the spot. But let's serve notice we're fighting the staf from now on where they don't cooperate with the commission."

Olander Defends Delay.

"Better to be criticized for the delay and for spending more money than for possibly spending money dishonestly," said Victor Olander, another member. "The specification changes made by the staf cut southern Illinois mines out of the picture."

Later Sexton discussed the purchases of lumber and glass which were made while Business Manager Deniston still was in charge of the commission's buying.

It was revealed a few days ago that 1,100 purchases of lumber were made from the Berwyn Lumber company of Berwyn and that every purchase had been for an amount under $500. Purchases amounting to more than $500 must be submitted to competitive bidding, under state law.

Reading from a special report on these purchases, Mr. Sexton pointed out many instances where several individual purchase orders dated the same day were made out to the company for an aggregate sum well over $500. He also discussed the fact that the Berwyn company received $106,000 of the total $181,000 business given to 173 lumber companies.

Cites "Split Requisition" Ruling.

"That's illustrative of what we call 'split requisitions,'" Mr. Sexton said, referring to the several small purchase orders made out to the company on the same day. "Did you understand that the attorney general of this state has ruled that purchases over $500 must be on a competitive basis?"

"Yes," Deniston answered, "but I didn't see most of these orders until the company sent us invoices. On lumber, 89 per cent of the orders were confirming orders. That is, the merchandise was purchased by telephone and was delivered prior to the date appearing on the purchase orders."

"That's worse still!" Sexton declared.

Deniston then read a prepared statement in his defense. The Civil Works administration projects and remodeling of the commission's headquarters building at 1319 South Michigan avenue were "emergency" occasions necessitating hasty buying, he said.

Denies "Stringing of Orders."

"The point seems to be that there was a stringing of orders to keep them under $500," Deniston said, "but that's not true."

He also read two letters from C. M. Coyle, president of the Berwyn Lumber company, which stated that its sales to the IERC had all been made at the regular market prices, and that it had received most of the business because of its "service and coöperation."

"I have never met a representative of this company in my life," Deniston said.

The commission took no action in the matter, but it was learned later that the investigation will be continued by an examination of the original purchase orders, of which there are thousands.

"MY LIFE," AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Returned to parliament as a Constitutionalist or Independent, Churchill was summoned to confer with Prime Minister Baldwin, whom he admits knowing but slightly. Expecting the offer of a minor government post, he is amazed when offered the exchequer. He concludes his autobiography with a history of the succeeding years in that office, and then declines to discuss contemporary politics.

BY WINSTON CHURCHILL.

So here I was again in the new parliament, a Constitutionalist sitting for a Conservative seat, in full harmony with the views of the majority and in a very satisfactory independent position. I had been out of the house of commons for two successive parliaments, but they had only lasted a year each, so I had not missed much.

I knew Mr. Baldwin very slightly. I had met him on official business a few times when we were colleagues in Mr. Lloyd George's cabinet. I had criticized him a good deal in public, and at the Westminster election I had in fact challenged his party authority. I could recall only a few friendly conversations and telephone talks. Before the election his position as party leader was most precarious. The great majority by which the country repudiated the Socialists carried him without dispute to the position of prime minister. I did not know whether he wished me to join his government or not.

When he asked me to come to see him I thought perhaps that he would offer me the colonial office, and I made up my mind that if he did so I would ask—as one always can for a lower office—to go to the ministry of health, where I thought housing on a gigantic scale met the greatest need of the times.

Gets Exchequer Offer.

I was very much surprised when, after a few preliminary civilities and commonplaces, he asked me to become chancellor of the exchequer. I had understood that it had been settled that this office, the second in the government, would be taken by Sir Robert Horne. I immediately raised this point and was informed that the prime minister had decided otherwise.

I therefore undertook these wide responsibilities and when a few days later we met parliament, here was I who so shortly before had neither seat nor party, chancellor of the exchequer in a Conservative government with a solid majority and four or five years of almost certain tenure. Thus we see how quickly the wheel of fortune may turn this way or that without much relation to what one does oneself or to what people expect.

Being thus so prominently incorporated in the Conservative government, I decided formally to rejoin the Conservative party, and some months later I allowed myself to be reelected to the Carlton club, from which I had removed my name almost exactly twenty years before.

Explains Party Changes.

People often mock at me for having changed parties and labels. They say with truth I have been Tory, Liberal, Coalitionist, Constitutionalist, and finally Tory again. But any one who has read this brief account of my life with goodwill and fairness will see how natural and indeed inevitable every step has been.

My own feeling is that I have been more truly consistent than almost any other well known public man. I have seen political parties change their positions on the greatest questions with bewildering rapidity—on protection, on Irish home rule, and on many important secondary issues. But I have always been a Tory democrat and free trader, as I was when I first stood for Oldham more than thirty years ago.

I have accepted the decision of the nation and the irresistible march of events which have made us a protectionist country. But I am sure it would be for the interests of our island, and of its great empire, that these senseless barriers to trade between one nation and another which are dividing the world into hostile feudal castles victualled for a siege, and are so cruelly injurious to our shipping and sea borne commerce, should fall to the ground. And though it probably will never come in my time, I still hope that a gentler, more generous, more life giving breeze will blow upon this weary earth, and that all the men in all the lands will become more serviceable to one another.

Last of Tradition.

Now I will tell you very shortly—for I do not intend to be drawn into modern controversies—about my tenure of the exchequer with the five budgets which, as the expression goes, I "opened."

Although the statement may surprise many readers, I was the last orthodox chancellor of the exchequer who followed the Victorian and Gladstonian principles of finance—free trade, taxation for revenue only, the gold standard and the balanced budget, large provision for the repayment of debt, cheapening the cost of living—these were the traditional doctrins in which I had been brought up, and which my father, Lord Randolph Churchill, seemed to have bequeathed me with his exchequer robes. I do not by any means assert that such principles were in all cases found to be adapted to the times in which we live.

Since I left the cabinet five years ago the most tremendous changes have swept across the world and nearly all have been disastrous. The old doctrins have been abandoned, but no new coherent scheme of thought has been erected in their places. Exchanges and currency are in great confusion, our import and export trades, our carrying trade, the yield of our foreign investments—all have been woefully reduced. Irresistible facts and forces have torn us adrift from our old moorings.

Running Before Gale.

The economic blizzard has beaten on the world, and we have had to run before the gale. It is marvelous we have come through so well considering the awful economic and financial blows we have had to bear.

If when I had produced my last budget in 1929 I could have foreseen the disasters which were coming upon the whole world and upon ourselves in particular, I could not have believed we could survive without bankruptcy. The greatest credit is due to those who have faced the storm and kept the ship afloat.

One thing, however, I look back upon with lasting comfort. It fell to my lot to complete the wonderful system of contributory insurance which raises the position of the wage earner and ordinary inhabitant of our island far above that of any foreign nation in the new world or the old.

In the last quarter of a century I have been connected intimately and actively with every great insurance pension scheme. The author of the whole of this departure is Mr. Lloyd George. But next to him I may claim association with it from the days when as president of the board of trade I expounded the first unemployment insurance scheme and supported him in his old age, health, and invalidity policies.

Reduced Pension Age.

Through their great extension after the war down to my own tenure at the exchequer I have worked at the erection of these social bulwarks, which have given us in this island a more loyal, happy, and well provided people than can be found throughout the globe. I was able as chancellor to bring the pension age down from 70 to 65, to place the whole of the old age pensions upon a contributory basis, and to provide a pension for widows, which meets one of the most awful miseries of human life.

It was well worth having toiled and argued all these years, and borne so much abuse and rough handling to have been directly associated with so wide and wise a measure of national good housekeeping.

If I were to carry this story any further I should be drawn into the quarrels and disputes of current politics about which every one has to form his own opinion. I should have to tell you about the new India home rule scheme in resisting which my last four years of public work have been mainly occupied. Upon this great controversy I have had to sever myself from Mr. Baldwin and the ministers of the national government.

I am strongly opposed on this issue to the Liberals and all my life I have been the enemy of socialism. I am, therefore, more alone than I have ever been in what is now a long political life. But I think it a "splendid isolation," for I have only acted in accordance with what I profoundly believe to be the vital interests of England and her empire at a turning point in her history.

Turns to History and Painting.

When I look around me in my family and in the home I have built for myself by my own work and in part by my own hand, I feel deeply thankful for the many blessings which Providence has bestowed upon me in this bleak and uncertain world. My pen makes me entirely independent. I have no need to enter into business. I have the study of history and the amusement of painting to afford my mind agreeable occupation. Having served nearly all my grownup life in great offices of state, I find freedom and leisure very pleasant.

I mean to devote the rest of my public life to giving the best service I can and the fruits of my experience to my fellow countrymen, and to say what I think and feel without, as the saying goes, "fear, favor, or affection." It surely is a good thing that there should be some people thus situated in these days when political organization and machinery are growing so much stronger than any individuals.

Political Future Uncertain.

I do not know whether I shall ever return to public office again. If I do it will not be for any desire for its sweets or circumstances, but only because I am sure that it is my duty, and if I see my way to have things managed as I think they ought to be, I value greatly the honor of sitting in parliament under these conditions for a great broad minded and courageous constituency.

Although I am now ending the last article of this series, I do not propose to write "finis" at the bottom, but rather the buoyant words: "To be continued in our next."

"SHOPPING NEWS" ASKS THAT COURT STAY INJUNCTION

After listening to oral arguments on the appeal of Shopping News, Inc., and Goldblatt Bros., Inc., from a temporary injunction issued Wednesday by Superior Judge Harry A. Lewis, the first division of the Illinois Appellate court yesterday continued the hearing until Monday. The court ruled that Attorney Samuel A. Ettelson, representing a property owner who obtained the injunction, must file by then a written answer to the defendants' petition for a stay.

The injunction prohibits the defendants from distributing the Downtown Shopping News, and Goldblatt Bros. Shopping News except in such manner that the two publications cannot be scattered by the wind and thus litter the streets and alleys.

Appeal from the injunction was taken on the plea that it is injurious to the business of the publishers and distributing agencies, who directly and indirectly employ 4,000 persons. The defendants deny the plaintif's allegation that the present method of distribution constitutes a common law menace and a violation of the Chicago ordinances. Yesterday's arguments were heard by Presiding Justice John M. O'Connor and Justices William H. McSurely and David F. Machett.

THREE ARRESTED AS FAKE CHARITY FUND SOLICITORS

Three men, alleged to have solicited funds from numerous Chicagoans on the false pretense that the money was to go to charity, were arrested by Lieut. John Howe and his detective bureau squad yesterday in an office at 201 North Wells street. They are Coleman Lochtan, 28 years old, 1535 South California avenue; Bertram Grossman, 35, and Harry Lichten, 31, who gave only the office address.

Lieut. Howe said that there had been numerous complaints of solicitations for the "Mental Aid society," which the promoters declared was sponsoring a dance to be given in the Congress hotel April 28. The lieutenant added that they carried forged credentials from prominent persons. Lichten was listed as president, Lochtan as chairman of the board, and Grossman as treasurer of the "society."

Doctor Robbed of $400 During an Operation

Rock Hills, Ill., March 15.—[Special.]—While Dr. W. E. Allen was performing an emergency operation at St. Anthony's hospital today his locker was rifled and his billfold, which he had left in his trousers pocket, was emptied of $400.

DIONNES ACT TO KEEP FIVE BABIES FROM THE KING

Move In with Them as Guardian Bill Passes.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CALLANDER, Ont., March 15.—Passage today of the "quintuplet guardianship" bill by the Ontario legislature, designed to make the five Dionne sisters specia. wards "of His Majesty the King" produced an immediate reaction here this afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, parents of the famous babies, packed up and moved with two bags full of belongings from their home right into the "hospital" where their daughters are cared for, 100 yards away.

The Dionnes stayed there about two hours, then as suddenly as they had entered, departed. Their decision to depart followed a mysterious conference with Constable Snail of North Bay, a provincial officer, who arrived at the hospital shortly after the parents moved in.

Protest Legislature's Action.

The "hospital invasion" was presumably an attempt by the Dionnes to take possession of their babies as a dramatic protest against the action of the Ontario legislature which would place the quintuplets—9 months and 15 days old today—under the control of David A. Croll, Ontario minister of welfare, until their 18th birthday.

The Dionne parents were reported to have announced their intention previously of establishing themselves in the home of their babies.

Little Opposition to Bill.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TORONTO, March 15.—The Ontario legislature today passed the "Dionne quintuplet guardianship act of 1935" on third reading with little opposition. The bill, which will make the famous sisters guardians of King George as represented by David A. Croll, minister of welfare, will become law upon the signature of Lieut. Gov. Herbert A. Bruce.

The bill passed second reading yesterday with two amendments offered by the conservative opposition being easily defeated.

PIPER TO TEACH PRINCE OF WALES BAGPIPE TRICKS

LONDON, March 15.—(AP)—The prince of Wales is brushing up on his bagpiping.

Piper Fletcher, young Glasgow Scots guardsman, has received an appointment as piper at St. James's palace, where he will instruct the prince in the advanced technique of bagpipe playing.

Piper Fletcher was selected for the post by Pipe Major Alexander MacDonald of the First Scots guard some weeks ago when the prince sent the score of his slow march for bagpipes to the regiment and asked that an experienced player be placed at his service for six months.

PERIL OF FLOOD LESS SERIOUS IN PART OF STATE

Fear More Rain in the Ohio Valley.

Cairo, Ill., March 15.—[Special.]—Flood conditions were alleviated in southern Illinois tonight, but the situation still was serious in southeastern Missouri and Arkansas where the Red Cross estimated 13,000 are homeless. Threat of rain in the Ohio river valley caused apprehension there.

Despite flood condition elsewher in the valleys, Cairo never has been in danger, being protected against sixty feet of water. The present rise leaves a wide margin of safety.

Army engineers said the flood was near its crest in the upper Mississippi basin. They predicted the great river would start falling next week unless it is again swollen by further rains.

Levee at Kennett Breaks.

A levee on the St. Francis river at Kennett, Mo., collapsed, driving 600 families from their homes.

Several hundred men who had battled through the night to save the levee were ordered off duty to warn residents. They spread the alarm in time to prevent loss of life and to save most of the livestock.

At Moark, Ark., 650 persons were forced to evacuate their homes when a levee crumbled.

Land Still Under Water.

The danger was lessening in southern Illinois, though thousands of acres of land still are under water. In Saline county, 40 per cent of which was under water in midweek, residents were moving back home as the inundated areas dried speedily.

LAWLESS RELIEF.

The courageous demand of the Illinois legislature for the facts regarding relief expenditures has already produced one notable result. It has brought the admission that the federal funds are distributed among the states in purely arbitrary fashion. An unnamed "expert on taxation and public finance" determines what each state must raise. When this burocrat tells a state to raise a certain sum to supplement the federal grant the state is expected to obey orders without question and without complaint.

"There is no established uniform formula for arriving at these amounts for the various states," says the official declaration of policy forwarded to the legislature by Gov. Horner. This is not Mr. Horner's statement but the official pronouncement of the Federal Relief administration itself. It constitutes an admission the importance of which cannot be exaggerated. The Illinois legislature has suceeded in wringing from the federal officials the first plain statement they have made of how they go about the business of giving away other people's money.

A thousand years of constitutional growth in England and America resulted in the substitution of the "established uniform formula"—which is to say law—for the arbitrary acts of the sovereign. Now the fruit of that thousand years of struggle has been thrown in the ash can. The sovereign is again enthroned. He has ordered his subjects in Illinois to levy 36 million dollars in taxes and to apply the proceeds where and how he commands.

Even in the presence of law abuses of the taxing and appropriating power can and do arise. In the absence of law abuses cannot be avoided. The use of relief funds to pay political debts and build political machines is already notorious.

Where there is no law to restrain them, men of the stripe of Jim Farley come into their own. Mr. Farley has an "established uniform formula" and it is a simple one. The money for the present is to be distributed in a fashion to assure control of the Democratic convention in 1936. When that objective has been achieved the next effort will be to buy the election at the expense of the taxpayers.

How the relief money is being used in Illinois was indicated only the other day when it was shown that one company had received orders for $106,000 worth of lumber. Competitive bids were not called for. The law requires competitive bidding for all purchases by the state of $500 or more, but by ordering the lumber in lots of less than $500 the requirement was dodged.

There is plenty of evidence already in hand to show that the relief administration is rotten with favoritism. The Illinois legislature has performed a service of the greatest value to the nation in exposing the lawless system which now prevails. Courage and common sense won that victory, and, if persisted in, will force the relief administration to mend its ways.

OBSTRUCTING AIR CONDITIONING.

Blocking the growth of a new industry, which will employ thousands of wage earners, may be advantageous to a few union bosses but can hardly be justified from the standpoint of labor or that of the public now carrying the staggering burden of unemployed relief.

It is the air conditioning industry that, according to contractors engaged in it, has run into this obstruction in the demand of union officials that a union engineer shall be assigned permanently to supervise every air conditioning plant, including those in small motion picture theaters. It has been found that of 327 motion picture houses only 70 are now conditioned. The industry is now ready to supply the small theaters, but it finds that the small theater is unwilling or unable to add to its pay roll an engineer to be paid $39.75 for a forty hour week.

Three important interests ought to be considered in this controversy. One is that of the wage earners who would find employment in the development of air conditioning on the largest possible scale. The possibilities of this new industry are obviously very great. Another consideration is that of the motion picture public, a very large part of the American people, who have a substantial interest in the improvement of the motion picture audience room and would find air conditioning an important addition to their comfort and, therefore, to their enjoyment of the movie programs. Third, there is the general public which would derive benefit directly and indirectly from the contribution this new industry can make to business recovery.

If all these interests are given proper consideration, there will be a reasonable adjustment of this controversy. The requirements imposed by the union officials will be brought within reasonable limits compatible with the economic conditions of the smaller theaters. If unreasonable demands that restrict the wide use of air conditioning are insisted upon, it will expose a shortsighted selfishness in the union officials responsible for the obstruction of a great public benefit and public opinion will properly resent it.

A TERRIBLE RECORD.

Each day the hands of the clock of automobile deaths, published in THE TRIBUNE, move forward. This terrible record of death and mutilation is intended to serve as a reminder to the community that it is neglecting the only known means of preventing highway accidents. Ninety-eight per cent of the fatal accidents could not occur on elevated highways. There is no lack of money to build such roads. If the taxes now collected from motorists were properly spent, all the elevated roads needed to make Chicago streets safer than those of any other great city could be built within a few years with money to spare.

THE LENGTHENING PERSPECTIVE OF HISTORY.

Because it has to do with the Bible, a more general and eager attention will be given to the latest archæological discovery than to most additions to our knowledge of antiquity. Theologically, the discovery can hardly have any importance except with individuals who think the authority of the Bible as a religious guide and influence may be compromised by historical inaccuracies or supported by evidence of its historic truth. The records found in southern Palestine are of value as verifying the Bible record but as reported in the news add nothing new to our knowledge.

Nevertheless, they call attention to the remarkable expansion of the historical horizon accomplished by archæological research in this generation. Prof. Breasted, who has taken such an important part in this accomplishment, has said that this research has carried back the development of human arts at least fifty thousand and perhaps two hundred thousand years. "Even as recorded in written documents, modern discovery in the orient has placed behind the period of human history as formerly known to us another period equally long, thus doubling the length of the historic age." The writer of general history finds today that he must give much more space to the story of man before the Greeks than his predecessors even of the last generation. Prof. Breasted illustrates this in citing the "History of Antiquity" written by the leading historian of that period of our day, Eduard Meyer, who devoted six hundred and nineteen pages to the orient in the first edition of his work published in 1884, while in the third edition, which began to appear in 1913, less than half of the portion devoted to the orient occupied eleven hundred and fifty pages. When completed Dr. Breasted estimated it would occupy twenty-four or twenty-five hundred pages, or about four times its original length.

Textbooks of general history used to deal very cavalierly with the oriental civilizations and virtually began with the Greek. Wells did a service to the general reader by calling attention to our lack of knowledge of the long story of Chinese civilization and of the races of central Asia. But it is in the Near East that archæological research has brought into our view a background steadily growing in significance for us. The Englishman Evans, for example, has brought into the picture an entire civilization, the Minoan, hitherto only dimly seen but now recognized as having important relations to Greek evolution. Research in Egypt and in Babylonia has brought these once powerful civilizations into relation to the course of our own historic development. The Hittite civilization is beginning to emerge and throughout the Near East the outlines of man's life before the rise of the classic civilizations, Greece and Rome, are being rapidly filled in. We are learning now of influences and interrelations which preceded and entered into the classical world and must be taken into account if we are to gain understanding of man's career and of the vast structure of antique civilization which rose and fell about the shores of the Mediterranean.

Editorial of the Day

CONCISE EXPRESSION.

[Sioux City Journal.]

Good English, in both spoken and written forms, is vanishing, according to J. Dover Wilson, professor of education at King's college, London university. He has found that the art of concise expression is lost through the use of too much jargon. He also laments the use of trite expressions. [Let a good many of our foremost American speakers and writers be reminded that they are guilty of employing stereotyped, hackneyed phrases.]

Prof. Wilson declared at a headmasters' conference in Harrow school that good English had become a rarity. Little of it, he says, is heard today in English homes. Englishmen, he declared, have lost the gift of concise expression. They no longer use the precise word, but prefer abstractions. The English professor offered some examples encountered in England. One may say "the individual" when one really means "this person," or "constitutes a leading feature" when all that is meant is "is conspicuous," or "emphatically" when "undoubtedly" would be better. In addition, Prof. Wilson objects to what he calls "reach me down" phrases. He says: "People never come up as Englishmen used to 'at the nick of time'; they 'appear at the psychological moment.'" They do not "sleep soundly"; they "sleep the sleep of the just." When they ask their friends to keep a secret they always say "tell it not in Gath."

However, Prof. Wilson does not complain without suggesting a remedy for all this. He says the cure does not lie in the classics, for "they are not coming back," but does lie in good teaching of good English in the schools. He thinks the teaching of English must take the place of Latin and must perform the function that Latin for centuries has performed.

One may add to that another suggestion. Let there be better English spoken in the home. Children learn good English when they hear it spoken every day. English is much easier for them in school if they hear it at home and are required to speak correctly. If Mr. Wilson would permit it, one might remind merely that as the twig is bent——

Prof. Wilson then said something that was delightful. Many men and women whose school days are far back in their past will like it. He was quite convinced that there is "little relation between grammatical knowledge and a command of English." Quite the best English may be spoken and written by persons who could not cite grammar rules, but whose language through practice has become, so to speak, a part of them.

CULTURAL THOUGHT for the Day—March 16. Death of Richard Burbage, 1619. Burbage was one of the greatest actors that ever graced the English stage and the original star of Shakespeare's plays. Maybe Mr. Burbage as he looks over at Hollywood from the land beyond the Styx is rather glad that he did die in 1619. Especially when he sees the director on a movie lot grab a megaphone and yell at the star of the play walks out on the stage: "Look alive! Snap into it! Smile, damn yuh, smile! Now grab that gal; give her a kiss; hey, one kiss! this hain't no neckin' party. Now, slam in a chair, say 'Farewell forever!' and beat it. Say, you! do some actin'. Do you want to be a farmer all yer life?" When Mr. Burbage looks at this he probably gives three cheers that he acted in the old Globe theater in London away back in the sixteen hundreds, and he puts his arm through Bill Shakespeare's and they go over to Charon's bar and drink a few mugs of old musty ale as they declare to each other that the theater isn't what it used to be. And one of the worthwhile things to know about Burbage is his epitaph. It's one of the greatest epitaphs ever written. You can see it today on his simple tomb in St. Leonard's church, Shoreditch—"Exit Burbage." The nearest we ever came to as good an epitaph as that is the one that a western town carved on the monument in memory of a much liked cowboy—"He Done His Dammest."

WHEN NO BIRDS SING.

When no birds sing—how could they call
To joy from trees so stark and bare?—
When no birds sing, in winter's pall,
Shall we despair?

All nature wears a cloak of black,
The stream flows gloomily along,
But shall we weep, must we too lack
The boon of song?

Have we no garnered memories
From springs that were, from summers past—
Of golden gardens, flowering trees?
Let us hold fast

To all the gifts of yesterday
Until our hearts rejoice once more
In fresh beatitudes of May,
In springtime lore.

For now, athwart the winter waste,
The god of beauty is at work;
He toils all hours, yet will not haste—
Nor will he shirk.

Rejoice! let every heart be strong,
Let hope mount up on eager wing:
The earth prepares for mighty song—
Though no birds sing.

IT MAY NOT BE exactly true that you can go out to Kansas in the hot days of August and listen to the corn growing, but, by gravy, you can walk past any grocery store or butcher shop these days and be almost deafened by the queer, buzzing, jumping sounds you hear inside. That's the prices going up.

IT MIGHT be a good idea to have the prevailing wage scale beaten (if it hasn't been already; see front page). It would be a shame to have that four billion eight hundred million just lie there in a pile and not be touched because the law had said it could only be paid out at the prevailing wage scale and so many factories and things had shut down that there wasn't any wage scale prevailing. You never can tell; lots of things happen these days that we didn't expect the day before yesterday.

We'll Steal Their Nails and Hammers.

Sir: I would like to make one amendment to the title of your new reform organization. Please include "sleeping car porters"—making the title read "League for Making Housemaids and Sleeping Car Porters Stop Tucking In the Blankets So Doggone Tight on the Bed or the Berth." "The lady I work for" says that when I leave the bed in the morning it looks as if a dog had slept in it. Well—a dog knows how to sleep. If you notice, a dog will fold both his fore propellers together, rest his brain box on his front shoulder, and he is dead to the world. But my special objective is the sleeping car porter. They cover you with a couple of woolen boards and strait-jacket you to the mattress so that you have a deuce of a time trying to pull the blankets under your propellers. Grab the sleeping car porters. Make 'em quit nailing those blankets to the berth.

A ROBOT is going to be trusted to pilot an airplane all alone to Honolulu. I wish that lots of these auto drivers that hog the middle line would let a robot drive their cars. That robot would keep right over on the side of the road where he belonged and if anybody complimented him on his careful driving and punched the right button he would squeak out: "Well, I may be only a robot, but I'm no hog."

GANGSTER.

Where lies the blame?
This visage, scarred and saturnine,
Once wore the name
Of innocence, like yours and mine.
What twist of circumstance,
Neglect or counterplot,
Transformed this countenance
Into Iscariot?
What aim misunderstood
Has forged an iron bar
Between potential brotherhood
And an evil star?
For punishment of shame,
Too late the futile tear.
Where lies the blame?
Our conscience answers: Here.

FOOD REQUIREMENTS OF YOUNG CHILDREN.

Do we need to store up food in our bodies as squirrels store nuts or bees honey? Adults do not, but children do. They must put aside in the form of tissue, bone, and blood enough food so that normal growth shall be maintained. In other words, children must receive more food than their operating and exercise requirements.

Some children store as much food as they use, and the following figures (per pound of body weight) may be regarded as average: First of all, 20 to 25 calories will be needed for basal metabolism or operation of the body; 10 to 20 for growth; 10 to 15 for muscular activity; 2 to 3 for the work of digestion; while 4 to 6 will be lost through the intestinal tract. The young child needs more calories per pound of body weight than the older child. Very young infants require approximately 55 calories per pound, but when they are a few months older only 45 calories per pound will be needed.

Protein is understood to be an excellent food, and breast milk contains a lactalbumin which is a perfect protein for the infant's nutrition and growth. Cow's milk, although very valuable, is poor in certain protein constituents. If cow's milk is given it should be pasteurized unless it comes from a certified dairy. Furthermore, it must be modified in order to make it more digestible and to secure a more powdery curd. For this purpose lactic acid or lemon juice is used. Since lactic acid is difficult to prepare, lemon juice is an excellent substitute as, with this substance, the curds formed are very fine. A recently reported group of infants fed on lemon juice and evaporated milk showed striking results in absence of intestinal upsets.

Carbohydrates (starches and sugars) need not be high. While approximately half an ounce of protein will be required for each pound of body weight, the amount of carbohydrate may be as low as one-twenty-fifth of an ounce, although most children can take from one-eighth to one-fourth of an ounce without difficulty. Too much carbohydrate often leads to diarrhea and sometimes the infant is flabby, although he may look fat and well. Such children possess very little resistance to infection.

Fats are the most important source of heat and energy, and the normal breast fed infant receives about half his calories as fat. It was found impossible to rear infants on a fat free diet, as the fat was needed to carry the fat-soluble vitamins, for example, A and D. A diet poor in fat, therefore, leads to a vitamin deficiency.

Of the vitamins, A is present in fats and hence is abundant in milk. B is water-soluble and is present in brewer's yeast, and its absence is sometimes accompanied by loss of appetite followed by undernourishment. C is the scurvy preventing vitamin and is found in oranges and lemons. The use of orange and lemon juice may be begun early and gradually increased in amount. Vitamin D plays a positive rôle in the development of bones. If there seems to be a vitamin deficiency the use of viosterol or cod liver oil may be started as early as the second week following birth.

Too little attention is paid to the mineral demands of the growing child. Upon an adequate supply of minerals depend the growth of bone and the development of a proper amount and standard of blood and of digestive tissues. Important salts are the chlorides and phosphates of sodium, potassium, calcium (lime), magnesium, and iron.

Mothers may know when their children are doing well by a steady gain in weight. Tables and figures, however, may not give us a clear picture of the progress that the child should make, as much depends upon whether he tends to be large or small. These charts must be considered as average guides, and no mother should attempt to make her child conform exactly to the figures of any table.

HODGKIN'S DISEASE.

G. S. M. writes: What is Hodgkin's disease? What is the treatment? Is it always fatal?

REPLY.

Hodgkin's disease is characterized by enlargement of the lymph glands, usually beginning in the neck. Sometimes the swelling begins on one side; later both sides are involved. The glands are not painful or tender. As the disease progresses the glands under the arm, in the groin, and in other parts of the body may become involved. In about half the cases the spleen is enlarged. There is usually marked anemia. The cause is unknown, although many authorities believe [but without positive proof] that infection is responsible. It is nearly always fatal in from two to five years. The patient may be made fairly comfortable through the use of X-ray and certain medication, particularly arsenic.

PROPERTY TRANSFER.

Chicago, March 2.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I am a widow with eight children, all of age. I own property which I conveyed to the youngest child, whom I am making my home with. The agent who conveyed the property to my youngest child [1] told me I had to get quitclaim deeds from all my children, which they all agreed and signed eight quitclaim deeds. I had seven of them put on record and the eighth [2] is kept by the trust company. They refuse to give it up for record. Please advise if I am entitled to the eighth one or should the trust company keep it for their security as they claim? M. R.

1. This statement makes it seem probable that the property originally belonged to your husband. If you really own the property as stated in your second sentence, we see no reason why quitclaims from your children would be necessary, but if it belonged to your husband, then up his death it would have descended to you and your children.

2. The title company is in a better position to explain than we are why they are retaining this deed. It seems probable that you are holding back material facts on this point as on the above point.

FLYING STORIES

By Test Pilot Jim Collins

THE EMPTY TANK.

A friend of mine got an aerial mapping job last summer. He had to fly at 20,000 feet to take the pictures. Some pilots can stand more altitude than others, but my friend didn't know how much he could stand because he had never flown that high. He decided he had better take oxygen with him, just in case.

His mechanic got a cylinder of oxygen for him and he took off. He felt pretty groggy at 18,000 feet, reached down, got the hose, put it in his mouth, turned on the valve, and took a whiff of oxygen. He couldn't hear the hissing of the stuff escaping because the motor noise drowned it out.

He perked up immediately. The sky brightened, everything became clearer to him, and he went on up to 20,000 feet. Every once in a while he would feel low and reach down and get himself another whiff of oxygen and feel all right again for a while.

He didn't say anything to his mechanic, but his mechanic decided for himself a few days later that the oxygen was probably getting low in that tank and that he would need another soon. He decided to put a new one in ahead of time to forestall the possibility of running completely out in the air.

He brought a new tank out and decided to test it before he put it in the ship. He opened the valve and nothing happened. The tank was empty.

He took it back to the hangar and discovered that the previous tank my friend had been flying on had come out of the same bin and had been empty all along.

He got a good one and put it in the ship and didn't say anything about the incident. My friend said that the next time he took a whiff of oxygen it almost knocked him out of his seat and convinced him that he had a much better imagination than he ever thought he had.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

TOO SMART OR TOO DUMB!

Chicago, March 10.—I have been without employment for the past four years, have forfeited all my life insurance and a lot of my tangible belongings of the past, and have mortgaged my name and future income to repay those who have made it possible for me to live during the current depression. Certainly this should qualify me for charter membership in the Union for Social Justice and the share the wealth movements, and find me leading the parade with a Blue Eagle banner among the discontented masses. My aggregate assets have always required a microscope to view and I have not had very much education as measured by academic training.

I am at a loss to know whether I am too smart or too dumb to be susceptible to the Utopian panaceas offered us by the Hughy Lonsons and the Huey Coughlins. I believe I know a little about human nature, what two and two add up to, and something of world history and events.

I do not believe that poker played for peppermints or matches in lieu of pennies and dimes will ever prove a very popular game. I believe if we had inaugurated a share the wealth setup at any time in the last 150 years this letter would be penned from a log cabin, and automobiles, had they miraculously appeared in spite of Huey and the other Hooey, would be selling for $15,000 for the cheapest 4 cylinder models. I hold no brief for the Morgans, Rockefellers, et al., but I have the horse sense to know that the only reason that men like Julius Cæsar, and down through history to the advent of Henry Ford, did not have an automobile, radio and other luxuries common to us all today was because the sky as the limit on wealth was not assured in Europe and elsewhere as it has been in republican and capitalistic U. S. A.

They have held highly successful revolutions in Russia, Germany, Italy, Cuba, Mexico, etc., and I do not see why the discontents think we might have a better or more pleasant one here. As far as I know there has been no great emigration from U. S. A. to any of those countries recently, and I don't believe the cost of the ticket has held it up. Surely those clamoring for a new order, rather than a few necessary but slight patches to the old, should find all they desire in any of the above countries, and wouldn't it be pleasanter to them to buy the ticket and leave the rest of us behind to enjoy being exploited? C. T.

CLEANERS AND DYERS.

Joliet, Ill., March 12.—Your editorial on "An Industry of Lawbreakers" is about as correct a picture as can be painted of the situation. However, your remedy for this problem is unjust.

Seventy-five per cent of the cleaners in Chicago are conscientious, law abiding, God fearing citizens, and to punish them for the evils of others wouldn't be fair. The disturbances in the industry are created by the 25 per cent of racketeering cleaners who crept into the industry, plus greedy, grafting union officials, plus the Capone and Moran gangs.

To correct this deplorable condition in the industry is not to advise the public to get along without the service, but rather to be more discriminating as to who their cleaner is and refuse to patronize racketeering elements.

A CLEANER.

SPANK 'EM.

Chicago, March 11.—The editorial "Why Not Spank Them?" in Saturday's TRIBUNE, offers a most splendid suggestion. It is about time society takes measures to stop crime in the beginning, and this can easily be done if the judges would adopt the well known, old fashioned way of dealing with youthful offenders.

A spanked fellow is never a hero, and you may rest assured that it will be a long time before he will be in conflict with the law again.

Europe has not many of these smart-alec criminals—the writer is a former policeman in Europe and knows whereof he speaks—and the reason is that young fellows of this type, when brought before a magistrate are promptly taken to a little soundproof room in the police station where the only furniture is a couch and a solid birch rod. Without much formality everything is removed which will prevent the offender from receiving the full benefit of the switches, and for the first two weeks a certain part of his body looks like a cubistic painting.

This is the way to show these smarties that crime does not pay, and the sooner we adopt the method, the sooner we will be able to curb crime in this country.

FRANK MESSERSCHMIDT.

A COUNTRY DOCTOR PRESCRIBES.

West Union, Ia., March 12.—Now that the three leading verbose egomaniacs of the country have vented their spleens on each other, let's forget about Pie-eyed Pipers, Cream Puff Generals, and Kingfishes and have something constructive. When children have habit spasms we spank them and send them to bed. I am just a plain country doctor, but it seems to me what Uncle Sam needs the most right now is a little scientific neglect. C. D. MERCER, M. D.

QUESTION FOR HOARDERS.

Chicago, March 11.—There is no law against the storage of platinum and since its cost in the form of bars or plates [its most merchantable form] approximates that of gold, no more vault space is necessary than for the prohibited metal. I wonder if those who are by nature gold hoarders have carefully considered this substitute.

HOARDER.

ON AND OFF RELIEF.

Chicago, March 13.—I have noted with interest a letter in this morning's TRIBUNE from Mr. Willis A. Overholser, general chairman, better housing campaign, Libertyville-Mundelein district, in which it is stated that "those on relief are instructed to notify the relief administration upon obtaining private employment, and that, regardless of whether it is known how long the private employment may last, the name of any relief client so employed is immediately and completely stricken from the relief rolls and the client cannot get back on without making out an entirely new application and going through the same procedure as though he had never been on relief."

For your information the Illinois Emergency Relief commission issued an official bulletin on March 4, 1935, in which it gave the following ruling with respect to the reopening of cases closed on account of employment:

"In case a client is removed from relief due to acceptance by him of bona fide employment and such client reapplies for relief within six months of the date on which he went to work he shall be given relief for one month only upon proof that he is involuntarily unemployed. During the month covered by this initial order further investigation of the case should be conducted and relief continued or discontinued after the first month on exactly the same basis prevailing for all clients.

"Under the above plan the cases of the client obtaining employment will be closed according to the procedure now in effect in the office for closing cases. In case of giving one month's relief under the above plan the case should be reopened temporarily pending final decision during the month.

"The purpose of this plan is to encourage clients to accept bona fide employment with assurance that in case such employment proves temporary their standing as relief clients will not be jeopardized."

WILFRED S. REYNOLDS,
Executive Secretary Illinois Emergency Relief Commission.

IDEA.

Chicago, March 13.—I was happy to see in Arthur Evans' article of March 12 that some one dares to write about toys at any time other than Christmas. If a column in THE TRIBUNE, Chicago's best home newspaper, were devoted to games for adults and children, to keep them interested in games all the year round, the stores and manufacturers would be happy to cooperate, and it would no doubt be welcomed and indorsed by sponsors of the anti-crime movement, playgrounds, clubs, churches, home lovers, and youth movement groups. DIVORCE DENIED IN "SWAP" CASE; LOSE CHILDREN

Husband Called Conniver at Wife's Misconduct.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., March 15.—[Special.]—Wife swapping as admitted on the witness stand by some of the principals and denied by others in the quadrangular tangle of the Walter Emerson's and Barton Sewell's case received no aid today.

MRS. JANE EMERSON.

Superior Judge Ben Lindsey

ruled none of the principals who asked for a divorce had demonstrated a right to receive one. The decision embraced the judge's observations on marriage and censured all four parties in the sensational case.

Besides this the judge, after talking matters over with eleven year old Walter Emerson Jr., eldest of Emerson's three boys, removed them from custody of their parents and placed them in custody of their maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Scholtz of Denver, who gave sorrowful testimoney concerning their daughter and son-in-law during the trial.

Indiscretions Admitted.

Trial of the suit brought Mrs. Jane Scholtz Emerson's testimony confessing repeated indiscretions with the millionaire Sewell and Sewell's similar confession, topped by his expression of a desire to marry Mrs. Emerson.

Emerson denied his wife's charge that he had spent a night with Mrs. Sewell while Mrs. Emerson was with Sewell. Mrs. Sewell echoed Emerson's denial. Judge Lindsey found her guilty of "indiscretion, but not misconduct."

As to the Emersons, the judge stated: "Because of improper conduct of both parties under the law and evidence, the court has no alternative but to deny a divorce to either. The court finds the conduct of the parents in the circumstances given has been such that before further custody of the children be entrusted to either of them, disciplinary measures should be employed upon both. Therefore, the court asks that the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Scholtz, who already have contributed most to the support of this family, accept custody for the support of the children."

Judge Lindsey describes "the main issue in this divorce case" as "the misconduct of the wife of the plaintif, Walter W. Emerson, with the co-respondent, Barton Sewell."

Tells Husband's Duty.

"When a husband sees his wife in danger of becoming the victim of the blandishments and infatuation of another man, he must know that that man is a potential seducer of his wife," the decision goes on. "It is then the husband's duty to measure up to his own proper responsibilities in such a situation.

"Unless he does, he cannot come here with the clean hands he must have before this court will give him a divorce from his wife on the grounds of adultery." The judge declared Emerson consented to and connived at his wife's misconduct.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY NOT WHAT IT USED TO BE, IRISH ANCIENTS MOAN

LIMERICK, Irish Free State, March 15.—(AP)—They were gathering green shamrocks in Ireland today to honor good St. Patrick, but old timers morosely reflected that the modern 17th of March celebrations are not like those of yore. Even "Little Alfie"—Lord Mayor Alfie Byrne of Dublin—has gone to New York for Erin's big day, the ancients point out as they gloomily puff on their clay pipes.

"Shure, and his honor hadn't the heart in him," they say, "to stay home this year and see the way they celebrate the blessed saint's day. The old flare for celebrating is dying out and it's a sad day for Ireland."

Even in New York, Chicago, Glasgow, San Francisco, and Melbourne will do more honor to the sainted Patrick than Dublin, Cork, and Limerick, the oldsters complain. There was the time when on March 17 every Irishman worthy of the name pinned a bunch of shamrocks on his hat and went off to march in a parade, cheer the booming bands or carry a banner.

Then there were speeches, with those who had kissed the Blarney-stone knowing well how to breathe fire and brimstone against the ancient enemy—England. Finally there were sessions of "drowning the shamrock," and maybe a few cracked heads just from the exuberance of the occasion. By comparison, the old celebrants sigh, the current holiday observance is dull and drab indeed.

IRISH ASSEMBLE TODAY TO HONOR ANCIENT PATRON

Senators, Labor Chief Will Speak.

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

Diners and dancers will gather in loop hotels and other centers tonight, St. Patrick's eve, to honor the patron saint of Ireland. There will be speeches, too, and most every one will wear a sprig of shamrock.

Among the largest such functions will be the 34th annual banquet of the Irish Fellowship club at the Hotel Sherman, the annual party of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and ladies' auxiliary in the Morrison hotel, and the banquet of the Harmony club of Chicago at the Stevens.

Labor Chief to Speak.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is scheduled to address 2,500 persons attending the Harmony club banquet.

More than 1,500 are to attend the card party and dance of the Hibernians which will include a special program of Irish dances. Police Capt. Michael W. Delaney is president of the national organization, and has charge of the program.

At the Irish Fellowship club's banquet a thousand persons will hear United States Senator Edward R. Burke of Nebraska, United States Senator Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania, and Gov. Horner. Daniel J. McGrath, consul for the Irish Free State, will be a guest.

Fashion Show in Palmer House.

A photographers' ball and frolic with a fashion revue will be held at the Palmer house. A dinner-dance will be given by the Leofourths club at the Congress and the Harps club at the Hotel La Salle. Several college sorority and fraternity St. Patrick dances are scheduled.

Perhaps the largest of the St. Patrick day events will be the dance to be given by the United Celtic American societies at the Merry Garden ballroom Sunday night. Real shamrocks have been imported from Ireland and will be distributed among the guests.

Maria Alba, Movie Actress, Divorces Theatrical Agent

Los Angeles, Cal., March 15.—[Special.]—The charge of "indifference" brought against her husband David B. Todd, Jr., theatrical agent, brought a divorce for Maria Alba, movie actress, in Superior court here today. The actress' sister, Teresa Casajuana, dancer, recently arrived from Spain, corroborated the testimony. Miss Alba will receive $150 monthly alimony.

These Novels Point Ways to Happier Living

Lloyd Douglas, G. B. Stern Are the Authors.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Green Light," by Lloyd C. Douglas. [Houghton Mifflin]. Published on Tuesday.

"Shining and Free," by G. B. Stern. [Knopf]. Published on Monday.

AT first glance two more dissimilar novels could scarcely have been born within twenty-four hours of one another, unless their inevitable adornment of the best seller list could be taken as similarity.

The one an "uplift" novel, the other a rejuvenation of one of the most amusing characters in modern fiction, the Matriarch. Most of us would say that the pleased readers of one would hate the other. But we might be wrong. Because they have one characteristic in common. They both, whatever their literary merits and faults, have a "message of cheer" . . . the one frankly, the other by roundabout implication, but both undeniable. Readers who are always wanting something to make life more endurable for them will find in both of them manna.

The manna in "Green Light" is as obvious and as abundant as oranges on a scientifically tended tree in the Indian river district. The motivating—although not the leading—character in it is the Dean of Trinity Cathedral, crippled as a young man by infantile paralysis at the beginning of his inevitably brilliant career as he was about to marry and take his first important post.

Months on his back with his future as a rector ruined, and his fiancée marrying his best friend, gave him a philosophy of life which he translated into different terms to suit different needs, "the successful onward push of the human procession is the important thing, after all: far more important than any of the trifling ups and downs of the individuals . . . sometimes I like to think of civilization as a ship. That ship, my friend, is more important than any member of the crew," he says, or "I know that I am destiny's darling . . . I know! In spite of all the little detainments, disappointments, disillusionments—I get the lucky breaks! I get the signal to go forward! I have been delayed—long—long—long—but—at length—I get the GREEN LIGHT" . . . or after pointing out how easy it seems to drive a car until one is in trafic, "that's all there is to driving a car: the other people."

The Dean from uselessness emerged into the most useful man in his community . . . he became, as he expressed it to a grateful suppliant who said talking to him is "like coming to a fountain when you're very thirsty," "I am not the fountain. I just lend you my cup."

What became of the wrecked lives that came to him to be mended is the theme of the book. A young doctor who had taken the blame for a bungled operation rather than expose the older surgeon whom he loved, a young girl whose mother had died from that bungling, a young woman who had given up love for duty, a college professor whose sister had married her fiancé almost at the altar at which she expected to find happiness, another college professor whose wife had died are not all but the principal of the characters who recover from [after an effort] their personal unhappiness.

"Green Light" is primarily and in every page a "comforting" novel. It is a moral [a philosophy] pointed by imagined human characters rather than characters vividly alive in their own literary right living out an inevitable plan. Its prime interest is its moral. And everything works out perfectly for every one in the end.

But despite its sure rush to the happy goal, "Green Light" has not that dripping sentimentality that makes many readers jeer at most books of cheer. There is something of the simple faith in it that has been proclaimed to be more than Norman blood.

Utterly unlike "Green Light," sophisticated, slightly satirical, much more literary and apparently with no message other than that zest is a born not acquired blessing, "Shining and Free" would seem to have no contact at all with Dr. Douglas' tale of spiritual rejuvenation.

But there is a philosophy of life in "Shining and Free" as well as in "Green Light" . . . subtly buried under swiftly moving events, but hinted at in the title.

"Shining and Free" is the story of the Anastasia Rakonitz who made "The Matriarch" a book that no one can forget; Anastasia, aged 88 [on the morrow] in one of her "bad spells" when, penniless, but unshaken in her expansive ideas about the social duties of the Czelovars she drags to her daughter's humble house, for a party, waitresses and their boy friends, strange English dotards with Spanish names, administers a pound's worth of spring flowers and a whisky poultice to a suffering maid who has just given notice because she can't stand the old woman's vagaries, and leaves at dawn for an excursion to Brighton to get a commode that has been left her.

The extravagances of the evening are topped by the extravagances of the Brighton trip from which she returns neither sadder nor wiser, but strangely subdued, to be welcomed by a daughter who, after putting her out of the house, welcomes her with a recrudescence of thrill in her vivid old mother's zest for life.

The adventures of Anastasia Rakonitz on the day before her 88th birthday are highly comic, but they are, also, highly stimulating. Old age, even the very young will say to themselves, can't be menacing if there are in the world Anastasia Rakonitzes.

And so, although it isn't at all a book of cheer on its face, "Shining and Free" has in its pages something hilariously cheering, just as "Green Light" has something solemnly cheering. It depends on the reader's previous condition of literary servitude which brand of cheer he elects.

Their Books Reviewed Today

G. B. Stern (left) and Lloyd C. Douglas, both writers of best sellers (in different fields), whose latest novels were published and are reviewed this week. "Shining and Free" tells the story of one night and day in the eighty-eighth year of "The Matriarch." Dr. Douglas' "Green Light" fictionally propounds a philosophy of life.

Mystery of the Week

BY MORTIMER QUICK

In "Five Silver Buddhas" [Dutton] the ingenious Harry Stephen Keeler has concocted another ingenious story of Chicago and its less desirable citizens, the best, in my opinion, to emerge from what must be his specially constructed typewriter, for how else could he turn them out so fast? He has a specially constructed brain, too, which from the wildest set of circumstances achieves a certain order.

This time five little Chinese figures stolen from our own Art institute implacably deliver their five separate jinxes, but one amongst them packs good luck as well as bad. A newspaper man is the hero who, in pursuit of his ladylove, mixes himself up in far flung plots. But that is only part of the story, and what those Buddhas do to their unfortunate other owners is pretty grim and amusing. It is all confusing, hard boiled, and sentimental, beside being good, fast reading. I think you will like it.

Another good one is "The Paper-Chase Mystery" [H. C. Kinsey], by A. Fielding. It begins with bob sledding in the Tyrol and comes up in London with Scotland Yard taking a hand. It boasts a number of well contrived murders and some very neat counterfeiting, and up to the final pages gives you a run for your money.

But this week's particular nugget is the "Third Omnibus of Crime" [Coward-McCann], compiled by Dorothy L. Sayers, and crowding into another rich, fat volume fifty odd short stories of crime, detection, and horror. Its introduction is not so long as those in the previous collections, but it comments as wisely upon the sort of stories which Mrs. Sayers both writes and reads. She points out that detective authors are all as good as gold, knowing, as they do, that inevitably the punishment fits the crime. She also suggests that crime writers are so adept at finding new and attractive murder methods that their lives are saddened by the cruder means usually employed by actual practitioners.

Here's Pleasant Story of Family Facing Poverty

"Arden Acres," by Jessica Nelson North.

"Arden Acres," by Jessica Nelson North. [Harcourt-Brace.]

EVER since most of us read "The Five Little Peppers and How They Grew" we have had a secret passion for stories about large families gay in the face of adversity. And ever since there has been so much adversity for everybody to be gay—or gloomy—about, man's natural interest in his fellow human's plight has been sharpened by his natural satisfaction in knowing that, even if he has a harelip, Neighbor Wumptiddle's cross-eye is a greater disfigurement.

Courage and a burden just a little heavier than one's own make an appealing character of anybody. "Friendliness" is as nearly the right word for the feeling a reader has for books of that kind as any other. Such books are "friendly" even when they are, like "February Hill," anything but. Incidentally, Jessica Nelson North's "Arden Acres" was, from the moment of its publication, compared to that startlingly popular first novel that delighted so many readers before [and since] Christmas. The books have nothing in common except that they are each about a family of children living in a shanty with their mother, who has blondined hair and an R. S. V. P. look, and their grandmother, who is a character, and their ineffectual father. That would make them seem very much alike, but they aren't. "February Hill" is raucous with ribald laughter. "Arden Acres" is as quiet as a smile. Courage in the face of poverty is in the pages of both of them, but in the one it is courage à la Rabelais, in the other courage after Jane Austen [to give them both more eminent remembrances than they possess]. "Arden Acres," incidentally, was finished and in the hands of an agent before "February Hill" was published, in case any of her readers might feel that Miss North was influenced by Victoria Lincoln's success. Just two cases of the spontaneous combustion of an idea.

"Arden Acres" is a subdivision fifty miles from Chicago, where Wednesday is relief day at the chain store, where the "inchers" manage somehow to live because "nobody starves," but where poverty has little glamor except for the reader.

"Arden Acres" is little more comfortable than was the cabbage patch that supported Mrs. Wiggs in the luxury to which she had been accustomed. But life goes on, the children thrive [until one of them gets tuberculosis], and without any sentimentality the book takes its pleasant course through tragedy and poverty . . . 1933 model of humankind. Of Time and The River

Sees Success for Love Story Set in India

Swinnerton Praises Novel by R. J. Minney.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—A novel which will be very popular in England this spring is R. J. Minney's "Distant Drums" [Chapman & Hall]. It is a book with a punch, a tale of love and business in India and in London, written by one who uses the telling phrase, keeps to the dramatic point, and cuts all verbage. It is the work of a practiced journalist who has been to the theater and to Hollywood and who knows what he is writing about.

Mr. Minney was editor of the Calcutta Englishman. When he returned home he edited Everybody's Weekly, which he made one of the most successful popular weeklies in the country. Then, after one or two experimental novels, he wrote a dramatic biography of Lord Clive, for which his knowledge of Indian life and history gave him particular assistance; and this book, for a reprint of which Lord Rothermere wrote a preface [so much did he admire it], made him well known to the reading public.

A dramatization of Clive's life story has been running in London until quite recently, and the film of the play has been a great success. Not content with authorship, however, Mr. Minney has joined the board of Chapman & Hall, the publishers of "Distant Drums," an dhis busy life will take on ever new activity.

As you would expect, "Distant Drums" shows the hand of one who never pauses. It goes quickly and vividly from its first page to its last page. It has such dramatic elements that one can see it as a play and film. It is exceedingly readable. And it should sell.

The firm of Chapman & Hall is also publishing this season the autobiography of one who is well known to Americans—Douglas Goldring. The book will be called "Odd Man Out." Mr. Goldring was at one time assistant editor of the English Review. He is a poet and journalist with a strong turn for satire; and he has known for years many of those, from James Elroy Flecker to Ford Madox Ford and Ezra Pound, who have latterly been much in the public eye. He is no flatterer. His book should be very, very frank; and it should be interesting to those who like to read about writers and their ways.

But Mr. Goldring is also a propagandist for peace, and his activity on behalf of peace has brought him a good deal of excitement. Accounts of this will be included in the autobiography, which is said to be "absolutely sincere."

An amusing contrast can be seen in two announcements by Macmillan & Co. The first is of a book called "Principles of Economic Planning," by G. D. H. Cole [who, as all the world must know, is the chief of the English Left Wing doctrinaires]; the second is of a book called "The Pleasures of Planning: a Criticism," by Ian MacDonald Horobin.

Mr. Horobin is a thorn in the flesh of the doctrinaires. He is an M. P., quick witted, and ruthless in destruction of nonsense.

"Biology for Everyman" Is Exciting Story of Science

"Biology for Everyman," by Sir J. Arthur Thomson [Dutton] contains over 650,000 words and 500 illustrations in two volumes of 1,600 pages, if such statistics interest you. What should interest you is that this outline is as complete and as exciting as the author's unforgettable "The Outline of Science," which opened up a new mental continent for most of us.

Meetings and Lectures

At the meeting of the Society of Midland Authors this noon at the Hotel Sherman Harriet Monroe of Poetry Magazine will be the guest of honor.

Alexander Woollcott, author of "While Rome Burns," will lecture on Wednesday evening at Mandel hall, University of Chicago. The subject of his lecture will be "The Mystery of Time."

Among the New Books

FICTION.

Don't You Weep, Don't You Moan, by Richard Coleman [Macmillan], pictures the Negroes of Charleston.

The Hill of Lies, by Heinrich Mann [Dutton], tells of a young girl who is lifted out of her humble surroundings.

The Demon in the House, by Angela Thirkell [Smith & Haas], is a humorous story of a 12 year old boy with a natural gift for making disconcerting remarks.

Call It Sleep, by Henry Roth [Ballou], pictures the New York of the immigrants.

Fugitive, by Louise Redfield Peattie [Bobbs-Merrill], follows a beautiful and nameless young woman on her way to self-destruction.

Homestead, by Dale Eunson [Farrar & Rinehart], tells of a young couple who settles on a farm in the center of Montana in the early 1900s.

Forget, if You Can, by John Erskine [Bobbs-Merrill], shows what jealousy can do to ruin a very happy marriage.

Season Ticket, by Margaret Iles [Harpers], tells of six suburbanites who take the same train day in and day out.

Star of Empire, by Grant Lewi [Vanguard], depicts the experiences a man had building up his farm land through the middle west.

In the Shadow of Gold, by Paul Studer [Greenberg], portrays the adventures of a man who sets out to break the alleged grip of the international bankers on world affairs.

Ollie Miss, by George Henderson [Stokes], shows through the story of a woman the strength, beauty, power, and the weakness of a race.

NONFICTION.

Toward the Rising Sun, by William Gayley Simpson [Vanguard], is a statement of the author's philosophy and faith.

Understanding the Chinese, by William Martin [Harpers], presents China's case to the west.

The Glory Road, by Arthur Hopkins [Dutton], paints a vast picture of humanity on the canvas of time and space.

Norway Today, edited by Karl Fischer [Sverre Mortensen Forlag], contains over 400 photographs of modern Norway.

What Is American Literature? by Carl Van Doren [Morrow], defines the writers who are the American essence.

Government in a Planned Democracy, by Arthur N. Holcombe [Norton], shows how political planners and public business men can be made use of in our government.

Managing Your Mind, by Joseph Jastrow [Greenberg], is a guide to effective thinking.

The Popular Practice of Fraud, by T. Swann Harding [Longmans], examines the various phases of fraud in this country.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Marlborough, His Life and Times, by Winston S. Churchill [Scribner's], are the third and fourth volumes of a famous biography.

Elinor Wylie, by Nancy Hoyt [Bobbs-Merrill], gives impressions of a great poet by her sister.

Waiting for Nothing, by Tom Kromer [Knopf], tells the experiences of a young man thrown out of work by the depression.

The Wizard of Monte Carlo, by Count Corti [Dutton], tells the strange life of the man who built the two most famous gambling Meccas of the world, François Blanc.

Pilgrims of the Wild, by Grey Owl [Scribner's], is the story of one man's crusade against the forces of the Canadian wilderness.

ABOUT PLACES.

Spanish Raggle-Taggle, by Walter Starkie [Dutton], tells the adventures of the author with a fiddle in North Spain.

Berlin, Vienna, Brussels in Seven Days, by Arthur Milton [McBride], is a series of three little guides for people in a hurry.

Was It a Holiday, by Theodora Larocque Codman [Little-Brown], is an account of a journey through the wine districts of France.

To Nova Scotia, by T. Morris Longstreth [Appleton-Century], covers the scenic and historic high spots of both the Nova Scotian mainland and the Island of Cape Breton.

POETRY.

Turkey in the Straw, by MacKinlay Kantor [Coward-McCann], contains American ballads and primitive verse.

Sword Against the Breast, by Isabel Harriss Barr [Putnam], is of rare beauty.

Paul Bunyan, by Thomas G. Alvord Jr. [Boni], tells in verse the story of a legendary hero of the north woods.

Chorus for Survival, by Horace Gregory [Covici-Friede], is an unusual narrative poem.

"Earth Conquerors" Is Story of History's 9 Great Explorers

"Earth Conquerors; the Lives and Achievements of the Great Explorers," by J. Leslie Mitchell [Simon & Schuster], is a stunning story of nine outstanding world wanderers. Mr. Mitchell, a Scotchman, who also writes under the name of Lewis Grassic Gibbon [although the publicity department of S. & S. seems to think that they are two men and forwards the information that Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Gibbon have collaborated in this book], has given us a lusty life story of these nine giants of exploration: Leif Ericson, Marco Polo, Columbus, Cabeza de Vaca, Magellan, Vitus Bering, Mungo Park, Richard Burton, and Nansen. The format is unusually attractive, with many maps and striking sketches of the heroic nine.

Bolivian Letters.

Josephine Hoeppner Woods, college professor and world traveler, spent several years in South America, where her husband was a mining engineer. She tells her Bolivian and Peruvian experiences in "High Spots in the Andes" [Putnam]. The book is a collection of informative and interesting letters written to friends at home. It is illustrated with some of the finest travel photographs of the season.

THE STIRRING LIFE OF ENGLAND'S WARRIOR PRINCE . . .

The outstanding hero in England's Civil War; the first to use shock tactics in cavalry; the first Englishman to use mines in a siege, this fiery soldier seemed to bear a charmed life during 50 years spent in the thick of the fray, on land and sea. One of England's foremost biographers brings you this tensely fascinating chronicle of a headstrong, devil-may-care career.

BIBLE PENNED BY EYEWITNESSES, SCIENTIST SAYS

Traces Palestine Pottery to Time of Jeremiah.

JERUSALEM, March 15. — (AP) — Twelve pieces of broken pottery found on the site of ancient Lachish destroy the very foundations of biblical "higher criticism," Dr. E. L. Sukenik, professor of archæology at the Hebrew university of Jerusalem, said today.

Prof. Harry Torcznyer, expert on Semitic languages at the university, definitly ascribed the potsherds, with their inscriptions in the ancient Hebrew language, to the time of Jeremiah, 2,500 years ago.

Dr. J. L. Starkey, head of the Wellcome archæological research expedition, who found the potsherds at Tel Adduweir, ancient Lachish, several days ago, entrusted the task of deciphering the inscrptions to Prof. Torcznyer.

Written in Ordinary Ink.

The language and archæological experts agreed that the find was of the greatest importance. Prof. Torcznyer called it "the most valuable find ever made in the period of the first temple [Solomon's]". Dr. Sukenik called the potsherds the greatest discovery since the Siloam inscriptions in 1890.

A remarkable feature of them, Prof. Torcznyer asserted, is the fact that they appear to be written in ordinary ink. Dr. Sukenik declared their most amazing characteristic the fact that many of the words and names used are spelled exactly as they are in the traditional Masoretic text of the Pentateuch.

[The Masoretic text is the form of the Hebrew scripture as used today by Jews throughout the world.]

Find Same Spelling.

That the spelling found at Tel Adduweir corresponds exactly with that in use today would indicate, Dr. Sukenik declared, that the Bible was written by scribes during the time in which the events it chronicles actually occurred, and that the scribes were eye witnesses of the incidents they reported.

This would tend to destroy the theory of "higher criticism" that the narrative was written many centuries later, he said.

Dr. Sukenik said the potsherds "apparently belong to the archives of the city of Lachish, the greatest fortress in the southern area of the kingdom of Judah."

Duplicate Copies Inked.

"The originals were papyri," he said. "The potsherds represent duplicate copies inked on clay. These shards are enormously important for study of the Bible.

"The Tel Adduweir finds show what may be expected from the excavation of the many mounds of ancient Jewish cities that are scattered throughout Palestine. They are merely awaiting exploration."

TEXAS RANGERS RAID NIGHT CLUB; SEIZE LIQUORS

Austin, Tex., March 15.—(AP)—Texas Rangers threw a crimp today into the gay night life of the Texas capital.

Accompanied by sheriff's officers, the rangers raided one night club early today and followed with a warning tonight from Adjt. Gen. Carl Nesbitt that if local officers "don't enforce the law we will."

Scores of men and women—among them legislative employés and, it was reported, members of the legislature—danced in an adjoining room as $400 worth of liquors was seized at a bar.

The rangers then went to the basement and confiscated gambling equipment.

Few of the dancers knew the raid was in progress. Charges of possessing liquor for sale were filed against T. C. Steiner, operator of the bar.

Charging that Gov. James V. Allred, a prohibitionist, was back of the rangers' raiding of night spots, Steiner cried: "Why doesn't he do something about Galveston and San Antonio where saloons are running wide open?"

Nesbitt declared the rangers participated merely to carry out the governor's public promise that all laws would be enforced. Texas is dry.

NELSON'S WIDOW CHIEF WITNESS IN CHASE TRIAL

Mrs. Helen Gillis, widow of Lester Gillis [Baby Face Nelson], heads the list of the government's witnesses for the trial of John Paul Chase, which is scheduled to start Monday before Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan. This was assured yesterday when the government furnished the defense with the names of 52 persons to be called to testify against Chase.

Chase is charged with the murder of Samuel P. Cowley, department of justice inspector who was slain in a gun battle with Nelson and Chase in Barrington last Nov. 27. Federal Agent Herman E. Hollis and Nelson were also killed. Mrs. Gillis is believed to have witnessed the battle.

Melvin E. Purvis, chief of the Chicago bureau of investigation of the department of justice, will also be a witness. Others include the Rev. P. W. Coughlan of Canute, Okla., and State Highway Policeman William B. Gallagher, Morton Deissler and Robert Malone, who witnessed some of the fight from Malone's gasoline station on the Northwest highway.

Tavern Burglars Sought for Wounding Bartender

The Albany Park police yesterday were searching for burglars who early in the morning shot Moritz Berensmann, a bartender at the Elmont tavern, 413 Elston avenue. Berensmann, who was sleeping in a flat above the tavern, heard the prowlers and went down to investigate. He was shot in the chest. Last night his condition was said to indicate his recovery.

SWEDES, DANES HAIL LINKING OF ROYAL HOUSES

Toast Betrothal of Ingrid, Frederik.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, March 15.—(AP)—All Sweden lifted glasses tonight in toasts to the engagement of its 24 year old princess, Ingrid, to the 36 year old Crown Prince Frederik of Denmark.

All other world events were pushed into the background by the formal announcement of the "love match," oft rumored and oft denied. Photographs of the couple's betrothal kiss claimed wide public attention. A candlelighted dinner table at the royal palace saw the affianced pair drink to each other's health and happiness.

[A British news agency dispatch quoted palace circles as saying the wedding probably would take place at Stockholm toward the end of May.]

Princess Drives Fiancé.

Where horses, carriages, and footmen might have been in order in another age Ingrid herself slipped behind the wheel of her own car and drove her fiancé to the palace after his arrival at a suburban station from Copenhagen. He was accompanied by his mother, Queen Alexandrine.

Enormous books were opened at the palace to allow Swedes to sign their names and congratulations to the royal pair.

Internationally, the match was held to be significant, in that it binds still more closely two nations already linked by racial and economic ties.

A keen lover of sports, the golden haired Ingrid has always been fond of tennis, motoring, dancing, and riding.

Frederik went through the usual naval training, from the bottom rung as midshipman to the rank of captain in the navy, and since has traveled considerably. No great outdoor fan, he plays some tennis and likes motoring, driving himself. He plays the piano three or four hours daily, composes and sometimes conducts. Frederik and Ingrid have known each other since childhood.

Danes Welcome News.

COPENHAGEN, March 15.—(AP)—The engagement of Princess Ingrid and Prince Frederik was announced in Denmark today at the same time as in Stockholm.

King Christian, astride an Irish hunter, smilingly acknowledged the greetings of his subjects as he returned from his morning exercise simultaneously with the official announcement.

The news was welcomed by the Danish public, which has been anxious to see its crown prince put an end to his bachelorhood. Flags were unfurled on public and private buildings, while the Danish capital made plans for celebrating the betrothal tonight.

'Flora,' World Flower Show, Is Opened in Dutch Village

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

HAARLEM, The Netherlands, March 15.—"Flora," as the great international flower show is known, was opened by the minister of economic affairs today at Heemstede, a village near this horticultural center. The exhibition covers 55 acres and will remain open two months. More than 1,000,000 visitors are expected. An American contingent under the auspices of the New York Horticultural society sails from New York on April 30.

1,000 Colored Men Offer to Help Ethiopia Fight Italy

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PANAMA CITY, March 15.—More than 1,000 Colored West Indians, most of them Canal Zone employés, today notified Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia that they are prepared to fight against Italy. This action was taken after a meeting of the Negro Nationalist association in the Baptist church, at which the Rev. Mr. Wells and other Colored leaders denounced Premier Mussolini.

Prove Their Ability

Agnes Soutar and Helen Kinsman, home economics pupils at the Lindblom High school, who were chosen as being most representative of "tomorrow's ideal housewife," gave a demonstration of their cooking art in the school yesterday. Their titles will be bestowed at a dinner next Wednesday in the Hotel Sherman in connection with the midwest conference on home making, which opens its three day meeting at the hotel Tuesday.

ORDERS ARREST OF J. F. BULGER IN CONTEMPT CASE

An attachment to take into custody J. Francis Bulger, member of the Chicago Board of Trade, was issued yesterday by Circuit Judge Philip J. Finnegan when Bulger failed to appear at a scheduled contempt hearing. Bulger had been ordered to sell his Board of Trade seat to satisfy a $525 alimony debt due his divorced wife, Mrs. Florence C. Bulger.

The broker's attorney, Francis W. McGovern, however, filed two answers yesterday, one to the contempt charge and one to Mrs. Bulger's petition for temporary alimony and expenses during Bulger's appeal on the order to sell his membership.

In the answers Bulger said he has earned only $82.95 since the divorce decree was entered on July 24, 1934. He alleged that he is now employed as a "clerk" at $18 a week, and possesses only his clothes and $5. He said that Mrs. Bulger is receiving a monthly income of $150 from subleasing an apartment, which contains furnishings that cost him $20,000, that she lives in the Blackwood hotel, where the cheapest suite is $72 a month, and that she drives an automobile.

In previous hearings Mrs. Bulger testified that her former husband had dissipated her $500,000 fortune.

SYCAMORE 100; CELEBRATION IS SLATED IN MAY

Sycamore, Ill., March 15.—[Special.] Civic bodies and schools here today quietly observed the 100th anniversary of this city's founding. Tentative plans for a celebration of the centennial were canceled recently when it became known that the local Methodist church, founded in May of 1835, would stage an elaborate program to close its first 100 years.

Sycamore was established on the morning of March 15, 1835, by Carlos Lattin, a westbound New Yorker, who set up a crude cabin of logs and urged eastern friends to follow him into his northern Illinois settlement. His cabin served until 1849 as a combination residence and town meeting hall.

The city which he set up 100 years ago today boasts a population of 4,600, seven industrial plants, 11 churches, 5 schools, and is the county seat of De Kalb county.

Mrs. Stein Goes After Little Willie and $434

Mrs. Toby Stein, 810 Aldgeld street, departed for Omaha yesterday to collect her boy, Willie, who left home on Monday with $500 belongings to his mother and who was arrested Wednesday by the Omaha police. Willie, who is 6 feet 4 inches tall and who weighs 285 pounds, in his two days at large had spent $65.10 of his mother's money, but the Omaha police are holding the other $434.90.

Millikan Gives a New View of Science World

Physicist Has Big News in His Latest Book.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

"Electrons [plus and minus], Protons, Photons, Neutrons, and Cosmic Rays," by Robert A. Millikan. [University of Chicago Press.]

THE exact nature of this title indicates a new approach to science and its wonders. Dr. Millikan, who is in the front rank of American physicists, has big news and fascinating speculative material in his latest book, but he has kept strictly to the field of the known and the proved, only offering a glimpse of what he thinks of the possibilities of the unknown.

Some day in the next millennium, according to Nikola Tesla, the discoveries of science will be front page news. To a people of this kind the afternoon of Aug. 2, 1932, would have been a greater event than the Lindbergh kidnaping or verdict. On that day, Dr. Millikan relates, the picture of the world was changed for him and for all true scientists. They had thought they knew the fundamental building stones of the physical world to be protons and negative electrons. A wandering cosmic ray coming into the photographic apparatus in Norman Bridge laboratory that day convinced them that they must reckon in the future with a free positive electron, the track of which was plainly revealed.

How the positron came to be discovered, the months of waiting for confirmation before publication, and its final acceptance as a new "primordial entity" of the universe, forms one of the chapters in this book. It is not an easy book to read and much of it is beyond the layman, but there are bits here and there which may enlarge one's understanding of the great search of science for the "why" of all things.

The nature of cosmic rays, the dogma of the heat death of the universe, which has puzzled so many scientists as well as theologians, are given careful treatment. Dr. Millikan has kept to the line of what may be believed as the result of observational data. Where a few years ago he boldly espoused the cause of the rebuilding universe, he now treats this with reserve. The new approach which he and many other leaders in science have taken is the avoidance of sweeping generalizations.

To one who is looking for philosophical speculation rather than for exact experimental data the chapter on waves and particles is most interesting. It is this dual nature of light that has given Einstein, Planck, and other great physicists their greatest trouble. Dr. Millikan has this suggestion to make of the great riddle:

"The ultimate elementary processes which constitute light cannot be both waves and corpuscles. Which are they really? And what kind of legerdemain has nature played upon us to make them seem otherwise? The only way I can see out of the contradiction is to assume that all microscopic or elementary processes, whether they are processes of matter physics or of ether physics, are at bottom discrete-particle processes, the four types of units involved being [1] elementary units of electrical charge, [2] elementary units of mass, [3] elementary units of radiant energy, and [4] elementary units of moment of momentum or action [called Planck's h units]. Only when large numbers of these units are involved do we get over into the field of continuous processes of which waves constitute one of the best of examples. In other words, according to this view, all apparently continuous phenomena represent statistical or mean behaviors of elementary particles, in precisely the same way as the temperature of a mass is the mean kinetic energy of its particles, a fact which obviously does not imply that every individual molecule has that energy."

Four Good Thrillers Ready for Lovers of Western Adventure

For the man who thinks that a good western thriller is the only real literary poultice for his pains there have been six books recently which will bring him ease and comfort. "King of the Range," by Frank Austin [Dodd-Mead], with some brand new western dodges; "Six Guns of Sandoval," by Charles H. Snow [Macrae-Smith], with a few new loops in the lariat; "Thirsty Range," by E. B. Mann [Morrow], with even more than the usual thirst for excitement, and "Trigger Gospel," by Sinclair Drago [Macaulay], a blazing story of the old Cherokee strip, and "Dark Canyon," telling of the clash of man's will and the relentless forces of nature, and "Gun Smoke Cure," by Stone Cody, that packs thrills.

And there is also "Square-Shooter" [Houghton Mifflin], by the incomparable William MacLeod Raine, who has written over thirty western yarns, of which over 2,000,000 copies have been sold.

Woollcott to Talk Again on Wednesday

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT is the author of "While Rome Burns," the best seller which had sold 100,000 copies four days before it was a year old on March 5. Mr. Woollcott, the best fiddler of them all when the tune is an anecdote to be converted into unforgettable melody, will lecture on Wednesday at the University of Chicago on "The Mystery of Time." Last Tuesday he enthralled an audience at Thorne hall, Northwestern university, by talking around the subject, "The Invisible Newspaper," and about everything else in the world.

One of the sub-subjects which flashed into the air was his story about how he came to be a newspaper man. That determination was made at the age of 5, he said. He lived in Kansas City across the street from Roswell Field, the brother of Eugene Field, who was childless and the victim of all of the children in the neighborhood who found that by staging an accident the whole neighborhood would be taken to the ice cream parlor for solace. Woollcott, being very well padded even as a child, made the loudest noise when he was pushed off the porch, he said, and so he was oftenest chosen as the casualty.

One Saturday afternoon in 1891 "Rose" Field took him to his first matinée, "Sinbad the Sailor," and he declared that he still remembers the jokes from it and occasionally uses them. That afternoon's experience made him resolve to spend every afternoon and evening in the theater from that day on and he told his mother so. She explained to him that that would run into money, which, he asided, no Woollcott ever did.

But Mr. Field doesn't dress any better than papa, the observing youth declared. His mother explained to him in words of one syllable that Mr. Field was a newspaper man and got free tickets. And at that moment he decided to be a newspaper man.

Alexander Woollcott gave one famous example of the typographical errors that creep into newspaper copy. In writing about an old civil war hero who had the reddest nose in town, instead of "battle scarred veteran," the astounded editor found when he opened his paper the next morning that he had written "bottle scarred veteran." Eager to make amends he wrote another piece for the next morning, explaining that there had been a typographical error and what he had meant to write was "battle scared veteran."

And speaking of battles, he told the best 1914 Christmas day battle story of the world war that anybody in the audience ever heard . . . some of them might have heard it in part over the radio on Armistice day last year but none knew the sequel . . . the frenzied telegram from the man, "I was the sentry that woke him up with those cigarets."

Mr. Woollcott panics them in words whether spoken or written. F. B.

Florence Riddell Pens Travel Book of Her Life in India

Florence Riddell, author of several popular novels of Africa, has made a gay, brisk moving travel biography out of her life in India, Africa and other parts of the world. "I Go Wandering" [Lippincott] is a lively account of the domestic and literary career of a frank, likable, humorous young Scotch woman who went to India as a governess. The glamor of the tropics soon faded, however, and, fed up with caste and cobras, dirt and disease, boredom and general dislike for the country, she and her recently acquired husband tried Kenya.

There tragedy entered her life after several years of struggle with poverty and she lost her husband. But Mrs. Riddell has kept the gloomy side of her life in the background and has written a sparkling, buoyant, entertaining biography, full of lively adventure and hilarious happenings. Her life travels cover four continents.

Pitkin Is Author of Vigorous Book Defending Capitalism

There have been floods of books denouncing capitalism. Now a book is published defending it and marshaling arguments that turn the critics' denunciations against them. It is written by Walter B. Pitkin, whom you know best as author of "Life Begins at Forty" and who has a strangely sensitive fingertip on the pulse of the average American.

He dedicates the book "To the middle class, on whose survival and prosperity all civilization depends," and then talks turkey. The book is called "Capitalism Carries On" [McGraw-Hill].

1ST WIFE DENIED ENTIRE ESTATE OF S. REYNOLDS

Court Approves Division Into Five Parts.

Winston-Salem, N. C., March 15.—[Special.]—Superior Judge Clayton Moore today denied the claim of Mrs. Anne Cannon Reynolds Smith, first wife of the late Smith Reynolds, who had sought the dead tobacco heir's full trust estate of approximately 28 million dollars for her 4 year old daughter, Anne Cannon Reynolds II.

The judge ruled in favor of the settlement proposed by the Reynolds family which provided that the estate be divided among Anne II; Reynolds' second wife, Libby Holman Reynolds, the actress; his posthumous son, Baby Christopher, and his brother and sisters.

Prior to the hearing of the long and complex case in Forsyth Superior court, attorneys in the litigation agreed that whatever its outcome the decision would be carried to the North Carolina Supreme court.

Plan to Ask Review.

It was also announced that if the State Supreme court approves Judge Moore's ruling, a review by the Baltimore Circuit court will be asked as protection to the Safe Deposit and Trust Company of Baltimore, which holds the estate in trust.

If Judge Moore's decision is upheld in the higher courts in the several months further litigation those appeals will require, the Reynolds' fortune, now valued at $27,975,000, will be divided into five parts.

Two million dollars will first be deducted to meet North Carolina's claim for inheritance taxes. Little Anne II. will receive approximately $9,750,000. Miss Holman will be given $750,000. Her 2 year old son, Christopher, will get about $6,500,000.

Nine Million for Charity.

The residue, amounting to about 9 million dollars, will be turned over to Smith Reynolds' brother and sisters, R. J. Reynolds Jr., Mrs. Charles Babcock and Mrs. Henry W. Bagley, to be used for a charitable foundation to perpetuate the memory of the 20 year old heir who was mysteriously shot to death not long after he married the Broadway "torch" singer.

Reynolds' first wife, Mrs. Smith, waived her rights and the inheritance rights of her child for a $1,000,000 settlement divided equally between them at the time she obtained a Reno, Nev., divorce from Reynolds in 1931.

However, she based her claim for the entire estate on the contention that her divorce was invalid because she was ill at the time and had sought it only at the urgings of Reynolds despite her love for him. Furthermore, the interests allied with her in the legal controversy questioned her right to waive Little Anne's inheritance.

Others Stand Together.

Opposing her was the combined Reynolds-Holman faction who stood by the family settlement proposal and also claimed that it was Smith Reynolds' intention to disinherit his first wife and his daughter less than two months after little Anne was born.

They cited as proof of the former Anne Cannon's faith in the legality of her divorce her marriage to F. Brandon Smith Jr. of Charlotte six months after she divorced Reynolds. Young Reynolds married Miss Holman six days after the Reno divorce.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: Who's Afraid?

RITES TOMORROW FOR 'DE LAWD' IN N.Y. CATHEDRAL

Bishop Manning Will Conduct Services.

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—Funeral services for Richard Berry Harrison, late star of the modern miracle play, "The Green Pastures," and one of the foremost colored men of his time, will be held at the cathedral of St. John the Divine at 2 p. m. Sunday. It was at the suggestion of Bishop T. Manning that the previous arrangement for services at the St. Phillip Episcopal church in Harlem was changed tonight.

Bishop Manning and the Rev. Shelton Hale Bishop, pastor of the Harlem church, will conduct the services together. Dean Milo H. Gates and other clergymen attached to the cathedral also will take part, and the choir from "The Green Pastures," augmented by the Hall Johnson choir, will sing.

Final Details Incomplete.

Although the full Episcopal funeral service will be used, final details of the ceremony had not been completed, Bishop Manning said. It has not yet been decided whether the cathedral choir will be present.

It will not be the first time funeral services for a colored man have been held in the cathedral, according to Bishop Manning, who said "there are many colored persons in our church and many services of all kinds, funerals and weddings, have been held in the cathedral."

Mr. Harrison, for many years a church reader before he assumed the rôle of "De Lawd" in "The Green Pastures" was regarded with great respect by churchmen of all faiths. He was a man of devout faith and throughout his career in the play considered his rôle as a religious responsibility.

At First He Balks at Rôle.

When he was first approached to appear in the play he feared his portrayal of the Deity on the stage might be construed as sacrilege. It was at the request of his friend, the Rt. Rev. Herbert Shipman, suffragan bishop of New York, that he was prevailed upon to accept the part.

Mr. Harrison, who gave 1,657 performances as "De Lawd," died suddenly on Thursday morning after an illness of less than two weeks. He will be buried in Chicago on Tuesday.

The Theatre authority, which is organizing a Colored Actors' guild, suspended its meeting today for a minute of silent prayer in Mr. Harrison's memory.

BURIAL HERE TUESDAY.

Chicago's colored population will pay honor to the memory of Richard Berry Harrison, "De Lawd" of "The Green Pastures," at funeral services in St. Edmund's Episcopal church, 5831 Indiana avenue, on Tuesday morning. The Chicago services were postponed at the request of the colored actor's New York friends, who will attend funeral rites in that city tomorrow afternoon.

Plans for the Chicago services for Mr. Harrison, who died in New York on Thursday, were completed yesterday by the widow, Mrs. Janet Washington Harrison. The body will be brought to Chicago from New York after the services there and will lie at the Harrison home, 5942 Indiana avenue, Monday afternoon and evening.

Close friends of the family will be admitted to St. Edmund's church until 10:45 a. m. Tuesday morning. At 11 a. m. requiem mass will be sung by the Rev. Samuel Martin. Burial will be in Lincoln cemetery. Floral tributes and messages of condolence from all parts of the country were received by the widow yesterday.

S. S. SHERMAN DIES IN DENVER; EX-CHICAGOAN

Samuel S. Sherman, Denver investment banker, who was a native of Chicago, died yesterday in St. Luke's hospital at Denver. He was 65 years old.

Mr. Sherman, who was formerly a Chicago newspaper man, latterly business manager of the old Chicago Inter-Ocean, became manager of the Denver Times and Rocky Mountain News in the John C. Shaffer régime. Afterward he entered the banking field. He was a graduate of Hyde Park High school and of the University of Michigan, where he was a member of the football team.

Mr. Sherman is survived by the widow, Martha; a daughter, Mrs. Frank Walter; a son, Samuel S. Jr., all of Denver, and three brothers, Lucius and Attorney Roger Sherman of Chicago, and Dr. P. L. Sherman, now in the Philippine Islands. Another brother, John D. Sherman, who died several years ago, once served as city editor of THE TRIBUNE.

Brother of County Road Policeman Kills Himself

Clement Reikowski, 27 years old, an unemployed mechanic, committed suicide early today by shooting himself through the head in his home at 1425 Wolfram street. His father, August, who was in the house at the time, told Sheffield avenue police his son had been suffering from a nervous breakdown. Another son, Frank, is a county highway policeman.

The Rev. W. E. McCord, 77, Former Chaplain, Dies

Southern Pines, N. C., March 15.—(AP)—The Rev. William Edgar McCord, 77, former chaplain of New York's famous Seventh regiment and later service chaplain of the 27th division, A. E. F., died today after an illness of several months. He was a native of Vandalia, Ill., and went to New York after graduation from colleges and was ordained in the Presbyterian ministry. Years later he was ordained an Episcopal minister by Bishop Boyd Vincent of Cincinnati.

Ex-President of Polish Academy of Science Dies

Eric Erickson, Prominent Lutheran Layman, Is Dead

Orion, Ill., March 15.—[Special.]—Eric Erickson, 87, prominent Lutheran layman, died last evening. He came to this locality from Sweden in 1867.

Rev. George Smith, 75, Dead at Naperville

The Rev. George Smith, 75 years old, retired Evangelical pastor, died yesterday in his home at 228 Benton street, Naperville. He had served as pastor of Evangelical churches in the middle west for 42 years. His wife, three sons and two daughters survive him. Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon from the Grace Evangelical church in Naperville. Burial will be in Naperville cemetery.

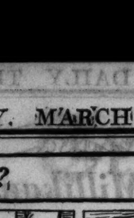
WILLIAM H. FIELD, PUBLISHER, KILLS SELF IN VERMONT

Mendon, Vt., March 15.—[Special.]—William H. Field, 59 years old, owner of the Rutland [Vt.] Herald and former general manager of the New York Daily News, shot and killed himself at his home here today. His son, William, said that impending loss of his eyesight caused his father to take his own life.



WILLIAM H. FIELD. [A. P. Wirephoto.]

Mr. Field was graduated from Yale in 1899 and his first newspaper experience was with the Frank A. Munsey company in New York. Later he became business manager of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and for ten years was a resident of Chicago and active in the management of that newspaper. In 1919 he became general manager of the New York News an din 1927 he retired to become publisher of the Rutland Herald in the town of his birth. Even at that time he was threatened with blindness.

"It was with the deepest regret that I learned of the death of Mr. Field," said J. M. Patterson, editor and publisher of the New York News. "We were close friends since college days. Field was the general manager of the News for the first eight years of its existence. He resigned, greatly to our regret, in order to look after his family newspaper in Rutland."

Mr. Field was married to Ethel Clements, daughter of a former governor of Vermont. She died several years ago. Three children survive—two daughters and the son, William Jr.

U. S. OPENS HUNT FOR SOURCE OF MISER'S ESTATE

Postal inspectors yesterday began inquiries concerning the sources of the $140,000 fortune left by James Thomas Kelly, West Madison street miser who died Feb. 26. The inspectors sought to determine if any of the securities found in Kelly's safe deposit box were bought with cash obtained in mail robberies. The department of internal revenue was also reported to be making inquiries as to whether Kelly paid income tax on his fortune.

The seven persons indicted on charges of conspiracy and forgery in connection with a fake will which would have given most of Kelly's estate to Mrs. Bella Butman, 6743 Irving Park boulevard, in whose home he died, were arraigned yesterday before Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan of the Criminal court. All pleaded not guilty.

The case was transferred to the court of Judge William V. Brothers and placed on the call for Monday when a trial date will be set. Those indicted, besides Mrs. Butman, are her son, Thomas; Attorney Julius P. Waiches, John J. Bagdonas, Nicholas Radis, Paul P. Zalink, and John Dallyde.

MRS. GUNN-JONES' ESTATE TURNED OVER TO HUSBAND

Four years of litigation over the $500,000 estate of Mrs. Kitty Gunn-Jones, wealthy 74 year old recluse who died in 1930, ended yesterday when Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to the Probate judge, ordered the residue, estimated at more than $400,000, to be turned over to her husband, Maj. George W. Jones.

After Mrs. Gunn-Jones' death a will was produced directing that Maj. Jones receive the bulk of the estate. Mrs. Louise Thompson, sister of Mrs. Gunn-Jones, and 12 other relatives contested the will on the ground that it was spurious, and that Mrs. Gunn-Jones was incompetent when she married the major in 1925. Master in Chancery Jacob M. Arvey held, after eight months of hearings, that she was competent.

H. H. Galland, U. of C. Press Executive, Dead

Harry H. Galland, 58 years old, 5207 Kenwood avenue, a departmental head at the University of Chicago Press for 27 years and former president of the University Men's club, died in his home yesterday after an illness of eight months. Surviving are his widow, Irene Deming Galland, a son, and a daughter. Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today in the chapel at 5203 Lake Park avenue.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must get at the cause—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the intestines, which he gave to his patients for years.

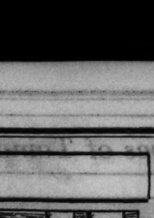
Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

"One Night of Love," which lifted Grace Moore to eminence in screendom, has been adapted for radio and will be presented on the NBC Beauty Box theater from 9 to 10 next Tuesday evening. Francia White, the prima donna of the serial, "Music at the Haydns," will play the rôle which Grace Moore created, and John Barclay will take the part Tullio Carminati had in the screen version. Francia White came to radio from the movies, where she last sang the rôle of Jennie Lind in "The Mighty Barnum."



FRANCIA WHITE.

Two South American maestros are expected soon to bring their tangos, rhumbas and other tropical rhythms to Chicago airlanes. Carlos Molina, the Colombian Valentino, will replace Jan Garber at the Trianon and on W-G-N beginning April 23 while Garber goes on a short tour. And Enrico Madriguerra, who hails from Buenos Aires, will come to the Chez Paree with a WBBM-CBS line on April 3. He will follow Gus Arnheim, who plans to make a theater tour. Madriguerra has been playing for several seasons in New York's swankier hotels.

Guy Lombardo will make his first appearance [and not public at that] in Chicago in more than a year when he presents his commercial broadcast at NBC studios on April 3. The Lombardos will be jumping from the west coast to Detroit that week. . . . A small orchestra is being built around the King's Jesters, harmony quartet heard on that NBC Thursday morning carnival. The Jesters will open an engagement at the Brown hotel in Louisville April 1 and will be on the air over WHAS.

Still more amateur programs: Gus Edwards of "School Days" fame, who developed many a big entertainer, including Eddie Cantor, George Jessel, and Al Jolson, is to launch an amateur show on WOR, Newark, the MBS eastern outlet, on April 1.

The Golden Gloves intercity championship bouts, sponsored by the CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the New York Daily News on March 29 at Chicago Stadium will be broadcast in their entirety by W-G-N. NBC will carry only a half hour from 10:30 to 11 and there will be no local outlet.

Fred Allen's Town Hall Tonight will round out a solid year on the air next Wednesday evening. Allen went on the air with a half hour program in January, 1934, and it was expanded to its present proportions on March 21. . . . Harry Horlick and his Gypsies next Monday will start their twelfth year of broadcasting for the same sponsor. They started as a five piece ensemble, which has grown into an orchestra of 41 men. . . . George Givot is to become a fixture on the "Big Show" featuring Gertrude Niesen and Block and Sully. That puts both "Greek" entertainers on CBS. Parkyakakas working with Eddie Cantor.

FUNERAL TODAY FOR R. G. WATSON, VETERAN TRADER

Funeral services for Richard G. Watson, 76 years old, for 49 years a member of the Chicago Board of Trade, who died Thursday in New York, will be held at 3:30 p. m. today in the Graceland cemetery chapel.

Mr. Watson retired from the board of trade two years ago, and since then had divided his time between the home of a son, Henry Gould Watson, 243 Walden drive, Glencoe, and a daughter, Mrs. Henry Vincent, in New York. He went to New York last December.

For more than 20 years, until about ten years ago, Mr. Watson lived in Lake Forest, where he served on the city council in 1894 and 1895. His wife, the former Ellen C. Gould, whom he married in 1882, died several years ago. Other surviving children besides Henry and Mrs. Vincent are Richard Jr. of Washington, D. C., Frederic of New York City, Gilbert of Highland Park, and Mrs. Walter Scott Grant of Chicago.

COUNCIL GROUPS PLANNED TO KEEP EYE ON SPENDING

Draft Sharp Changes in Organization.

Important changes in city council organization are being considered by the aldermen as the time draws near for the selection of a committee on committees which will name the various permanent committees to direct council activities for the next four years.

The fact that the new council will remain intact for a four year period has provided the chief impetus for demands for changes in procedure.

First of the innovations, and one apparently certain of realization, will be the institution of investigation subcommittees which are likely to recruit the entire council strength and to keep individual aldermen busy through the four year term.

Check Leaks in Cash.

Ald. J. M. Arvey [24th], present chairman of the committee on committees and head of the finance committee, is leading this movement. The finance committee at least is definitly planning to adopt the plan, he said yesterday.

The subcommittees will aid greatly in checking leaks of city money, increasing departmental revenue, and providing information necessary toward building an intelligent budget, Ald. Arvey pointed out.

Under the plan small committees of three to five members would be assigned to each of the various city departments. It would be the duty of the committee to examine expenditures, all requests for money, and service generally. The subcommittee would pass on the budget demand of the department before it goes to the finance committee. It would make investigations to determine whether the addition of certain personnel or services would increase the revenues of the department.

Keep Fingers on Pulse.

"In short," Ald. Arvey explained, "the subcommittees will be the fingers of the council on the pulse of city affairs. Now we appropriate money and draft budgets without knowing what it's all about.

"We have expensive departments which might be self-supporting if we cared to investigate the matter. The subcommittee plan is going to mean work for the aldermen, but it's going to mean more efficient city government."

The adoption of the subcommittee proposal will rest with the council's committee on committees, which will organize the council after a caucus to name the committee on April 3.

To Keep Present Members.

It appears that the committee will retain four of its present members, Berthold Cronson [4th], Thomas P. Keane [31st], James R. Quinn [50th], with Ald. Arvey continuing as chairman. Council observers predict that Ald. Terence F. Moran [16th] will be elected to the committee to fill the vacancy left by the death of Ald. Thomas A. Doyle [11th].

For the election of the committee the 50 wards are divided into blocks of ten, with one committeeman and an alternate named for each block.

Three Exhibits Get Attention of Art Critic

All-Illinois Society One of the Sponsors.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Three group exhibitions have opened and are arousing comment. Six women artists, Averil Courtney Conwell, Blanche Weyburn Kerr, Verne Mullen, Cornelia Weyburn, Helen Hudson Below, and Ruth Loverin Clark, are represented in the paintings and sculpture exhibit current in the Lord Nelson room, Drake hotel, under the auspices of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts.

Landscapes and still life divide the paintings, and the sculpture is chiefly of portrait busts. The sculptor Ruth Loverin Clark is to be congratulated on her delicate and lovely "The Madonna" and on her interesting "Ball Woman."

The second exhibition is to be seen in the Carson-Pirie-Scott galleries, and is in two parts. The room hung with paintings by Chicago moderns is amusing. The paintings are rather stereotyped in technique (once a modern, always a modern), crude in color and composition, and overwhelmingly realistic where a bit of subtle suggestion would have carried the message equally well. But Frances Foy supplies a charming note in her painting of a child, and Beatrice Levy gives us the temper of spring along a country road where shy green buds tremble into leaf.

Francis Chapin should mend his ways, or his negligent painting will blunt his natural talent. It is a pity to see so clever an artist as he waste himself in these self-conscious crudities. Aaron Bohrod, invariably better in water color than oil, has some delicate and precise drawing in his street scene, which is altogether delightful.

The second part of the exhibit consits of etchings, drawings, and lithographs by French artists, and among these the charming work of Renoir and the sensitive etchings of Segonzac must be mentioned. They stand out. The several pretty ladies by Laurencin are too familiar to make a great appeal. The torso by Derain is exceedingly fine.

The third group exhibition is in the Tudor gallery, Chicago Woman's club. It is a gay and colorful show. Nina Griffin carries off the honors with her stunning "Calla Lilies" and "Dahlias." Gerald Frank has a decorative and beautiful canvas in "Dawn." Hermine Stella, Mrs. E. W. Rice, Alice Apfelbach, and Mrs. Tilden are among the others who contribute beauty and color to a characteristic pre-Easter exhibit.

Paramount Launches Extensive Program of Feature Pictures

Hollywood, Cal., March 15.—[Special.]—The launching of one of its most extensive production programs in recent years was announced today by Paramount Studios. The studios for more than two weeks have been comparatively inactive, only three films being in process of production.

Within the next two months more than fifteen feature pictures are scheduled to begin production, according to Henry Herzbrun and Ernst Lubitsch, newly appointed production heads.

Virtually every Paramount star will go into action, including Mae West, Claudette Colbert, Loretta Young, Carole Lombard, George Raft, Marlene Dietrich, and Henry Wilcoxson.

Seven Arts Club to Offer Varied Program Tonight

Edward Clasby, president of the Seven Arts club, has arranged a diversified program for the weekly meeting tonight in the auditorium at 125 West Chestnut street. Among the speakers will be Miss Irene Browne, Dr. Charles A. Lapin, and Prof. Julian J. Steen. Miss Browne will read several verses from her latest published book, "Love Poems of an Artist's Models," one of the verses, "Irish Melody," to be dedicated to the St. Patrick's day spirit.

Home Ceremony

For her wedding yesterday afternoon to Alexander Barthell Spence, Miss Laura Thorne wore a beautifully fashioned gown and hat of greige crêpe trimmed in matching taffeta. A large bouquet of lavender orchids offered interesting contrast.

The service was read at 4:30 o'clock in the drawing room of the apartment of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Thorne, at 2430 Lake View avenue. Only the Thorne family and a few intimate friends heard the young couple exchange their wedding vows after Dr. Robert Clements of the McCormick Theological seminary.

After a reception for those who had witnessed the service Mr. Spence, son of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Spence of Murfreesboro, Tenn., who were unable to come to Chicago for the ceremony, and his bride left by motor for California. They will make their home in Oakland, where Mr. Spence is completing a course in ground aviation.

Dartmouth President Urges More Stress on Social Sciences

The remodeling of college curricula to include a greater study of the social sciences and contemporary thought was urged by Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth college, at a banquet of Dartmouth alumni at the Drake hotel last night. Dr. Hopkins also demanded complete freedom of expression in colleges for an unbiased consideration of social trends.

"In these times we must have a more coördinated knowledge of the social sciences," Dr. Hopkins said. "The colleges of liberal arts must change their scheme of study to embrace more courses in history, economics, political economy, sociology, and kindred subjects. We are living in a period in which these subjects are of vital importance and students should be able to study them freely."

Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university; Dean Leon Green of the law school of Northwestern, and the head masters of prep schools in the Chicago area were guests at the banquet which was attended by 400 alumni of the eastern college.

Business Women Open National Week at Tea Tomorrow

Women in business will celebrate National Business Women's week beginning tomorrow.

The first event in Chicago will be the tea at 2 o'clock tomorrow at the Palmer house, at which the ten local clubs affiliated with the National Federation and Business and Professional clubs will be hostess to the thirty, organizations of business and professional women of the city. Dr. Grace McCarthy will preside, in her capacity as chairman of districts one to ten of the national group.

Mrs. Elizabeth Conkey, county commissioner, will lead a panel discussion by vice presidents from each of the ten districts on the topic, "Women, What Now?"

Another event will be a dinner to be held Thursday night at the Graemere hotel by the West Area club, at which Mrs. Geline McDonald Bowman of Richmond, Va., president of the national federation, will be a guest.

Select Still Another Name for Mae West's Picture

Hollywood, Cal., March 15.—(AP)—The title of Mae West's new picture has been changed for the second time. Unless a better idea for a name appears before the picture reaches the screen, several months hence, it will be known as "Goin' to Town." The original title was "Now I'm a Lady," and for several weeks, it has been on the shooting schedule as "How'm I Doing."

Admiral Clark H. Woodward Arrives Today

He and Mrs. Woodward to Visit Cranes.

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE arrival this morning of the youngest admiral in the United States navy, Rear Admiral Clark Howell Woodward, and his wife, the mother of Mrs. Cornelius Crane, will give the Crane household and the friends of the Woodwards, the young Cranes and his mother, Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr., a busy and interesting two days.

Arthur Meeker is giving a luncheon for the admiral at the Chicago club today, but there will be no party for Mrs. Woodward at noon, for young Mrs. Crane and her mother will have their only chance for a visit over the luncheon table. This afternoon Mrs. George T. Langhorne is giving a tea for her old friends, and tonight the senior Mrs. Crane will be hostess at a family dinner for her guests.

Tomorrow Mrs. Crane will give a luncheon for the Woodwards at the Casino, and in the afternoon they will attend a tea that Mrs. Crane is giving at her residence, 1550 Lake Shore drive, for the American Friends of China. Admiral Woodward has seen service in China—he and Gen. Frank R. McCoy served together in the Boxer rebellion—so he and Mrs. Woodward are certain to be interested in the lantern slides in color that Herbert Clarence White will show at the tea. The slides are made from remarkable photographs of China, and among them are some of the Garden of the Gods in South Chekiang.

Gen. McCoy, who is the new commander of the Sixth corps area, and Mrs. McCoy will entertain at dinner tomorrow night at their apartment, 190 East Chestnut street, for the Woodwards, who will go directly from the McCoy residence to the station to catch a train for the Pacific coast. Admiral Woodward, who has been on the navy board in Washington, is on his way west to take command of the destroyer flotilla.

Cornelius Crane arrived at home several days ago from two months in Tahiti, where his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Robinson, have been since last fall. The Robinsons are building a house there, and Mr. Crane bought some property on the island so he and his wife will have a house there eventually, too.

West Pointers Meet Tonight.

Gen. McCoy will be the principal speaker at the 47th annual dinner of the alumni of the United States Military academy tonight in the bungalow on the roof of the Hotel Sherman and later he hopes to be able to go on to the military exhibition and polo games of the Black Horse troop at the Chicago Riding club.

Gen. McCoy was graduated from West Point in 1897. The oldest graduate in the Chicago district, Williston Fish, who finished in 1881, will have a place at Gen. McCoy's table tonight and so will Gen. Robert E. Wood and Col. John A. Holabird. In the absence of Col. George T. Langhorne, president of the Chicago Association of West Pointers, who is now in Africa, Maj. Rufus W. Putnam will be the toastmaster.

Gen. Wood is another who will go on to the Riding club, for he and Mrs. Wood will entertain a box party. Harold F. McCormick is bringing guests to occupy another box around the arena and so are Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan, Paul Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Britton I. Budd [Mr. Budd is president of the Black Horse Troop association]; Attorney General Otto Kerner, Robert W. McIlvaine, Peter Berkey, and the Mitchell Follansbees.

It is hoped that Gov. Horner will arrive to see at least a part of the evening's events. The program will start at 8:15, with the Culver Military academy polo ists meeting the Black Horse Troop team, winners of the Metropolitan league low goal championship for the current season. In the second polo game the 122d Field Artillery will play the Chicago Riding Club Seniors. Features are to be a drill by the Black Horse Troop Mounted band, a drill by the Black Horse Troop Junior Reserve, recruited from among the students at the Boys' Latin school, and a full dress drill by the entire troop.

LA SALLE street brokers probably were trying to cheer themselves up Thursday when stocks were hitting new lows. Anyway they were asking one another:

Conundrum—
Pullman pets—
Gourmet—
Repetition—
Pedantry.

"If it takes three men four days to wind 100,000 yards of baby ribbon around an elephant, how far does a dollar bill have to fall before it breaks?"

* *

SAM ROWE said he had an advantage over the others because he knew the answer. . . . "'No matter how hungry your horse is, he can't eat a bit,'" he explained.

* *

BEING one who has tried often—and sometimes successfully—to sneak a dog into a compartment on a train, struggling thereafter to get it off for a walk at stations along the way and back on again unseen by the Pullman conductor, it is with pleasure we report that dogs are now allowed on Pullman trains. Smart red placards decorated with the photograph of a dog have been put up in the trains recently that announce:

"Room passengers in Pullman cars may now have with them in baskets or small containers dogs, cats, or other animals, if not of an objectionable kind."

What, say you, would the Pullman company consider an animal of an objectionable kind? I'd say, offhand, a ferret. But some one else might say a terrier. And there you are.

FRANCES HOOPER got into a taxicab the other day to go to luncheon with a friend.

"Le Petit Gourmet," she ordered the driver. "Do you know where it is?"

"Sure," said the fellow. "I'm a gourmet myself, even if I ain't petit."

* *

THEN there was the bus driver who gave Marx E. Oberndorfer a chuckle. A woman got on a No. 51 bus going north a few mornings ago, and before she paid her fare she told the driver to stop at Ontario street. She repeated the phrase at least six times, and when she got out the driver murmured:

"Does she think she is Gertrude Stein?"

JOHN M. FLYNN, that Irishman of culture and humor who occasionally supplies material for a paragraph in this column, recently was re-reading D. A. Chart's "Story of Dublin," and he came across perhaps the nicest example of pedantry that ever has delighted the heart of a scholar. Or a columnist. It seems that one of the most famous Fellows of Dublin's Trinity college in the eighteenth century was Dr. Barrett—"Jackie" Barrett to town and gown. Barrett was noted for his encyclopedic book learning, his parsimony, his untidiness and his amazing ignorance of the workaday world. He rarely went outside the college gates. It is recorded, says Mr. Flynn, that when he first saw the sea, at Clontarf, a northern suburb of Dublin, he defined it as being "a broad, flat superficies like Euclid's definition of a line expanding itself into a surface, and blue like Xenophon's plain covered with wormwood."

Bright Scarfs Essentials of Spring Fashion

They Will Keep You Ahead of the Parade.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

The nonchalant manner in which you muffle your throatline this spring will mark you as a clothes collector just a few laps ahead of the fashion parade.

Never have scarfs been so important as a costume accessory. Unless you have some sort of a number tucked expertly or tied knowingly at the top of your swankiest suit or street outfit, something will be missing from the effect you are trying to achieve.

There's a new shipment of these tonsil wrapping beauties just unpacked that will take all your extra cash and a lot of your lunch money. Merely owning one of these rustling successes will not satisfy your "gimmie-mood." They are completely knockout. Listen to some of them as nimble fingers show you just how effectively they can be tied.

Paper taffeta in every known bright color and dotted street shade is used in a peculiarly cut scarf slashed into being by that famous French designer Agnes. It looks like a huge quarter section of a circle, slit directly up the center to within six or seven inches of the right angle. It is so big that you can drape over your chest to the waistline and presto it will double for a blouse or ample vest for your tailored suits. Or you can tie it in a large cat's whisker bow reaching from arm to arm.

Puff taffeta ascots at least eighteen inches wide come in glorious color contrasts, the plaids being especially eye filling. Then there are some surah silk ascots sporting three color stripes the length of the scarf and these too will make your eyes blink.

A sash and tie duet of checked taffeta is something new and will absolutely transform a dull dark dress. The sash ties at the right front and hangs almost to the hem, the ascot ties the same way at the neckline.

And if you are hunting for black and white combinations this is the collection to inspect. For once there are enough good looking black and white and black and white and grey combinations to suit the most demanding shopper.

Applique Quilt Pattern Rare in Charm, Beauty

Mexican Tea Rose.

Patterns in this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

BY NANCY CABOT.

"Mexican Tea Rose" is an appliqué pattern of rare charm and beauty. The vivid colors of red, yellow, and green on a white ground are ideally suited to a room with a northern exposure. The entire coverlet is made of appliqué blocks, joined block to block to form a continuous pattern. Narrow bias binding may be used for the green stems if desired. The block finishes 16 inches square, and thirty blocks are required for a coverlet.

Good Morning!

Here's that grand old May Robson again, storming, bossing, smiling, conniving, losing, winning, yes—and vamping!—as she alone knows how.

Mary Hastings is the main artery; the heart and lungs of a small town. BECAUSE—she owns the steel mills that for years have furnished the jobs that have provided the money that has maintained families and kept business buzzing.

She realizes that she is old—and tired—this gallant, brainy woman of affairs, and it is her fervent wish that some member of her family should sit in the chair she has occupied with such honor and success. But, alas, as she says herself, bitterly and sorrowfully, she has bred a strange litter. Not one of the lot who's either fit or willing to take the reins from her hands. Nevertheless, she feels too weary to go on and, so, resigns, leaving things in the capable hands of trusted employés.

Comes the depression. It looks as if the mills must close. . . .

"NEVER!" cries Mary Hastings—and she cables her family, who are jaunting in Europe, to return, that they may authorize her to put certain trust fund monies of theirs into the business.

They come. They refuse. Mary Hastings has said the mills shall NOT close! They don't. . . . But labor troubles, and this, that, and the other thing, make matters pretty complicated for awhile. Mary's granddaughter, who has let her down so completely for years, meets and falls in love with the handsome young leader of the indignant workers. . . . Which is just what Jean needed to bring out the good in the bad little girl and make her a belated credit and comfort to her grandmother.

The acting is all good, though some of the rôles are not convincingly written. Direction was pretty good, and there's some grand mountain scenery in a couple of the episodes.

See you tomorrow.

Laurel and Hardy Split After 7 Years as Film Comedy Team

Hollywood, Cal., March 15.—(AP)—The motion picture team of Laurel and Hardy, oldest and best known comedy duo in the industry, has been broken up after seven years.

Hal Roach, producer of their pictures, announced today that Stan Laurel, the bewildered, sad faced half of the combination, had not signed a new contract. "Inability to agree on stories," was the reason given by Roach.

The producer said Oliver Hardy would remain at the studio, as the star of a series of domestic comedies.

This might be titled "How to Keep from Going Mad Under the Dryer." The head of the eye salon of a Chicago beauty shop has worked out a unique eye treatment with a moist pack that protects and beautifies the eyes and induces relaxation while the hair is being dried.

Women with tired eyes and all women who feel like having angry hysterics when they're marooned under the dryer should toss bonquets to the head of the eye salon of one of our good beauty shops. She's worked out a perfectly grand plan of an eye beautifying treatment you can have while your hair is drying. Good for the eyes—and for once in your life you'll relax while the hot air is whizzing round your head.

After your hair has been done, when you're ready for the artificial drying process which is usually so trying, an operator will deftly massage some oil or cream into the lids and the corners where little crinkles grow. Then comes a wet herbal pack in the form of small pads that are placed over the tired eyes and kept on with ribbons that tie in the back. And there you are, killing a couple of birds with one gauze pack. You're sparing your eyes from the searing heat, you're giving them a beauty treatment—and you'll relax as you never did before under the dryer.

We've been a guinea pig for this experiment a couple of times and we think it is a perfectly grand idea. The first time you try it you may feel a bit strange at not being able to see what's going on around you, but you'll get over that when the relaxation creeps up on you, as it most certainly will.

Both times we had the eye packs on while our hair was drying we almost went to sleep—we would have if we had five more minutes—and that in itself is a beauty treatment, if you ask us. Like most women, we usually find the drying session pure, terrible torment that makes us want to go berserk before its half over.

Your eyes will feel and look perfectly grand after it; the sothing packs get in plenty of good work. And if eye lines are one of your beauty troubles the oiling of the area there makes it all so much more to the good.

This unique little eye treatment costs very little—but if it cost more it would still be worth it, both as a beauty aid and a solution of the problem of "how to keep from going mad under the dryer."

Keep Away from Water

By Alice Campbell.

SYNOPSIS.

Sarah MacNeil, young American living in London, accepts the hazardous though thrilling post as traveling companion to Miss Christine Venables, prim, kindly and wealthy, who has been receiving letters that cannot be traced, threatening her life. Miss Venables spends most of the year at Ste. Brigitte, a small resort in southern France. Her nephew, Harry, is to join her there soon. With Miss Venables in London is her widowed sister-in-law, Mrs. Mark Venables, Harry's stepmother. She is in poor health and Miss Venables has Dr. Gilcrest, her Ste. Brigitte physician who is visiting in London, prescribe for her. Dr. Gilcrest treats Sarah with cool aloofness, though she and Harry immediately become friends. That night Mrs. Venables dies. Her death is attributed to natural causes. On the way to Ste. Brigitte Miss Venables tells Sarah that the death threats began after her friend, Maj. Frampton, was killed in a fall down an elevator shaft. She believes he was murdered. She and the major were both threatened by two oriental drug sellers they had had prosecuted. Miss Venables' particular friends in Ste. Brigitte, besides Dr. Gilcrest, are the Baron and Baronne Henri de Bellesnaves, Beryl Tomlins, town librarian and harmless gossip, and a few old residents of the resort hotel. Sarah gathers that Dr. Gilcrest is in love with the baroness. Harry arrives. The evil looking gardener of the De Bellesnaves arouses Sarah's suspicions. Sarah calls to get a prescription of Miss Venables' from Marjory Barrows, Dr. Gilcrest's dispenser, and finds Beryl Tomlins there. Sarah goes home with Miss Tomlins after they both get the capsules they came after. Miss Tomlins gets a stomach attack. Dr. Gilcrest is called, but she is dead before he arrives. Sarah goes to return a bracelet which the baroness had dropped at Miss Venables'. She finds Harry there and he walks home with her. Miss Venables receives another threatening letter, telling her she has one more day to live. She and Sarah report it to the police, but they minimize the danger. Returning home they stop at Dr. Gilcrest's.

INSTALMENT XXX.

PLAYING HER CARDS.

"May I borrow something, too?" Sarah held out a volume bound in faded green silk which she had taken at random from the top of the case.

"Take anything you like," Brian answered. His eyes wrenched themselves away from her face to glance at her choice, then with change of expression, he exclaimed, "'Flaubert—The Trois Contes.' Think you'll care for that?"

She had hardly noticed what book it was.

"As a matter of fact, I've read this, too," she admitted. "But it was years ago, and I loved it. The style is something you can't forget, isn't it?"

"Flaubert! Yes, it's wonderful stuff. So you read French easily, do you?"

She told him that she read French almost as freely as English; that, indeed, a good part of her intermittent schooling had been in France.

"So you were at school over here—and in other countries as well? That accounts for it, I suppose."

"You mean for my smattering of an education?" she flung at him provocatively.

"For you." He waved the raillery aside, but not with his usual scorn.

"What did you suppose about me," she whispered.

"Well, my French books are down below, on the bottom shelves. Want to look them over?"

"Please!" She slipped to the floor. "All my favorites, I see. Gautier, Stendhal, Verlaine—my father read Verlaine to me, and so beautifully."

Her lap overflowed with the volumes she had pulled out. After a brief indecision Gilcrest joined her, and together they explored the collection, dropping comments, exchanging understanding glances. From literature they passed to other, more personal topics. Were they friends at last, and would these easier relations lead to something better? Sarah wanted to think so.

"O, Max! You're killing me!"

She had cried out as the terrier, rushing on her from the rear, fastened on her bare arms with playful violence. Gilcrest cuffed the dog away, swore under his breath, and taking her by the wrist bent to see the damage.

"Just where you were burned, too! God, that must hurt!"

"A little. His teeth are like needles."

He still held her arm, gently, and with a touch that thrilled. His head was so close that she could see the clean line where his cropped hair ended along the red sunburn of his neck.

"Extraordinary luck that Venables got to you in time the other day. If he hadn't—but we'll not think of that."

Taken by an impulse, she said, "I've been thinking of it. I'm afraid to mention this, because you'll be annoyed with me again, but suppose—just suppose—some one had wanted to put me out of the way?"

His blue eyes darkened. Frowning, his tone as subdued as her own, he demanded, "What do you mean, put you out of the way? You can't imagine you were set on fire deliberately?"

"It had occurred to me. I've kept quiet about it. There was no lighted cigaret near me, you know, whatever the rest might believe. But—I was very close to the window. After it was all over, I saw that gardener looking in on us."

"That's impossible nonsense," he assured her flatly. "There's no real harm in the fellow, beyond drinking and pilfering. I hope you've not let this notion prey on you?"

"O, no! Only, if I had got burned to death there'd be no one to bother much except Miss Venables. I'm an orphan child," she laughed.

"I didn't quite realize how—how unattached you were," he said soberly, his gaze on hers. "You don't look it, you know. When I first saw you I supposed——"

"What?" she whispered, at the same time aware that from the other room her name was being called. "What did you suppose about me?"

His hand had tightened on hers. Now, as though the contact stung him, he dropped it, preparing to rise.

"I'm talking pure rot. Shall we go back?"

A door had banged to in her face, but that did not distress her. Something had happened between the two of them, something which rendered her radiant, and weak, and frightened all at once.

Miss Venables' voice brought her to earth with a jar. Did Sarah think the doctor or Marjory Barrows had noticed anything in her manner? She had tried to behave quite naturally.

"You succeeded. No, how could they guess?" asked Sarah, guiltily waking to how completely her employer's situation had vanished from her mind.

"Perhaps they didn't. I trust not. I only fancied the doctor glanced at me rather closely, that was all."

That same evening Gilcrest called, though why Sarah could not make out, since he took little notice of her and seemed in subtle ways to have fallen into his old attitude. Indeed, there were grounds for assuming his interest centered solely in his patient, though that did not supply a satisfactory answer, either. In short, the visit remained a puzzle to both her employer and herself.

She had been up to fetch Miss Venables' knitting and as she emerged from the lift there he was with an air at once aimless and purposeful, just turning in through the main doors. Astonished at seeing him so soon, she inquired whether some one were ill.

"No." His eye wandered from the distant card tables to the groups in the lounge, vague, restless, concealing something. "No, I had a free interval and I thought——" His attention returned as he demanded with jerky abruptness, "Is Miss Venables all right? She struck me as a little tense."

What acute perceptions he must have! Dared she tell him about the letter? No, for that would be going directly counter to her instructions, much as she wanted to do so. Simulating surprise, she shook her head.

"No fresh upset? Miss Tomlins' death may explain it. Is she sleeping well? Eating normally?"

Miss Venables' dinner had consisted of dry biscuits and a boiled egg, even the shell of which had been examined furtively to see if it were uncracked. Precautions had begun.

"This evening she was rather Spartan, but then she often has what she calls a day off. It's dull, of course, with Harry gone. She told you, I suppose, that he'd run over to Monte Carlo?"

His eyes narrowed as they searched hers. Muttering an affirmative, he added tersely, "He'll be missed."

She always had realized he had small liking for Harry, but never had she conceived the wild notion that he might be jealous.

Throughout the ensuing conversation he was absent and uncommunicative.

Suddenly he leaned forward, unobtrusively, to place his fingers on Miss Venables' wrist.

"My pulse?" The spinster eyed him with an uncertain smile. "I'm sure it's behaving quite well."

"Make a quiet day of it tomorrow." He slipped his shirt cuff into place over the watch face he had been studying. "And"—he paused—"keep on with your capsules. For the present, at any rate."

"I will. I've just begun on the new bottle."

"Good. I should turn in now, if I were you."

He rose, shook hands with both, and with a swift glance which seemed to graze Sarah's face and veer away before she could probe it, he had left them.

Admiral Clark H. Woodward Arrives Today

He and Mrs. Woodward to Visit Cranes.

teresting to attend a party at Mrs. McCormick's home, for the house is one of the few remaining landmarks of those days when the very near north side was the city's best residential area.

Prof. Fred B. Millet is to give a part of the program discussing "Pirandello, Dramatist of Relativity." The rest of the evening will be devoted to the presentation of Pirandello's "Sicilian Limes," under the direction of Mrs. Schyler Terry. Assisting Mrs. McCormick as hostess will be Miss Clara Lake, Mrs. Karleton Hackett, Mrs. Lorado Taft, Mrs. Robert C. Wheeler, Mrs. R. Townsend McKeever, Mrs. Louis Pollock, and Mrs. Mary Welch Dickinson.

Friends and relatives of Alson Elverton Barnhart will call at his Edgewater Beach apartment late tomorrow afternoon to congratulate him on his 89th birthday. Mr. Barnhart, who has been retired for many years, was one of Chicago's pioneer business men, having established with his brother, the late Arthur M. Barnhart, one of the first and largest type foundries in the United States. Mrs. Barnhart will receive with her husband tomorrow.

Tea Tomorrow for Janet Busby.

Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Gale Taylor III. will entertain at tea tomorrow afternoon in the apartment of Mrs. Taylor's father, Howard Willett, on top of 333 North Michigan avenue, for Miss Janet Busby. Several of Miss Busby's water colors will be on display as well as the murals she did for Mr. Willett last fall.

Miss Busby, who has just returned from New York where two of her paintings were shown at the Brooklyn Museum's International show, will have one picture, "Maltese Girl with Faldetta," in the Art institute's international water color exhibit opening the 25th. Mrs. Leonard Busby will arrive from New York on Monday or Tuesday. She remained east with her son Jack at Princeton. He is a member of Princeton's fencing team and she wanted to see some matches this week-end.

Another tea tomorrow afternoon, though a smaller one, will be given in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Hayden B. Harris at 20 Cedar street. Lincoln S. Harris will entertain for his fiancée, Miss Jean Hyman, who is celebrating a birthday. Miss Valeria Harris, at home from Mount Vernon seminary, will return to school April 2.

Clubs to Celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

In clubs throughout the city and in the suburbs this evening St. Patrick's day will be celebrated. One of the most elaborate parties will be the supper-dance at the Tavern.

The Alfred Shaws will bring a dozen guests and so will William C. Boyden, the club president. Others who are entertaining at this party include Walter G. Everett, artist, who has just come to the city; Walter Frazier, the John W. Roots, and Preston Boyden. Special guests will include members of the cast of "The First Legion" and members of the D'Oyly Carte Opera company.

Skokie is making its St. Patrick's dinner-dance tonight the last of its popular winter parties. The James McMillans, the E. H. Youngloves, and the Frank Walkers are a few of those who will be enjoying this festivity. Still another St. Patrick's day is the dinner-dance for which the Illinois Athletic club has issued invitations.

Froeschle-Sawyer Wedding Today.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon in St. Chrysostom's church Miss Alice Ward Froeschle, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Frederick Froeschle of 2440 Lake View avenue, will become the bride of Dr. Malcolm H. Sawyer, son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles F. Sawyer of 5317 University avenue. The Rev. Dudley Stark will read the ceremony.

Miss Helen Sawyer, the bridegroom's sister, will be the maid of honor, and Donald Sawyer will serve his brother as best man. Ushering will be Dr. John Shronts, Dr. Frank Power, Dr. William Cleveland, Dr. Bertrand Kilbourne, Dr. Stephen Ranson, and Dr. William Bickel.

Dr. Sawyer and his bride will honeymoon in the south. Upon their return to Chicago they will make their home on the north side, and the bridegroom will begin internship in a Chicago hospital.

The John J. Mitchells and their little son and daughter are leaving next week for California to spend the rest of the winter at their home in Santa Barbara. Mr. Mitchell will more or less commute between the west coast and Chicago this spring, for he will have to come back on business several times. He will manage to be west, however, on May 1, for almost nothing could prevent his taking part in the annual Rancheros Visitadores which will be held on the 2d, 3d, 4th, and 5th of May and end, as usual, at the Rancho Juan y Lolita at Solbang.

Mrs. Stanley Keith Will Return Today.

Mrs. Stanley Keith and Miss Patsy Keith will arrive at home today from a trip to California. Miss Keith's marriage to Robert Macdonald will take place on April 27 in Lake Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reynolds and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Partridge, are leaving tomorrow after a week at the Drake hotel for their home in San Francisco.

The Dana Corbins have returned from a cruise to the West Indies. They are at home at 20 West Burton place.

The James Ewing Bennetts have returned from a two months' cruise to South America.

Mme. Caro-Delvaille will give a French lecture, "Nos paysans en litcrature," to the members of the Alliance Française at noon today.

The Renaissance society of the University of Chicago has issued invitations to a reception in the gallery for Mrs. Rudyerd Boulton on Wednesday, March 27. The first public presentation of the new series of sound and motion records of African music ensembles by native court orchestras, singers, and dancers will be given by Mrs. Boulton on Friday evening, April 5, in the theater of International house.

BY MARY MEADE.

At the house of J. V. R. a family argument is waging over how to cook barley in a soup. The head of the family contends that his grandmother never used to wash the barley, holding that washing removed a certain powder or "milling" which helped to flavor or thicken the soup. The younger members of the family feel that the washing is necessary for sanitary reasons.

Getting involved in family disputes is ticklish business, but here's the way we feel about it. The thorough washing and rinsing of the uncooked barley, which standard directions demand, is not fundamentally based on the idea of cleanliness. After prolonged boiling in the soup kettle the barley grains should be pretty well sterilized, washed first or not.

However, just as in cooking rice, the preliminary washing is intended to remove that loose starch which lingers in the "milling." It will tend to thicken the soup, true, but it also is likely to make the barley grains a bit gummy and inclined to stick together. So, our contribution to the discussion is to suggest thickening the soup by other means and keeping the barley in fluffy, distinct grains.

"What is the difference between marmalades, conserves, and preserves?" queries Miss M. H. This time we're going to give full measure and not only define those three, but fruit butters and jams as well, hoping to straighten out any confusion of terms among these five main classes of sweetened preserved fruit.

A fruit butter results from cooking fruit pulp with sugar, with or without spices, to a thick paste suitable for spreading. It requires less sugar than the other types.

Jam is a combination of sugar and fruit cooked to a thick mass, the proportion of sugar varying between ½ and ¾ pound to each pound of fruit.

Preserves usually call for more sugar than does jam. Instead of having the thick, mushy texture of the jam they contain whole fruits or pieces of fruits, all tender, clear, and plump, in a thick, transparent sirup.

A conserve is a mixture of several fruits, made like jam, and having the same consistency. In addition it may contain nuts or raisins, or both.

A marmalade is made like jelly, by cooking fruit [usually citrous in the case of marmalades] and sugar until the sirup will form a clear jelly when cooled. However, instead of the fruit being strained as for jelly the marmalade contains fine strips of the fruit, or fruit peel.

Nobody asked for this next one, but it's sure to answer a lot of problems about what to serve families with a premature case of spring fever.

Apricot Pinwheel Biscuits.

2 cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons lard
2-3 cup milk

Sift the dry ingredients together and blend in the fat until the mixture has a coarse granular texture. Add the milk and mix briefly until the flour is moistened but the dough still uneven. Then roll on a floured board to a thickness of about ¼ inch. Spread with melted butter and then with a mixture of:

¾ cup chopped dried apricots
¼ cup coarsely chopped nut meats
¼ cup brown sugar

Roll the dough and topping like a jelly roll, cut in slices an inch and a half thick, and bake for 15 minutes at 425 degrees F.

Soft Lines for Soft Lights

WOMAN'S AND MISS' DRESS.

An alluring sheer printed silk crêpe in lovely shades of deep and light pink made the original of this dress. It will be just the thing to wear for dinners and dancing. There is a lovely effect of softness in the shirred bodice and raglan cape sleeves, and you can wear it now and right through the summer. It has the new slender silhouette with flared hemline. You can also make it street length with long or caped sleeves.

The pattern, No. 3047, comes in sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure.

Scoop!—The spring edition of the Chicago Tribune Book of Clotilde Fashions is on sale. Its pages present the latest modes for spring, designs that forecast early summer styles, comprehensive suggestions for assembling colors and fabrics, and feature articles intriguing to women everywhere. The price is 15 cents; 10 cents when ordered with a pattern. Address Chicago Tribune, P. O. box 537, Grand Central station, NEW YORK CITY; or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices; 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

Stretching Is Simple Means of Acquiring Figure Beauty

BY ANTOINETEE DONNELLY.

Have you been doing any stretching lately? I mean STRETCHING for your figure.

Well, everything else is aiming to present a new line of beauty, so you women ought not to be behind the procession. And you surely can get it by putting your heart and soul in stretching exercises for a while. The beauty of this type of exercise is that every one of you can do it and do it with the least possible exertion or muscle soreness. As has been pointed out often enough to be well impressed on the mind by now, the zoo inhabitants have a monopoly on just this type of stretching work to see them through a caged existence with the lean and agile perfection for which the tiger, the lion, and a couple of other zoo citizens are noted.

The restlessness observed in nature generally to throw off the thick winter impedimenta is spreading among women. You can get them reducing in the springtime as at no other season. They'll tackle their meals with saner reservations. They'll substitute fruits and vegetables and leaner meats for that in which they have been indulging.

But if they want a real job done on their silhouettes, they ought to get after the stretching work. I've observed a good deal of exercise duty in my time. I've practiced a great deal of it myself. But for quick and easy shedding of adipose I'm here to tell you that you can't beat these stretching performances when they're done with a will.

Some advisers suggest stretching before getting out of bed. I think it better to get right out and meet your fat opponent on the floor. There's something about getting up and at it that promises surer results than making it a preface to arising. You don't even need to go through prescribed movements. All you need to do is to get down on that floor and stretch as if you were pulling yourself apart. Stretch down from the waist, up from the waist. Stretch the arms, the feet, the spine, and the neck.

Wife Dictating to Husband Is Ugly Picture

BY DORIS BLAKE.

There's a little trick common among wives without which they'd appear much more charming. We've often wondered just what is its basis in female psychology. Maybe you women can help. Why, when outsiders are around, do you insist upon "ordering" your man to do this and that little service? Maybe you think you're just making a request,—but that curt, bossy way you do it makes it sound like a command from the boss.

Maybe it's the simple matter of telling him to hang up his coat, to put his rubbers in the closet, to shake up a cocktail, perhaps. To open a window. To empty the ash tray. To change his chair. Or give up his chair to one of the outsiders. Legitimate requests all of them, but it is the tone of them that tranforms the decorative enough creature, known as the man's wife, into a sort of henpecker. The effect is somewhat as if the woman addressed the guests with: "Watch me make my little dog jump through this hoop!" The commands are issued in a tone not dissimilar to those that would be used were one making an animal perform.

We don't think the habit a particularly menacing one, since the husbands of said women take the commands docilely enough. Maybe they like being ordered around instead of being requested pleasantly to do this and that. But somehow it jars one's nice impression of the little woman herself. You detect the "big boss" complex there, in place of the more pleasing suggestion of an amiable, gracious companion.

To this outsider, at least, there's a belittlin' attitude toward the man, a lack of respect for him which isn't smart billiards to give out about one's husband. One measures a man largely by the attitude of his intimates toward him. Truer than this, however, one measures the woman by her technique with her man. If she bawls him out before people, she's the one who suffers loss of respect. If she orders him about she simply exposes a cue to her character that isn't, well, what a pretty dear's character should be!

Cochran, Famous London Producer, Wins Equity Battle

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 15.—Exactly a fortnight after his ultimatum threatening to sever his connection with the theater, Charles B. Cochran, London's premier producer, tonight won a fight with Equity, actors' union, over the question of the closed shop.

On his return from New York recently Cochran refused to join the theater council set up by Equity and west end managers and declined to accept the standard form of contract for artists.

After much bickering Equity, in a statement tonight announcing the settlement, declares that the unions are "quite satisfied that Cochran never had any intention of giving a less favorable contract than that approved by Equity."

Cochran intends to proceed immediately with three new productions, giving employment to 184 players.

Phoenix Theater Group Presents MacLeish's 'Panic'

New York, March 15.—(AP)—The Phoenix theater group tonight presented "Panic," a modern tragedy by Archibald MacLeish, who won the Pulitzer prize with his poem "Conquistador."

"Panic" tells in verse the tale of ticker terror that Wall street learned in the dread days of 1933.

In the cast were prominent persons along Broadway, like Orson Welles, Richard Whorf, Harold Johnsrud and Rose McClendon. The mob was made up of "borrowed" players who got $40 for their efforts, union scale for a week's work.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON DEDUCTIVE DOUBLES AND DEFENSIVE BIDDING.

There is just one more situation to consider. North, on our left, bids one in a suit. Your partner passes. South bids a no trump. When should you, in the West seat, take action at this stage?

MY VIEW IS THAT YOU NEED A VERY GOOD HAND to make an immediate move by doubling or bidding before you know anything more about the opening bidder's hand. The latter has an opening bid, but you do not know that it is a minimum one; it may be almost a forcing opening bid. True, if they are playing certain "tell the world" system you may know that this hand is of limited power, because it did not make an "intermediate" two bid or artificial bid of some kind. Apart from such knowledge, you cannot be sure that you are not trapped between hands containing all the high cards which you lack. Your partner's pass may be on utterly worthless holdings; the no trump response may have been made on one and a half to two tricks furnishing three entries with which to lead through your hand and destroy almost every value in it. Really, to do otherwise than pass in this position you must have a hand with very substantial safety in it apart from anything your partner may or may not hold. You must have at least as good as an opening bid for first or second position, or else an unusually long suit, in which you feel you are safe. Remember that you are on lead against no trumps, so there is no need to bid in order to get the only lead which might be expected to defeat three no trumps. Also, if you pass and the opening bidder also passes.

YOUR PARTNER WILL MAKE A MOVE if he has more or less what you need to get anywhere, whether as declarers or in inflicting a penalty. If you do double in this position you are telling your partner to pass the double for business if he has about a trick and a half. That is, you have almost a one no trump bid yourself in your own hand. If you overcall in this position, you are holding out hopes of game in your suit, and your partner should respond about as he would to an opening bid in that suit, ignoring the fact that the opponents had already made two bids against you. In fact, a move by you in this situation usually means either that you are showing up a psychic bid by the opener, or that the hand is extremely freakish and you have good reason for making immediate and urgent efforts to obtain the declaration and obstruct the bidding exchanges of your opponents. I do not think it is necessary to make up any examples. Assuming that, the reasoning I employ is clear to you, your handling of these advanced, delicate situations will be much freer and more effective if you remember the point of view I suggest instead of visualizing and mentally consulting any example hands I might give.

General Observation on Negative Doubles and Defensive Bidding.

I wish to request you to humor me on one point. Do not refer to this branch of contract bidding as being an integral part of the Sims system. This is not "system," really. These are treatments I suggest for various situations and types of hands. "System" is the wrong word. I have never liked it in connection with cards. Really it only applies when we are dealing with two bids and three bids and their responses, where deadly mechanical robotlike precision is the sole factor. The word glorifies method at the expense of imagination or strategy. My theory of this game is to give every scope and play to imagination and strategy and versatility. I want you to use your intellects, not your powers of memorizing values or examples. So if you discuss with others the defensive bidding which I have discussed with you, please do not say "Under the Sims system you must bid or pass defensively with such and such holdings." Rather, "Let me show you Sims' treatment for such and such types of hands and bidding situations. Of course, you must play your opponents, their idiosyncracies and weaknesses and the weaknesses of their particular system; that is no less important than the bidding of your thirteen cards. Base your strategy on psychological factors whenever you can. If you do the tactics Sims provides for the execution of your strategic planning will not fail you in the long run."

Rogers Donates $1,600 to Crew on Latest Film

Fears Delays Cost Workers Other Studio Jobs.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., March 15.—[Special.]—When Will Rogers' current film, "Doubting Thomas," shot its last scene this week Rogers reached into his pocket for $1,600, which he distributed to the carpenters, electricians, grips, and other workers on the technical crew. He makes a habit of doing that when one of his pictures runs over the allotted shooting schedule, figuring that the workmen on a film lose their opportunity to get paying work on some other movie story when his own keeps them working more days than expected.

"Doubting Thomas" ran over two days. Rogers once figured that workmen lose a combined salary of around $800 if all of them were to lose one day's work on the same day. Rogers dug into his own pocket for the crew once before, when "David Harum" ran over schedule.

He's not the only big shot in the movies who remembers the boys in overalls under such circumstances. When a "Midsummer Night's Dream" was completed last week both Max Reinhardt and William Dietrle, who directed the fantasy, distributed gifts to all members of the technical crew. I asked, "Did they give remembrances to the cast also?" and was told, "Gosh sakes, no. Too many people worked in the cast to do that." Almost 100 actors played big and little rôles in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," excluding extras.

Rogers' new contract with Fox nets him more than $100,000 a picture. He has been making four pictures a year. His first contract with Fox was signed with Winfield Sheehan in 1928, and by the time the new one runs out the comedian will have drawn between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 salary from Fox.

Joe E. Brown never had so much fun in his life as he's having now. His boyhood ambition was to play professional baseball, and he did get a tryout. Right now he's playing baseball all day in the film version of Ring Lardner's story, "Alibi Ike." Brown's company has been shooting scenes at the Fullerton, Cal., ball park, where the Hollywood Pacific Coast league club is training. Joe plays in the morning with the Hollywood club for exercise and in the afternoon with his movie ball club for the film shots.

Olivia De Haviland, Max Reinhardt's 18 year old find from Mills college, from which Reinhardt lifted her to a lead rôle in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," has moved from the sublime to be Joe E. Brown's leading woman in the baseball drammer.

Mack Gray, George Raft's pal and secretary, has slipped a diamond ring on the finger of Lucille Ball, movie belle of several successive choruses for Sam Goldwyn.

In the "Calco Dragon," animated cartoon in which the figures are made of cloth, the Danube river is represented by blue gingham, a Scottie dog by plaid cloth, trees are made of yarn with trunks from spools of thread and the skies and mountains from neckties. Some of the tree trunks housing the tiny animals of the cartoon were fashioned from sweaters with zippers, which the little animals use for entrance and exits. The "star" of the novelty in cartoon comedies is a three headed dragon of Calco which astonishes watchers by singing its own songs, the three heads forming a trio.

Judith Allen, who was seen much with Max Baer recently, attended the opening of the Los Angeles King's club with Jack Doyle, visiting Irish heavyweight boxer.

Day Dreaming Quite Normal in Young Child

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Stop a minute and think about your 9 year old daughter—your 10 year old son. Then glance back two years or perhaps only one—hasn't there been a great change in them? Can't you see that a rapid development has taken place in their personality, their physical set up, too, perhaps, and that their characters are taking on definitness? There's more freedom, more authority, a surer touch.

At the onset of adolescence in a few years, this sureness sometimes fades, to be followed later by another positive development of personality and character, as the boy or girl feels the ground grow firmer under his or her feet as manhood and womanhood come closer.

But let us go back to these "inbetweens"—the 6's or 7's to 11's or 12's—that we've talked about in this column off and on now for several weeks. There's one phase which often appears during these years. It is what parents worry about and describe as "dreaminess." What they usually mean is that they notice their child sitting, or stretched out in a chair, or standing at a window, or stopping right in the midst of some activity, just doing nothing.

Why worry about this? We who fill our days with doing—doing—doing—are apt to think that that doing nothing is bad for a child. But why should we think so? These are, I believe, the times when a child's inner life is making itself felt—when some inner voice is speaking. Or again they may be times when every ordinary activity is suspended while he dreams of—who knows what?—perhaps what he'll do or be, or what he would have done or been had he lived in the past. Or again, he may be doing some straight ahead thinking.

Here are probable causes for your child's dreaming. Now what to do about it? Admit its place and try not to expect your child always to be on tap, or always to be doing something of which you can see the point or which you consider useful. Also, unless these times seem so frequent that they interfere with a fair amount of play and companionship, let the child alone. Just keep your eyes, as always, on a rounded way of living for him, with outdoor life and companionship and interests and plenty of good food and sleep all fairly well balanced in your scheme for him.

London Film Houses Denied New Movies in War Over Rentals

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 15.—Fifty London movie theaters today found their supplies of new films suddenly cut off as the Kinematograph Renters' society continued its struggle to prevent cut price bookings.

Some theaters may have to close if the renters persist in their refusal to supply the films, but most of the 50 have shows booked ahead for a long period. One film booked by a theater was withdrawn this week by the owners.

The struggle is being waged with two groups which made arrangements with the Gaumont British Picture corporation last month for cheaper bookings.

JURGES, KLEIN LEAD ATTACK WITH HOMERS

Coleman and Joiner Do Pitching.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., March 15.—The Cubs, inspired considerably by home runs by Chuck Klein and Bill Jurges, ended their pre-season doings with the Pittsburgh Pirates today, winning their second successive victory of the exhibition series, 7 to 5.

CHUCK KLEIN.

Klein's big stroke got the Cubs off to a two run lead, but a fourth inning flurry against Roy Joiner put the Pirates ahead, 3 to 2. Jurges' homer tied it up the seventh and a cluster of four runs in the eighth sealed the verdict.

The Cubs will meet the White Sox here tomorrow. Lon Warneke and Larry French are scheduled to do the pitching.

Klein's homer came after English had singled off Swift with one out in the first inning. It was a powerful shot against the right field wall. The Cubs' two run lead stood up during the first three innings in which Joiner really did some fine pitching.

Pirates Rear Up.

After the Cubs had grabbed a lead they settled back on their heels, defensively, for a spell, an unhappy bogging down, for Joiner rounded into form in the latter half of the fourth. The Pirates hammered across three runs in that inning in the following manner: P. Waner led off with a single to center. Traynor singled to right, P. Waner stopping at second. Browne singled to left, filling the bases and Ol' Roy never looked better. Lavagetto socked a double against the right field screen, scoring P. Waner and Traynor and putting Browne on third. Browne scored on Jensen's fly to Stainback. Padden lined to Lindstrom.

A young man named Wayne Osborne took over the Pirate pitching job in the fifth and ably protected his team's 3 to 2 lead until Jurges' homer tied the score with one out in the seventh.

Relief Takes Charge.

Jurges and Stainback were the only starters not relieved when Manager Grimm sent forth replacements at the outset of the Pirate sixth.

An error by Hack on a double play ball put the heat on Coleman in the seventh, but Frank came through unscathed. Jensen singled with one out. Padden grounded to Hack for what appeared to be cinch double play until Hack threw high to Cihocki. Both runners were safe. Brubaker batted for Osborne and was given extended life when Goebel, for the second time, dropped a foul fly. He was not charged with an error on this one, but it made things no easier for Coleman. Coleman eventually got Brubaker out by fanning him.

Cubs Smack Smith.

Smith was the third Pirate pitcher, starting in the eighth. He was very bad or the Cub hitters suddenly became very good. At any rate here's what happened: Galan walked and advanced on Cihocki's sacrifice. Demaree doubled off the wall in left center, scoring Galan and Hack doubled to left, scoring Demaree. Stainback was thrown out by Vaughan, but Cavarretta doubled to right center, scoring Hack. Jurges singled to left, scoring Cavarretta. Goebel then flied to L. Waner.

L. Warner doubled to drive in two runs after two were out in the last half of the ninth.

Johnny Brown Eager to Face N.Y. Champion

The Chicago lad who is most anxious to get at a New York Golden Gloves champion is Johnny Brown, the newsboy who whipped the spectacular Troy Bellini and won the Chicagoland bantamweight championship.

"I don't know how strong New York's champion might be," Brown said after a full day of training at the Illinois Athletic club last night. "But my friends have told me that I'm not liable to ever have a harder battle than the one in which I met Bellini for the Chicago championship.

"If that is true, it makes me nervous to think that I can't tackle the New York champion tomorrow or the next day. I'm always thinking that conditions may change in two weeks, but I'm intending that they won't."

They're Best of Pals.

Despite their desperate struggle for the bantamweight championship, Brown and Bellini are the best of pals in the Chicago squad's training camp. Beginning next week they will engage in some lively training encounters in the ring, but these engagements are not expected to break up the friendship that has developed between them.

Chicago fans who watched members of the Chicago squad go through a fairly easy drill yesterday came to the conclusion that Chicago will sweep the intercity bantamweight matches against New York with two such able lads as Brown and Bellini to carry on for the home side.

Then, too, Bill Joyce of Gary also reported at the training camp yesterday with fire in his eye. He thought he had whipped Bellini in the semi-final round of the Tournament of Champions matches, and so did hundreds of others in the record breaking crowd.

Joyce May Come Through.

It may be that he will show up to such advantage during the training period that he will be Brown's running mate in the struggle against New York. At any rate, there isn't a division on the Chicago team that appears to be so well fortified to knock the stuffin' out of New York as our 118 pound class.

Twenty-one of the 24 members of the Chicago squad were on hand when Coach Johnny Behr counted noses yesterday.

See Canzoneri-Woods Battle.

After their light drill yesterday, the members of the Chicago squad journeyed to the Chicago Stadium last night to see Tony Canzoneri and Chuck Woods battle it out in their 10 round professional engagement.

They gave Coach Behr a mighty cheer when he announced to them at the dinner table that he was going to take them out to see the professional scrap.

SOX' 9TH INNING RALLY IS HALTED BY LOS ANGELES

Second Stringers Star in First Practice Game.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Santa Monica, Cal., March 15.—The White Sox's maiden effort of 1935 on the barnstorming circuit today was not much of a success. They were spanked by the Los Angeles Coast leaguers, 5 to 3, but the day's effort was not a total loss. What the major leaguers lost for the moment in prestige was offset by the revenue derived from 3,000 cash customers.

The main difficulty with the Sox was that they found too much trickery involved in the pitching offered by the minor league brethren. Against one Emmet [Ramrod] Nelson, the Chicagoans notched only four hits and one run in five innings. Next came Ralph Buxton, and he continued the depression by yielding only one hit in three innings. Then the Sox worked themselves into a rage in the ninth, and away he went, but Herb Harris, the former Northwestern southpaw, stepped in and the fun ceased with three runners still on the bases.

Rigney Satisfies Boss.

What Dykes saw in three freshmen pitchers he used caused no happiness, except in one instance. J. Dungan Rigney, the Chicago semi-pro, who started, was a scared young man in a three inning workout. Despite apparent fright, he managed to hold the Angels to one run, which was the result of an error.

Rigney, although lacking in control, was able to wriggle through the first two innings. In the third, his wildness, along with generosity on the part of Hayes, enabled the Angels to get a runner around. Rigney handed a pass to Nelson, the opposing pitcher. Nelson moved to second on Statz's infield out. Then Reese poked a common grounder at Hayes, but he let it slip through his hands and before the ball could be recaptured Nelson was across the plate. Rigney completed the inning before quitting work.

Ah! The Sox Get One.

Business picked up for the major leaguers in the fifth. They produced a couple of hits and the tying run.

Casey set the pace by singling to center after two were out. He scored on a double over first base by Hayes. For producing the first double of the afternoon Hayes won a free greasing and polishing job for his car, but it happens that his car is somewhere in Alabama.

Young Casey had enough trouble in the fourth, his first inning, to indicate more immediately ahead. It came in the Angel's fifth. With one out Statz singled to right center, stole second and scored on Reese's single over second. Gudat beat out a hit to deep short. Casey let loose a wild pitch on which the two runners advanced. Then Veltman, once a wearer of White Sox, knocked everything into a mess by sailing a homer over the left field fence for three runs.

Jocko Starts a Rally.

The Sox outburst in the ninth was a welcome relief for Dykes after he had seen his supposed regulars checked on five hits for eight innings. Conlan, who subbed for Simmons after the sixth, started the splurge by singling to left. Wright, who had replaced Bonura, singled to the same spot. Hafey, who filled in for Washington in left, ripped off a terrific drive which Reese knocked down and held to a single. This filled the bases.

Appling relieved the congestion on the bases by flying deep to right, Conlan scoring and Wright going to third after the catch. The bases were reloaded on a pass to Mauldin. This finished Buxton's mound service. At this point, Harris the ex-Northwestern athlete, was dragged into action. He induced Shea to poke a double play ball to short, but Mattick fumbled. Wright scored on the error and the bags remained loaded. Hopkins batted for Stratton and flied to Gudat in left. Then Hayes ended it by rolling into a forceout.

MURPHY LEAVES FOR NEW YORK AND K. OF C. MEET

Notre Dame, Ind., March 15.—[Special.]—Capt. Vincent Murphy, of the Notre Dame track team, left today for New York to compete tomorrow in the K. of C. games. He set a central intercollegiate and Notre Dame gymnasium record of 6 feet 7¼ inches in the high jump last Saturday.

Murphy has been in the infirmary two days this week with a cold, but Coach John Nicholson expressed the belief that the rest might do him good.

Two mile and one mile relay teams, Don Elser, shot putter; Jack Edwards, pole vaulter; Charles Jordan, sprinter; Bob Bernard, quarter miler, and Jim Sheils, half miler, will compete in the Armour relays tomorrow.

BERNICE WALL WINS TITLE IN BELLEAIR GOLF

Belleair, Fla., March 15.—[Special.]—Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, and Frances Hadfield, Milwaukee, the two young Wisconsin golfers who provided the big upsets of the annual Belleair women's golf tournament, today battled for 20 holes before Miss Wall took the title with a 1 up victory on the second extra green.

Miss Hadfield was dormie 2 leaving the sixteenth green, but lost the last two holes. They halved the nineteenth, and a trapped second shot, followed by a poor recovery, cost Miss Hadfield the twentieth and match.

That's right! Tickets for the Intercity Golden Gloves bouts, Chicago vs. New York, at the Chicago Stadium, March 29, originally were available in five price classes.

But Chicago's fight fans didn't let that situation prevail very long. They stormed the ticket counters; they flooded the mails with orders, and now the only tickets which remain are those at $3.30 and $2.20.

The supply of these is limited. Get yours today! Tickets on sale at the Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street, and at Tribune Tower. Or send check or money order to Golden Gloves Manager, Tribune Tower, Chicago.

CARNERA BEATS IMPELLITIERE BY KNOCKOUT IN 9TH

Referee Dempsey Stops Bout; 18,000 Attend.

New York March 15.—[Special.]—Ray Impellitiere's hope for recognition as a heavyweight championship contender ended tonight in the ninth round of his bout with Primo Carnera when Referee Jack Dempsey stepped between the fighters and awarded victory to the gigantic Italian.

By the time the match was stopped Impellitiere had been beaten into such a stupor that he could make no further pretense at defense against the clumsy blows of Carnera. Harry Lenny, Impellitiere's manager, made the move which ended the bout leaping into the ring when he decided that his boxer was in danger of permanent injury. At the same time Dr. Vincent Nardiello the boxing commission's physician was calling upon Referee Dempsey to interfere.

Charges Foul Tactics.

Lenny charged that Carnera used foul blows repeatedly and that these had disabled Impellitiere. Dempsey had ordered the judges to take one round—the fourth—from Carnera because of a low punch and had cautioned the Italian on another occasion. But it was the opinion of ringside observers that Impellitiere's poor condition and cautiousness did more than anything else to bring about his downfall.

Impellitiere, weighing 258½ pounds, was flabby, and tired quickly. Carnera weighed 268.

The show drew 18,094 spectators to Madison Square Garden—the best crowd of the season at that arena. Receipts amounted to $44,952.

As a reward for tonight's victory Carnera will be matched with the winner of the Art Lasky-Jimmy Braddock bout, which is scheduled for next Friday, Promoter Jimmy Johnston said.

Impellitiere Takes Offensive.

Impellitiere threatened to make a fight of it for the first five rounds of the scheduled ten. He was the aggressor in the first round, outpunched Carnera again in the third, and took the fourth when the Italian hit below the belt. The fifth was about even, but from that point Impellitiere was soundly beaten.

Carnera, apparently under wraps in the early stages, lumbered from his corner in the seventh with instructions from his battery of managers to finish it as soon as possible. In that round, in the next, and in the abbrevi ted ninth, he punished Impellitiere unmercifully. He landed heavy rights to the head and body, pounded his opponent against the ropes and chased him around the ring. But Impellitiere was still on his feet when the match ended. Thirty-eight seconds of the round had passed when Dempsey interfered.

DEMPSEY JESTS WITH BOOTBLACK; SUED FOR $3,000

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—Jack Dempsey has always been the idol of Browny McFarland, colored bootblack, and he still is, but McFarland wants $3,000 from the ex-champion.

Browny sued for the cash because Dempsey, in a playful mood, shoved him in the abdomen with the powerful Dempsey elbow on Jan. 8, after receiving a shave and a shine in the barber shop where McFarland worked.

According to McFarland's suit, he felt severe pains a couple of hours after his idol had dealt out the jesting blow, and went to Polyclinic hospital. The trouble with hospitals, though, said McFarland, who is 5 feet 4 inches and weighs 130 pounds, was that the doctors all thought he was a psychopathic case when he said he was suffering from a Dempsey punch.

The ex-champion, served with papers in the suit at his home, has entered a general denial to the charges.

VACATION!

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 15.—Friend Arch: Well, Arch, I received your letter saying it looked as if about all the hard work I could do for you out here was done with the closing of Santa Anita and maybe that I better be thinking about coming home. I was feeling that way, too, and just a little homesick to crook elbows again with the staf over at the corner of Rush and Grand.

I appreciate your saying that you thought I had worked so hard that I better take my vacation now, out here if I wished, because I really have worked hard and have been very conscientious about my expense account.

There's one thing I'd like to bring up, however. This is my 1934 vacation and not my 1935 vacation because I never had any 1934 vacation. The reason I mention it is because once I saved up five weeks in vacations and days off on which I had worked, and about that time cumulative vacations were abolished by notice on the bulletin board.

But I never felt badly or moaned about that, Arch, as you remember, because I always say, "Do right by the boss all the time and give him your best efforts and he'll always do right by you." And that's the way it has proved for you are very understanding, especially about expense accounts.

So I'll follow your suggestion and take now my vacation [for 1934] and see you early in April when we'll talk about whether you want French Lane and me to go to the Kentucky Derby as usual. I have sent on a batch of Way Back Whens to Bruce Dennis for Sundays. I have so many on hand that it's just a copying job and many people like to see them and I don't like to be entirely out of the paper even when I am on vacation. It'll probably be better soon, but it's pretty cool here right now. Hoping you are the same. Regards.

Harvey T. Woodruff.

Of course, it isn't courteous to talk too much about earthquakes in this sector. Occasionally, however, you meet a chap whom you knew back in the middlewest and can speak freely. Hollywood Ratings.

Ever since we've been in Hollywood, we've tried to get the proper grading of screen performers, which is a touchy subject with them, at least. We're told by a studio attaché the rating is: Stars, featured players, "bit" players, and extras. If you're interested this should please you. See You Tomorrow, à la Mae Tinée.

Incidentally, we'll be interested in reading Miss Tinée's review of "Life Begins at Forty" when it reaches us, in which Will Rogers departs a notch from the similitude which makes one feel that when one had seen one Rogers' picture, he has seen them all.

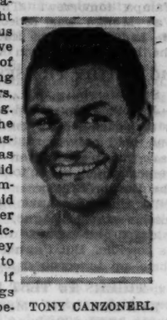
TONY HAMMERS CHUCK WOODS INTO DEFEAT

Ramey and Belloise Triumph.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Fistiana's grand old man—Tony Canzoneri—swept youth aside again at the Chicago Stadium last night and in ten furious rounds he gave Chuck Woods of Detroit, a young man of 21 years, a sound spanking.



TONY CANZONERI.

Woods knew he had met his master when it was over and so did the 8,718 customers who had paid $18,196 to cheer Tony in his victory. Yet they were prepared to weep with him if his ancient legs had tottered beneath him.

Those old legs, as stout as a couple of hickory saplings, never faltered and Tony brought all his strength and his ring craftsmanship into play to finish on top. His finish was so strong that he gained the unanimous decision of Referee Tommy Thomas and Judges William A. Battye and Ed Klein.

The score cards read:

Referee Thomas—Canzoneri, 56; Woods, 44.
Judge Klein—Canzoneri, 53; Woods, 45.
Judge Battye—Canzoneri, 56; Woods, 44.

Tony was the aggressor throughout, but every time he rushed and smashed his way toward Woods in the first three rounds, he ran into a straight left or if it wasn't a left Woods was swinging, he was smacking Tony in the stomach with a right that fairly sizzled as it traveled to its mark.

Tony Goes to Work.

When the fourth round started Tony shook his head. He seemed to say: "Gee, kid, I hate to muss up your face like they've hammered mine, but I guess I'll have to do it or they'll be carrying me out of the ring."

Then old Tony proceeded to treat Woods as the older boys had treated him while he was climbing up the ladder. The fourth round had just opened when Tony's right caught Woods on the right eye. The blow opened up a cut.

Tony's left, traveling all the way from his hips, caught Woods squarely on the nose, and it began to bleed. From then on Canzoneri kept peppering his right at Woods' injured eye and his left at Woods' bloody nose.

Tony Lacks Punch.

The old power which first swept Canzoneri to the world's featherweight championship, then to the world's lightweight title and later on to the world's junior welterweight crown was lacking behind these blows. Still Tony landed enough of them to go far into the lead.

Woods, a bit pale as it ended, smiled and attempted to look brave. The crowd was shaking the rafters with cheers for Canzoneri.

The nearest thing to a knockout came in the second round when Woods was pushing Tony all around the ring, plainly worrying the former world's champion with his pesky left. Suddenly Tony shot a left hook to the body and Woods dropped to his knee. He was up instantly and it was then that Tony began shaking his head and assumed an attitude of "what'll I have to do to whip this kid?"

Belloise Stops Foe.

In the closing round when Tony piled up his long lead on points, he went after Woods furiously with body punches. Lefts and rights landed in the Detroit youngster's midsection. Occasionally he went up with his attack to smash his right into Woods' injured eye and his left into that nose which just wouldn't stop bleeding.

Mike Belloise, New York featherweight, conceded six pounds to Orville Drouillard, Windsor, Ont., who weighed 133, and then handed him a terrific lacing for five rounds before Referee Frank McAdams stopped it.

Drouillard, who substituted for Varias Milling, was dropped twice in the fourth round, the first time for no count and the other for nine. He rose both times full of fight. His courage alone was insufficient and when Belloise landed a sizzling left hook to the chin, which dropped Orville into the ropes helpless shortly after the fifth round opened, the match was halted.

Ramey Beats Sagilio.

Wesley Ramey, Grand Rapids, Mich., gave Frank Sagilio of Cicero a boxing lesson in the first of the three ten round matches. With the exception of the fourth and tenth rounds Sagilio was unable to land a solid punch. Ramey, one of the best boxers in the lightweight division, jabbed his young opponent almost at will in the majority of the sessions.

Sagilio tired in the seventh and eighth rounds. He started the tenth round with a terrific two handed attack to the head and body. It took all of Ramey's ingenuity and skill to elude these blows, but he was equal to the test.

Sammy Chivas, Detroit welterweight, and Dick Sisk, Chicago, boxed six rounds to a draw in the opening bout. Billy Treest, Batavia, Ill., 1934 Golden Gloves middleweight champion, stopped Lee Savoldi, St. Paul, Minn., light heavyweight, in the fourth round of the second preliminary, also scheduled at six rounds.

HARD HITTING OF TRAVIS JACKSON BEATS CARDINALS

Double and Triple Give Giants 2-0 Victory.

Miami, Fla., March 15.—(AP)—With Travis Jackson driving in both runs, the New York Giants defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 2 to 0, today.

Jackson doubled in the fourth inning off Bill Walker to score Hank Leiber, who had tripled, and in the sixth cracked out a three bagger to send Phil Weintraub, who had walked and stolen second, across the plate.

Le Roy Parmelee, Hal Schumacher and John Leonardo, a rookie, combined to hold the Cards to nine scattered hits. The Giants were blanked the first three innings and the last two by a pair of former Chicago Cubs—Pat Malone and Bud Tinning.

DODGERS MEET REDS TODAY.

Orlando, Fla., March 15.—(AP)—The Dodgers today went through their final routine workout before they open the exhibition season against Cincinnati at Tampa tomorrow. The pitching of Van Mungo was especially effective. He had most of the leading hitters of the club swinging in vain.

MC CARTHY PRAISES PITCHERS.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 15.—(AP)—Joe McCarthy called off the practice game scheduled for the Yankees today and held only a routine workout to save his pitchers for the exhibition games which begin tomorrow against the Boston Braves

"I think we have the best young pitchers in the league," he said, "and I aim to put them to the test as soon as possible. But I'm not going to burn them up in scrub games."

TIGERS TO TEST ROOKIES.

Lakeland, Fla., March 15.—(AP)—Three rookies likely to stick with the Detroit Tigers this season will be in the lineup Saturday against the Phillies.

Clyde Hatter from Louisville will share the pitching with Alvin Crowder, Dixie Howell will be at third, and Chester Morgan in right field. Hank Greenberg, who is warning the league that he is the coming home run king, will bat in the clean up position. Schoolboy Rowe will make his first start of the season against the Reds at Tampa Sunday.

BROWNS, 15; RED SOX, 2.

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 15.—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns recovered their lost batting vision today and batered three rookie pitchers of the Boson Red Sox all over the park for 13 its and a 15 to 2 victory.

Merena opened for the Sox and held p well for three innings, letting in hree runs. The barrage started in he sixth when, with Mulligan on the ill, the Browns gathered fn four runs nd followed with eight more tallies in he seventh off Hockette. A three agger by Joe Cronin and singles by aiters and Cooke accounted for the oston runs.

Fort Myers, Fla., March 15.—(AP)—Connie Mack sent his Philadelphia Athletics through a prolonged batting practice today. Each batter was obliged to lay down a bunt and then take a full swing at the ball. Ed Coleman, outfielder, received a minor injury when he attempted to bunt a fast ball which caromed off his bat and struck his knee.

REDS TO FACE DODGERS.

Tampa, Fla., March 15.—(AP)—Pitchers bore the brunt today as the Cincinnati Reds held a hard workout in preparation for the game with the Dodgers tomorrow. Manager Dressen said Hermann, Schott, and Hollingsworth, rookie pitchers, will face the Brooklyn crew.

INDIANS TO PLAY PELICANS.

New Orleans, La., March 15.—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians prepared today to hand a surprise to the New Orleans Pelicans when they resume their training series tomorrow. For two days following the 7 to 1 defeat of the tribe by the Pelicans the Redskins have gone through long batting practice. The pitchers are reported in good condition.

Hawks Play Bruins Tonight Then Rangers

The Blackhawks, still smarting from the effects of a 4 to 3 whipping by the Detroit Red Wings Thursday night in their farewell home game of the regular season, begin the final stage of their schedule tonight at Boston, where they will meet the first place Bruins. The game is the first of three the champions will play within four days to wind up their 48 game program. Tomorrow night they will battle the Rangers at Madison Square Garden in New York, and on Tuesday they finish against the Canadiens at Montreal.

The Hawks are definitly settled in second place in the American section of the National Hocky league, with a mathematical possibility remaining that they may come home third in the season standings. Their defeat by the Wings on Thursday while the Bruins were winning from the Americans precluded any possibility of the Chicagoans overtaking Boston, which is now seven points ahead of the Hawks. Even though they win all three of their remaining games the champions can gain only six points.

One Point Ahead.

The Hawks are now only a point ahead of the third place Rangers, and there is still a chance for the latter to overtake them for second place. In order for this to come about, however, the Hawks would have to lose all three of their games, including the Ranger contest tomorrow night, which is the only game left on the New Yorkers' schedule. If the Hawks came out of the Boston and Canadien games with nothing more than a tie, while the Rangers beat them tomorrow, both teams would finish with a total of 52 points. The team having the most goals would then take second place, and the Rangers now lead the Hawks in this department, 135 to 104.

Bruins vs. Leafs.

The present cup playoff situation would indicate, however, that the three American section teams will finish as they are now—Boston first, Chicago second, and Rangers third. Boston already has its opponent in the Toronto Maple Leafs. They will play a three out of five game series, starting in Boston. The Hawks should play the Montreal Maroons, and the Rangers the Canadiens. If the Hawks finish in second place they plan to remain in Montreal, meeting the Maroons in their first playoff game Thursday and returning to Chicago for the second on Sunday.

SET PLAY-OFF DATES

MONTREAL, Que., March 15.—(AP)—The National Hocky league playoffs, leading to possession of the Stanley cup, will start either March 22 or 23 in Boston when the Toronto Maple Leafs, winners of the international division, oppose the Bruins, the United States section's champions, in the first of a three out of five series for the league championship.

The second game also will be played in Boston, March 26, before the two teams move to Toronto to conclude the series. The third contest is scheduled for March 28, and the remaining two, if necessary, will take place March 30 and April 2.

The dates for the other playoff series were not announced by President Frank Calder pending the deciding of the second place team in the United States division. The Montreal Maroons already have clinched runner-up honors in the international section and will clash with either the Chicago Blackhawks or the New York Rangers. The Montreal Canadiens, as the third place club in the international division, will meet whichever team does not qualify to tangle with the Maroons.

Maine, Downers Grove Meet for Title Tonight

Maine and Downers Grove reached the final round of the annual Wheaton lightweight basketball tournament last night at Wheaton and will meet tonight for the championship. Maine triumphed over Riverside, 32 to 22, and Downers Grove defeated Morton of Cicero, 29 to 27, in an overtime game.

Joe Louis and Natie Brown to Meet in Detroit

Natie Brown, Washington, D. C., heavyweight, will be Joe Louis' opponent in the ten round windup bout at Detroit Olympia, March 29, Co-Matchmaker James C. Mullen announced yesterday. Charley Retzlaff, Leonard, N. D., had first call against Louis. He lost his chance against the 1934 Chicago Golden Gloves champion by signing for a clash with Hank Hankinson at Hollywood, Cal., to be held the same date. Art Sykes, Elmira heavyweight, and Harold [Dutch] Weimer, Tucson light heavyweight, are expected to appear in two of the supporting matches at Detroit. Adolph Wiater, Green Bay, Wis., may oppose Sykes.

Brown has sufficient experience to give Louis, who has won his sixteen professional matches, thirteen by knockouts, a hard battle. His record last year includes ten round draws with Walter Neusel and Mickey Walker and victories over Johnny Risko, Bob Tow, Art Huttick, Eddie Simms, and Al Stillman.

Varias Milling, Filipino featherweight, was replaced by Orville Drouillard in a ten round bout against Mike Belloise at the Stadium last night. Dr. Frank La Gorio, Illinois athletic commission physician, refused to pass Milling, contending an old cut over the Filipino warrior's left eye was not sufficiently healed. As a result Drouillard, who is scheduled to fight Jackie Sharkey at Marigold Gardens Monday, is likely to be replaced by Sammy Levine or Milling at Marigold. Eddie Stiegal and Bob La Monte, Chicago welterweights, yesterday were matched to meet in the six round semi-final there.

Ernie Kirchner, Peoria, Ill., middleweight, and John Liston, Chicago, are being sought for a headline match at Midway arena Monday. A six round battle will pair Bill Reardon and George Van Der Hayden and a four round encounter will match Scotty McLean and Hugh Allen.

Davey Day, Chicago lightweight contender, has been forced to cancel his ten round bout with Lou Jallos, Cleveland, scheduled at Des Moines, Ia., Tuesday, because of a nose fracture.

Frank Battaglia, middleweight challenger, will go to Philadelphia tonight accompanied by Manager Ernie Fliegal for a fight there Monday against Mickey Battone. . . . Georgie Nate, former featherweight, has taken out a promoter's license and will offer his first card at South Bend, Ind., April 18. . . . Al Diamond, Paterson, N. J., 160 pounder, left last night for Minneapolis, where he boxes Jack Gibbons Monday. . . . Jack Kranz, Gary, Ind., heavyweight, and Buddy McArthur have been paired for a ten round bout at Quincy, Ill., Monday.

South side friends of Joe Louis will give a testimonial dinner in his honor at the Grand hotel April 12. . . . Felix Kolk and Paul Palowski intend to open a gymnasium at 227 West Madison street next Saturday. . . . The Mount Carmel High school boxing team will go to Peru, Ill., March 22 for a series of matches there with St. Bede college. . . . The St. Bede squad will engage in a second series of encounters with Mount Carmel at Mount Carmel gymnasium April 12.

Blue Ribbons to Bowl Detroit in $1,000 Match

The Pabst Blue Ribbon team, winner of the first half championship in the Classic Bowling league, will meet the Tivoli Brewing company quintet of Detroit in a $1,000 match today and tomorrow at the Lorraine alleys. Three games will be rolled this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, three more at 8:30 this evening, and the final three games tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

Peden, Audy Enter Chicago Six Day Race

William [Torchy] Peden and little Jules Audy, stars of six day bicycle racing in the United States and Canada, will compete in Chicago's thirty-third international grind which starts in the Stadium tomorrow night.

Peden won the six day race here a year ago, paired with Tony Schaller. With announcement that Peden and Audy will ride came the news yesterday that Gerard Debaets, the Belgian star, and Gaetano Belloni, veteran Italian rider, will not compete.

Harry Mendel, manager and co-promoter of the race with Carl Stockholm and Frank Harmon, received telegrams yesterday from the east that Debaets and Belloni were both ill. Debaets is suffering from a nervous breakdown. Belloni has the flu.

Peden and Audy have just finished the six day race in Los Angeles. They will ride as a team in the Chicago race. Reboli, who was paired with Belloni, will be teamed with Bobby Thomas, who was to ride with Debaets.

Eddie Trieste, Chicago youngster, has withdrawn from the race and Leroy Garrison will pair up with George Thelin.

LAKE FOREST AWARDS LETTERS TO PREP QUINTET

Ten basketball monograms were awarded at Lake Forest academy, according to an announcement last night by Coach Lloyd M. Bergen. The Lake Forest preps closed a successful season by winning the Central State Private School basketball tournament at Morgan Park Military academy.

New York Golden Glove Team Holds Its Opening Drill

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—Members of New York's Golden Gloves intercity squad got off to an auspicious training camp start today. They gathered at the St. Moritz hotel during the noon hour and later in the day held a brisk workout at Stillman's gym.

In the gym, the boys waited around until the place was cleared of the professional pugs and then went to work under the direction of Trainer Al Copland and Coaches Arthur Susskind, Frank Morris and Frank Williamson.

The gladiators were eager to resume boxing after a three day's respite. Marty Pomerantz, the lightweight, skipped around with so much enthusiasm that he was cautioned. Henry Balsamo, the big light heavy, suffered from a head cold, but felt much better after raising a sweat.

Frank Murphy and Ted Walter sparred around while Georgie Coyle and Artie Kolb hit the light and heavy bags for a couple of rounds.

MICHIGAN SWIM TEAM FAVORED IN BIG 10 MEET

Champaign, Ill., March 15.—[Special.]—Michigan is a favorite to win its second Big Ten title in two weeks tomorrow in the annual conference swimming championship meet at the Illinois tank. Preliminaries will be held in the morning with the finals at night. Two weeks ago the Wolverines won the conference track crown.

Northwest Conference Admits Lake Forest High

Lake Forest High school last night was admitted to the Northwest Suburban conference at a meeting at Palatine. The new school is under construction and will open next fall with an attendance of 400 students.

Punches Put Steve Hamas in Sanitarium

BERLIN, March 15.—(AP)—Still suffering from the effects of the terrific beating he took last Sunday from Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, Steve Hamas rested tonight in a sanitarium.

Although the American's manager, Charles Harvey, and attending physicians hope Hamas will be fully recovered within a fortnight, they are worried over some of the symptoms the fighter developed after he had been stopped in nine rounds by Schmeling.

"Hamas is suffering from numbness of the left leg, double vision in the left eye and possibly a spinal ailment," Harvey told the Associated Press. "As a result doctors ordered him to a sanitarium and placed him on a strict diet."

Spinal Injury Possible.

Harvey said the physicians are not yet sure that Hamas suffered any injury to his spine. They believe the young New Jersey boxer may be suffering simply from exhaustion.

Dr. Hans Goebbels, Hamburg physician who first examined Hamas, recommended that the fighter undergo a thorough examination by Berlin specialists. This was done and the specialists sent him to the sanitarium.

Dr. Goebbels asserted that one of Schmeling's punches, close to the ear, affected Hamas' brain so that he was unable to understand the meaning of words during the fight.

Blow Causes Stupor.

"This caused a kind of stupor," Dr. Goebbels explained, "which made it impossible for Hamas to get away from Schmeling."

Although bruised Hamas appeared well during yesterday's reception, given in his honor by Hans Tschammer-Osten, German sports commissioner. During the reception Hamas talked to press representatives about such topics as the 1936 Olympics, his experiences at Penn State college and his German trip.

CLEVELAND POLO PLAYERS SEEK SHARE OF TITLE

Meet Ramblers Tonight at 124th Armory.

The undefeated Cleveland Riding club polo team, with three straight victories to its credit in Metropolitan Polo league competition, will meet the Chicago Ramblers tonight at the 124th Field Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Lincolnshire Country club will play the Chicago Cardinals in the first game of the evening.

Cleveland will line up with A. Z. Baker at the No. 1 position, Bill Fergus at No. 2 and Hank Evinger at back. The team now carries a 13 goal rating.

For the Ramblers, Herb Lorber is rated at 4 goals, Maj. Dick Hunter at 3 and Lieut. Steve Hammond at 3.

A victory tonight will assure Cleveland of at least a tie with the 124th Field Artillery in the final percentages. If Cleveland also beats the Chicago Riding club in the next and final game, it will win the senior title.

MILITARY SHOW TONIGHT

The Black Houre troop's fifth annual military exhibition and polo games will be held at the Chicago Riding club, 333 East Erie street, this evening.

Opening the program, the 122 Field Artillery will meet the Riding Club Seniors in the playoff of their tie for first place in the Troopers' Polo league. Bud Collins has been elected to ride with Jim Hannah and Capt. Maxwell M. Corpening for the Riding club. The 122d will be represented by Cliff Harrison, Art Zimmerman, and Carl Johnson.

Between the halves of the game the Black Horse Troop Junior Reserve, whose entire personnel is recruited from the Chicago Latin School for Boys, will give an exhibition drill. In the intermission, the troop jumping championship will be decided and the Black Horse Troop Mounted band, under the direction of Warrant Officer A. Boyd Pixley, will provide a musical interlude.

In the final polo skirmish of the evening, Culver Military academy will play the Black Horse troop team, consisting of Capt. Roy D. Keehn Jr., Lieut. William F. Kirby, and Jack Armstrong.

300 Notre Dame Football Players to Report Today

Notre Dame, Ind., March 15.—[Special.]—Nearly 300 candidates for Notre Dame's 1935 football team are expected to report for the opening of spring practice tomorrow. Coach Elmer Layden issued the call today and more than 250 men had been equipped by evening.

Tomorrow's drill will be given over almost exclusively to the making of newsreel and newspaper pictures. Work will start in earnest Monday.

Layden and his assistants are confronted with the problem of replacing such valuable men as George Melinkovich, right half back who led the team in yards gained, average yardage from scrimmage, and points scored; Capt. Dominic Vaire, varsity right end; Rocco Schiralli, iron man guard who played more than any other member of the squad; Jack Robinson, veteran center, and 25 other members of the squad who graduate.

There are 22 monogram men returning. Only two of these are sophomores, so Layden cannot look for many replacements among juniors next year. The freshman team was fair, but few first year men have been of much use to the Notre Dame varsity during their sophomore year.

Capt.-Elect Joe Sullivan, left tackle, who is fighting for his life in a New York hospital, will be unable to play football next season.

WARREN HEADS FIELD FOR AUTO RACES TOMORROW

Pat Warren, Irish race driver at the 124th Artillery armory indoor speedway, heads entries for tomorrow night's St. Patrick's day card.

Warren, who holds the track record of 5 minutes 47 seconds for 25 laps, will oppose Tudy Marchese, Tony Willman, Jimmy Snyder, and Ronnie Householder.

Art Foley of Chicago heads the field of class B division. Twelve races are on the card for tomorrow night.

JOIN THE SWING TO "BOTTOMS-UP"

KENTUCKY STRAIGHT WHISKY

"BOTTOMS UP" has literally swept across America from coast to coast as thousands see the opportunity to enjoy this really quality whisky without having to pay a high price for it.

Low in price! But actually made in a costly way. For "BOTTOMS UP" is made with a very high percentage of the costly small grains. These small grains give it the rich flavor and delightful aroma that sets it apart from other whiskies. It is made by a formula famous for 65 years in Kentucky. It is a genuine Kentucky straight whisky, made the more effective—the sour-mash way. Aged naturally at least a full year before bottling. Aged in warehouses kept at controlled summer temperature and humidity the year round. Then ester tested for mellowness before a drop goes into the bottles. Only a Distillery with the tradition, experience and 65-year-old background of Brown-Forman could produce such a product. Try one bottle of "BOTTOMS UP." You will join the thousands that are switching to this great whisky.

5 MARKS BROKEN AS BADGERS WIN IN A. A. U. TRACK

Wisconsin Gets 24½ Pts.; Chicago Parks, 24.

Table of Points

University of Wisconsin	24½
Chicago Park district	24
Marquette university	20
University of Illinois	10½
University of Chicago	6¼
Kenron A. C.	5
Notre Dame university	3
Chicago Normal college	3
Avondale playground	½

Five records were broken in the 37th annual Central A. A. U. indoor track meet at the University of Chicago fieldhouse last night. The University of Wisconsin won the 1935 championship with 24½ points, while the Chicago Park district was second with 24.

Record smashing performances were turned in by Karl Kleinschmidt, Wisconsin, in the 1,000 meter run; Jim Jessel, Marquette, in the 300 meter run; Jacques Dufresne, Illinois, in the 3,000 meter run; William Miholo, Chicago Park district, in the 1,500 meter walk, and John Brooks, Chicago Park district, in the running broad jump.

Jessel Comes from Behind.

The 300 meter race proved one of the most exciting of the evening. Three runners broke the old mark of :37 in preliminary heats, Jessel and Paul Phillips, both of Marquette, and Ray Ellinwood, University of Chicago freshman, all won heats in :35.9. In the final race Jessel, who holds a national junior record, lay back during the first half of the distance, then forged slowly to the front, winning by two yards in :35.8.

Dufresne chipped nearly 16 seconds from the 3,000 meter mark made by Geissman of Marquette in 1933, by loping over the route in 8:59.7, and Bill Miholo stepped the 1,500 meter walking event in 6:51.3 to take more than 22 seconds off the record he set last year.

Kleinschmidt, one of the best of Big Ten middle distance men, ran the 1,000 meters in 2:34.2, lowering the mark of 2:36.3 set by John Francis, unattached, last year. In the broad jump, Brooks, former Maroon star, now competing for the Chicago Parks, added three-quarters of an inch to his previous record in the broad jump, leaping 23 feet 11¼ inches.

Walker Runs—Is Disqualified.

Chicago Parks might have won the meet had not one of their walkers, who would have placed fourth, been disqualified for running.

Bob Grieve, ineligible University of Illinois sophomore, created something of a sensation when his victory in the 60 meter dash was announced at :06.5.

The present record, made by Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette, and equaled by Grieve last year, is :06.8. Not only was Grieve using starting blocks, which are optional, but on which no records are allowed, but it later was found that the distance had been measured 6 feet short.

Summaries:

RUNNING HIGH JUMP—Won by Clayborn Chisum, Chicago park district; Charles Bechel, Chicago Normal college, second; Ward Cuff, Marquette, third. Height, 6 feet 5 inches.

1,600 METER RELAY [invitational]—Won by Wisconsin [Albright, Kay, Stiles, Crowell]; Chicago parks, second. Time, 3:30.4.

65 METER HIGH HURDLES—Won by Kellnar, Wisconsin; Cullinan, Illinois, second; Beal, Chicago, third; Robinson, unattached, fourth. Time, :08.9.

POLE VAULT—Won by Economos, Kenron A. C.; Sharif, Wisconsin, and Haller, Wisconsin, tied for second; Hirschinger, Wisconsin, Murdarch, Wisconsin, Abel, Chicago, and Nelson, unattached, tied for fourth. Height, 13 feet.

16 POUND SHOT PUT—Won by Irvin H. Rubow, Wisconsin; Glen Elliott, Marquette, second; Ed Christiansen, Wisconsin, third; B. Burnett, Northwestern, fourth. Distance, 40 feet ½ inch.

600 METER RUN—Won by Ray Ellinwood, Chicago; Calvin Beckett, Marquette, second; B. L. Baughman, Illinois, third; Joseph Doherty, Marquette, fourth. Time, 1:22.5.

1,500 METER WALK—Won by William Miholo, Chicago park district; Michael Riban Jr., Chicago park district, second; James G. Bliss, Chicago park district, third. Time, 6:51.3. [New record; old mark of 7:13.4 set by Miholo in 1934.]

60 METER DASH—Won by Bob Grieve, unattached; Robert Packard, unattached, second; W. Hunter Russell, unattached, third; John Brooks, Chicago park district, fourth. Time, :06.5.

1,000 METER RUN—Won by Karl Kleinschmidt, Wisconsin; Emil Kubash, Marquette, second; W. Rideout, unattached, third; Harold Longman, Chicago park district, fourth. Time, 2:34.2. [New record; old mark of 2:36.3 set by John Francis in 1934.]

3,000 METER RUN—Won by Dufresne, Illinois; Rideout, unattached, second; Rapp, Chicago, third; Mohrhusen, Wisconsin, fourth. Time, 8:59.7. [Breaks central A. A. U. record of 9:15.1, set by Geisiman, Marquette, in 1933.]

300 METER RUN—Won by Jessel, Marquette, Phillips, Marquette, second; Ellinwood, Chicago, third; Cromwell, Wisconsin, fourth. Time, :35.8. [Breaks central A.A.U. record of :37, set by Doherty, unattached, last year.]

RUNNING BROAD JUMP—Won by Brooks, Chicago Parks; Meagher, Notre Dame, second; Harris, Chicago Parks, third; Dreusicke, unattached, fourth. Distance, 23 feet 11¼ inches. [Breaks record of 23 feet 10½ inches set by Brooks last year.]

3,200 METER RELAY [Invitational]—Won by Michigan State [Ottey, Hovey, Garber, Hurd]; Michigan Normal, second; Purdue, third. Time, 7:54.1.

SQUASH TOURNEY STARTS TODAY AT LAKE SHORE A. C.

The city squash racquets championship tournament will start today at the Lake Shore Athletic club with a field of 38 competing for the title which now is held by Jimmy Anderson of the Chicago Town and Tennis club. Anderson will not defend his championship.

The four top-seeded players are Robert Stevenson III, of the University club, and Dudley Pope, Joe Janotta, and Jimmy Robinson, all of the John Marshall Squash club.

The western intercollegiate squash tournament also will begin today at the Lake Shore A. C. Purdue, Illinois, Chicago, and Lawrence have entered players. This is the first time colleges of this section have organized a squash tournament.

Play in the city tournament will continue tomorrow and throughout the week.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 15.—[Special.]—Jeffersonville captured its 29th consecutive victory today when it defeated Montgomery, 41 to 36, in a first round game of the 24th annual Indiana High School Athletic association basketball tournament at the Butler university fieldhouse here.

Jeffersonville, unbeaten this season, and seven other quintets—Rushville, Richmond, Michigan City, Berne, Anderson, Shelbyville and Nappanee—advanced to the quarter-final round, to be decided tomorrow. Semi-final contests will be played in the afternoon, and the final game for the championship will be held tomorrow evening.

In quarter-finals tomorrow morning Rushville plays Richmond, Michigan City meets Jeffersonville, Berne faces Shelbyville, and Anderson opposes Nappanee.

The Nappanee-Tipton game, the last on the schedule today, developed into a thrilling struggle. Nappanee, which won, 37 to 33, built up a 17 to 11 advantage at the half.

Iowa Football Squad Goes Outside Monday

Iowa City, Ia., March 15.—[Special.]—Following more than a month of indoor practice, Coach Ossie Solem will take his squad of more than 70 University of Iowa football candidates outside for daily workouts beginning Monday. The spring turnout, which includes 12 major letter men, is the largest in history.

St. Mel Beats DePaul, 24-23, to Win Title

St. Mel High school won the heavyweight basketball championship of the Catholic league by defeating De Paul, 24 to 23, before 4,500 at Loyola university gymnasium last night. The victory also gave St. Mel a place in the national interscholastic Catholic tournament, which starts at Loyola Wednesday night.

A fourth quarter rally pulled De Paul to within one point of a tie, but St. Mel's guards finally checked the De Paul shapshooters. The champions led at the end of the first half, 15 to 7, and held a 22 to 11 advantage at the third period.

Pare Scores 14 Points.

Paul Pare, brother of Emett Pare, professional tennis player, was the leader in St. Mel's attack. He contributed six field goals and two free throws. Naughton shared individual honors with Pare, collecting four baskets and one free throw.

St. Mel's lightweights will attempt to bring another title to the west side school tonight at De La Salle gymnasium when they battle Leo for the crown. St. Mel won the championship last year.

The Chicago Public High School league lightweight championship also will be decided today, when Roosevelt meets Farragut at White City at 2:15 o'clock.

Mostly About Dogs

By Bob Becker

Cocker Spaniel Trial

Cocker spaniels trained to hunt will be put into the field to show their ability on May 12, according to an announcement made this week by the Cocker Spaniel club here in the middle west. The club is sponsoring a spring field trial to bring breeders together, run dogs, and generally develop interest in the cocker as a field dog.

Details of the trial, the different events, and how to enter will be given in this column a little later. The secretary of the club informs us that Sunday, May 12, definitly has been chosen as the day. According to the plan of the committee in charge of the trial, the Crane estate, near St. Charles, on the Fox river, will be the scene of the event.

It would be fun to judge this trial, and the writer regrets he cannot accept the invitation of the Cocker Spaniel club to act as judge. However, there is no derth of competent spaniel men in Chicagoland or adjacent territory—men who know what a good spaniel ought to do in the field to find game and handle it when flushed and killed.

With one of the several judges available picking the winners and with a number of well trained cockers in action, this informal spring trial should be worth while watching.

The hunting cocker can stand plenty of backing here in the middle west, because the east is ahead of us in running well trained cockers at good field trials. Of course, this same situation prevails as far as most of our spaniels and retriever breeds are concerned.

In the east groups of active sportsmen foster several springer spaniel tests every fall. They even bring a judge from England for one of the trials. Then the cocker spaniel enthusiasts stage trials which bring into action some of the finest trained spaniels to be found anywhere in the country. In addition to this list of field trials for spaniels eastern sportsmen now are putting on field trials for Chesapeakes and English Labrador retrievers—an activity that is a liberal education for hunters of all kinds of game.

But here in the middle west we are far behind this dog parade, although there is no section of the country that can use retriever breeds any oftener than our middle western hunting territory. We have the duck shooting and the upland game hunting to keep Labradors, Irish water spaniels, Chesapeakes, and other useful dogs busy a great deal of the time.

If Illinois puts a pheasant preserve shooting law on the books, thus increasing upland bird hunting, sportsmen will find that it is to their interest to use more dogs that can get the cripples as well as locate the fast running ringnecks. Pheasant shooting without a dog is a wasteful sport.

South Side and Joliet Reach College Final

Joliet and South Side of Chicago last night entered the final round for the Illinois state junior college basketball championship at La Grange and will meet tonight for the title. Joliet will be seeking its third successive crown.

In the semi-finals last night South Side, one of the five new junior colleges under the supervision of the board of education, triumphed over Morton of Cicero, 32 to 31. A rally in the last half enabled South Side to win. Morton led at the end of the first half, 18 to 13.

A basket by Tibble, guard, and a free throw by Savage, substitute center, gave Joliet a 38 to 35 victory over La Grange in overtime. The score was tied at the conclusion of the first half, 21 to 21. The lineups:

International Tennis Body Votes Down Movies

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 15.—The International Tennis federation today failed to approve the plan of the Czecho-Slovakian association to permit amateurs to appear in action movies. Although the members voted to favor it, 42 to 41, the necessary two-thirds vote was lacking. The United States and France already had opposed the project.

ARMOUR RELAYS TO END INDOOR SEASON TONIGHT

Meet at U. of C. Biggest of Winter.

Chicago's indoor track season draws to a close tonight with a final burst of competition in the Seventh Armour Tech relays, which will be held at the University of Chicago fieldhouse. The Armour meet promises to be the best—certainly it will be the biggest—local track event of the winter, not excluding the recent Big Ten meet.

Thirty-five institutions of the central states will be represented by 408 men in the 19 event carnival, the most important collegiate absentees being Jesse Owens of Ohio State, Vincent Murphy of Notre Dame, and the Michigan team. Something between four and eight records seem likely to be toppled.

Six Relay Events.

The program includes six relay events, three in the university class and three in the college class; five events open to both classes, the high jump, pole vault, shot put, half mile, and mile runs; and four shorter running events for each of the two divisions. Preliminary races in the dash and the high and low hurdles for both college and university classes will begin at 4:15 p. m. Finals in the field events will begin at 7 p. m., with the first final running event, the college two mile relay, scheduled for 7:30. No team points are scored.

Class of the competition is pitched at a high level by the entry of seven Big Ten institutions, Pittsburgh and Notre Dame, champion and runner up respectively in the Central Intercollegiate meet; Kansas State, which is the Big Six champion, and such other track strongholds as Michigan State and Marquette. Michigan Normal heads a list of twenty-two schools in the college class.

Individual Stars Numerous.

Individual stars are numerous in both the running and the field events. In the middle distance races are Abe Rosencrantz of Michigan Normal, who is favored to lead a fast field to the tape in the 880 in record breaking time despite the fact that the record holder is Indiana's Hornbostel, and Kigar of Pittsburgh, who is expected to lower the Armour record of :50.4 in the 440. The milers are exceptionally competent, with Sears of Butler, Ottey of Michigan State, and Lash of Indiana heading the list, but are probably not up to the 4:14.1 competence Brocksmith of Indiana showed in 1932.

Pole vaulters include Irving Seeley of Illinois, Big Ten champion; Wonsowitz of Ohio State, and Siebert of North Central. Don Elser of Notre Dame, Frank Davis of Hillsdale, and Irving Rubow of Wisconsin head the shot put entry. In the shorter races Randall Herman of Carleton, who equalled the record last year, is favored in the college sprint, and Fleming of Pittsburgh and Waite of Washington university, St. Louis, are favored in the university sprint.

WRIGHT SCORES 5 VICTORIES AT TROPICAL PARK

Star Jocky Continues His Sensational Riding.

Miami, Fla., March 15.—[Special.]—Wayne D. Wright, leading rider of the Florida season and the lad who scored five triples at Hialeah Park, brought home five winners at Tropical Park this afternoon to leave his followers almost hysterical with joy.

The Joseph E. Widener contract rider won with B. N. Kane's De Valera in the first race; with Mrs. W. T. Anderson's Jadaan in the fourth; with W. N. Adrian's Golden Way in the fifth; with the Brandon stable's Mintana in the sixth, and with J. E. Smallman's Dancing Boy in the seventh.

Gets Well Deserved Hand.

Wright was applauded as he came back to the judges' stand with his winners, and there seems little question that he is one of the most popular riders of the moment. Still in his teens, Wright came into wide prominence last season when he rode Mr. Widener's Peace Chance to victory in the Belmont stakes and then won with the same owner's Chance Sun in the Futurity.

The day's feature was included in Wright's sweep, and he was first with Jadaan, backed into favoritism largely because Wright was aboard.

Jadaan was stepping up a bit in the quality of his company, but finished a head in front of Good Harvest, also heavily backed. Erin Lad was a rather distant third. The winner, a 3 to 2 shot, was timed in 1:05 1-5 for the five and one-half furlongs over a fast track.

Golden Way Comes Home.

Golden Way, now the property of Mr. Adrians, although once owned by J. E. Widener, was the victor by two lengths in the fifth after cleancut handling by Wright. It was Wright's third winner and his sixth triple of the Florida season.

He wasted little time in getting his mount to the front and then opened up a decisive lead in the stretch. Guapito was second, four lengths ahead of Hoops. Golden Way was clocked in 1:46 1-5 for the mile and a sixteenth and returned $6.10 of $2.00.

THREE QUINTETS ENTER CATHOLIC MEET AT LOYOLA

New York, Indiana and South Dakota are represented by the three latest entrants in the National Catholic Interscholastic basketball tournament, which begins Wednesday night at Loyola university gymnasium.

The new schools are St. Mary's academy, Dunkirk, N. Y., western New York champion; Reitz Memorial, Evansville, Ind., winner of third place in the Indiana state tournament, and Notre Dame academy, Mitchell, S. D.

Reitz Memorial is the only one which has played here before, the Hoosiers finishing fourth in the 1933 tournament.

The three new entries and the invitation to St. Mel, the winner of the Catholic league championship, brings the total number of teams to 29. The tournament committee expects the remaining three entries to be filled today, with the drawing tonight or tomorrow afternoon for the first round.

A consolation round, for first game losers, again will be played this season. The innovation was tried for the first time in last year's tournament. The consolation winner will be decided on the night of the championship game, Sunday, March 24.

MANGIN AND BELL MEET TODAY IN INDOOR NET FINAL

New York, March 15.—(AP)—Gregory S. Mangin, the nation's foremost amateur indoor player, and Berkeley Bell slugged their way to semi-final round victories today and will face each other tomorrow for the 36th men's national indoor singles tennis championship.

Registering his fifth consecutive straight set triumph of the tournament, Mangin, winner of the championship in 1932 and 1933, marched to the final at the expense of J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

Bell's advance, which makes the second time in four years he has reached the final, terminated the comeback campaign of Julius Seligson, national intercollegiate title holder of 1928, 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, 6-1.

In the doubles final tomorrow, Bell and Mangin will oppose Sidney B. Wood Jr., American Davis cup star, and Dr. Eugene McCauliff. In the semi-finals, Bell and Mangin conquered Hall and Frank J. Bowden, 3-6, 6-2, 11-9, 9-7, while Wood and McCauliff took the measure of Seligson and Dr. Lawrence Kurzrok, 11-9, 6-4, 9-7.

WESTERN LEAGUE PRESIDENT BARS GRIMES' SPITBALL

Des Moines, Ia., March 15.—(AP)—If Burleigh Grimes, famous major league spitball pitcher, wants to be playing manager of the Springfield, Mo., Western league club this season he must do without the spitball, T. P. Fairweather, president of the Western league, ruled here today.

Fairweather's ruling reversed a vote of four to two by the clubs to permit Grimes to use his specialty, if the St. Louis Cardinals send him to Springfield.

COURT ORDERS KEARNS TO PAY CHILD'S SUPPORT

Los Angeles, Cal., March 15.—(AP)—Adjudged to be the father of Mary Helen Kearns, 9, Jack Kearns, boxing manager, was ordered today to pay Miss Elizabeth Williams $35 a month for the child's support. Judge Myron C. Westover ruled Kearns should give Miss Williams $560 in back payments and continue the support of the child until Oct. 23, 1946. She formerly was a cigaret girl at a hotel owned by Jack Dempsey.

PLAN TO SAVE UTILITY HOLDING UNITS OFFERED

Rep. Pettengill Asks Strict Control.

Washington, D. C., March 15.—(AP)—A surprise formal proposal to rewrite the semi-administration public utilities bill so as not to abolish holding companies or force liquidation of their securities was offered today.

It came from a high ranking majority member of the house interstate commerce committee — Pettengill [Dem., Ind.]—in the midst of the utility holding company battle against dissolution by statute.

Preston Arkwright, an official of the Georgia Power company, was on the stand at the time, having just asserted that the anti-holding company bill was just the sort of thing President Roosevelt had "condemned" when he was governor of New York.

Pettengill proposed regulations that would leave only one holding company above operating companies and convert pyramided holding companies into "investment trusts."

Pettengill Plan Details.

The Pettengill plan, copies of which were made for consideration of other members, would:

1. Prevent a holding company from voting any of its stock owned by another holding company.

2. Prohibit the voting of a holding company's stock by an individual owner who is an officer or employé and voting stock owner in another holding company, and bar his acting as proxy.

3. Keep any one connected with one holding company from affiliation with another company owning voting stock in his company.

4. Prevent a holding company or its representatives from receiving benefits from a firm that supplies materials, energy or services to an operating company or other holding company in which the first holding company holds stock or receives corporate earnings.

5. Make all holding company records available to state commissions and the federal regulatory agency.

Residence Requirement.

6. Require a majority of the holding company's directors to live in the states, cities or towns served by the operating companies it owns nine months a year.

7. Require a majority of the directors and all officers and general managers of operating companies controled by holding companies likewise to be bona fide residents "and utility users in the territory served."

8. Compel directors' meetings of operating companies to be held in the main office of the operating company in the territory served.

9. Make holding companies supply all services and supplies to operating companies at "actual cost" and at not more than the price in the open market.

10. Prohibit "upstream loans" [from lower companies to those above] "without adequate collateral, except with the approval of state utility commission."

No Action on Probe Bill.

The senate-approved resolution for an inquiry into charges of utility company propaganda against the bill reposed in inactive status in the house committee today. Immediate consideration of the measure was blocked in the house yesterday.

Today Representative Sabath [Dem., Ill.] introduced a bill to require registration "of lobbyists engaged in influencing legislation before congress, its committees or subcommittees."

It was disclosed that a request of Dr. Hugh S. Magill, president of the Federation of Utilities Investors, to be heard would be granted.

TOTAL ASSETS OF ATLAS CORP. TOP 110 MILLION

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—The Atlas corporation today issued its annual report for 1934, showing total assets of $110,517,809 and making it the largest investment trust in the world.

Total net income applicable to capital stock of Atlas corporation for the year ended Dec. 31, 1934, was $2,364,551, including $2,003,997 net profit on the sale of securities. Excluding profit on the sale of securities, the combined gross income of Atlas and its consolidated subsidiaries from dividends and interest was $3,031,642. Total expenses of Atlas and all subsidiaries were $1,781,396, leaving a balance of $1,250,245, of which $889,691 was applicable to minority interests. Capital surplus at the end of 1934 was $34,840,321.

In the report Floyd B. Odlum, president, said the directors were desirous of starting cash dividend payments on the common stock as soon as conditions waranted this step.

PERMIT "KATY" BOND ISSUE TO SECURE NOTES

Washington, D. C., March 15.—[Special.]—The Missouri-Kansas-Texas railroad was authorized today by the interstate commerce commission to issue not to exceed $13,152,638 of prior lien mortgage 5 per cent bonds, series E, to be pledged as collateral security for short term notes.

The issue will be secured by the road's prior lien mortgage dated Jan. 1, 1922, made to the Central Union Trust company, and Daniel K. Catlin, trustees. The bonds will be dated Jan. 1, 1935, and bear 5 per cent interest, payable semi-annually on Jan. 1 and July 1. They will expire Jan. 1, 1975.

The new bonds are to be redeemable as a whole on any semi-annual interest date at par, plus a premium of 5 per cent.

RFC Control Ends Clarke's Utility Reign

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The eclipse of another commanding figure in the field of public utilities, Harley L. Clarke of Chicago, was signalized by the Reconstruction Finance corporation's seizure this week of control in the Public Utilities Securities corporation, key holding unit in the Clarke system. A little publicized figure, Clarke stood second only to Samuel Insull a few years ago as a factor in the public utility field in the middle west. Clarke has been dropped from the presidency of his top holding company and the RFC has installed its own group of directors.

John L. Hopkins, Chicago counsel of the RFC, will leave for Washington today to confer with officials of the corporation there on the degree of actual management which the government agency will exercise in the various properties controled by the Clarke holding company.

RFC May Control Subsidiary.

It has been indicated by RFC officials that the Clarke management of the Utilities Power and Light corporation will be removed when stockholders of the corporation hold their annual meeting April 21 in Richmond, Va.

The RFC has proceeded in its assumption of management in the Clarke Holding company on the grounds that the action was necessary to safeguard the corporation's loan to old Dawes bank, the Central Republic Bank and Trust company. Stock representing voting control in Public Utilities Securities corporation was posted by the company with the Dawes bank as security for a loan of $2,000,000.

The Dawes bank in turn pledged the stock with the RFC as part of the collateral for the $90,000,000 loan it obtained in 1932. Through its holdings in the parent company the RFC is in a position to exercise control of management in the vast underlying properties of the system.

Called Super-Holding Company.

The securities company is a superholding company of the type which has been made the target of the administration's anti-holding company legislation. It in turn controls Utilities Power and Light company, which owns controlling interest in a number of subsidiaries, including the Laclede Gas Light company of St. Louis.

It was through this setup that Clarke formerly wielded control of the system. Head offices of the holding corporation are in Chicago, but the operating properties are scattered over a wide area with St. Louis an important center. Utilities Power and Light also has important utilities holdings in England.

Whether the RFC will extend its control to the various subsidiaries of Utilities Power and Light is as yet undisclosed. Mr. Hopkins, the Chicago attorney of the corporation, was noncommittal on the matter yesterday. He stated that he would leave today to confer with Washington officials.

RFC to Decide on Control.

The first meeting of the RFC dominated board of Public Utilities Securities will be held in the RFC's New York offices in the Federal Reserve Bank building next Thursday. Out of that meeting is likely to come some definition of the plans of the government agency.

The annual meeting of Utilities Power and Light is more than a month away and there is a possibility that the pledges held by the RFC may be redeemed by that time.

Utilities Power and Light holds direct control of fifty subsidiary companies, some of which in turn control other utility properties. The properties supply gas, electric, water, and heat service in 1,082 communities, 570 in this country and 503 through the English companies.

Assets Exceed 406 Millions.

Total assets of Utilities Power and Light were reported in the last published statement in excess of 406 million dollars. The company organized in 1915 as a utility development company and adopted its present name in 1922. Clarke, has been president and treasurer of the concern for several years.

Clarke's career in the public utility field was not as spectacular as that of Samuel Insull. His interests, however, have not been confined to the utility field. He gained control with a group of associates of the Fox Film properties in 1930, but later had to retreat from this venture when the depression intensified.

Efforts to reach Clarke yesterday for comment on the RFC's encroachment on his companies were unsuccessful. Unlike Insull, Clarke throughout his career has studiously avoided the public spotlight.

ROOSEVELT IS LOSING GROUND WITH PUBLIC, SAYS TRADE LEADER

Washington, D. C., March 15.—[Special.]—A declaration that President Roosevelt has lost ground with the people of the country since the fall elections was made tonight by Henry I. Harriman, president of the chamber of commerce of the United States. Harriman declared that the nation as a whole was beginning to wonder if the New Deal could not be held responsible for some of the existing distresses.

"In the last two years I have crossed the continent many times," Harriman said. "I have visited many sections and have talked with people in all walks of life. As a reporter I can say that up to the fall elections of 1934, the President had fully maintained his remarkable popularity with all classes of our people. They admired his daring, his courage, his confidence. They were charmed by his radio addresses, and his smile became the symbol of better times soon to be with us.

"For the last four months, however, the story has been different. The people still admire the President and want to have faith in his policies, but they also want jobs. Some blame the last administration for the bitter days of '30, '31 and '32. Now, they are beginning to wonder whether the New Deal measures will give them work and the comforts of life.

"They see seven to ten million men still out of work, and they see a sixth of the population dependent upon the dole for support. They are asking whether this should be so after two years of almost absolute power."

6 CHICAGO LIST FIRMS REJECT REGISTRATION

Only 6 of the 246 companies with securities listed on the Chicago Stock exchange have notified the exchange that they do not intend to apply for permanent registration with the Securities and Exchange commission.

Companies were given until yesterday to advise the exchange if they were not going to seek permanent registration or if they wished an extension of time beyond the May 15 deadline for filing financial statements. Half of the 246 companies replied to the letter, but only one-third of those writing asked for the extension, due mostly to fiscal years ending in the early part of the calendar year. In all cases, however, data for permanent registration must be filed by May 15, even if financial statements are delayed. Permanent registration becomes effective July 1.

The six firms not applying for permanent listing are Central West Public Service, Hupp Motor Car, North American Light and Power, Northwest Utilities, Magnet Mills, and Old Dominion Power. The last two have bonds listed, and the others list stocks.

AUTO SALES GAIN OVER LAST YEAR STILL WIDENING

Detroit, Mich., March 15.—[Special.]—Increases in sales and shipments of automobiles continue with many gains widening over last year, it was revealed here today.

Shipments of Hudson and Terraplane cars for the year to March 2 were 12,000 units larger at 26,183 than for the same period last year. Retail sales of Oldsmobiles for the first ten days of March aggregated 4,522 units, a new company record. The concern's schedule calls for production of 17,000 cars in March, while unfilled orders amount to 20,000.

Dodge retail deliveries in the week ended March 9 amounted to 6,960 units, a rise of 3.5 per cent over the previous week. Deliveries in the first ten weeks of 1935 were 44,794 units, an increase of 76.7 per cent over last year.

DISMISSED PAGE BOYS TO PICKET CURB EXCHANGE

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—A group of twenty page boys, dismissed today by the New York Curb exchange in connection with a move to end its stagger system of employment and increase the working hours of a smaller staf, announced last night that they would picket the exchange in protest. The pages said they were affiliated with the Wall Street White Collar union.

Since last summer employés of the exchange have been laid off one week out of every eight to spread the work, officials said tonight. The dismissal of about twenty of the 200 page boys which occurred today was necessary to enable the resumption of full time work by the remaining staf, officials stated.

Pound Climbs as Franc Slips Against Dollar

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—The British pound gained and gold bloc currencies eased against the dollar today. The pound bettered yesterday's jump of 2½ cents by rising another 2⅞ cents today to $4.79⅝.

The French franc touched the gold point of 6.59¼ today and then rose ⅛ point to close at 6.59⅜ cents, off ⅛ point net from yesterday. At this level the dollar was worth $1.0060 against francs, compared with $1.0058 yesterday. The gold value of the dollar, based on the old parity of the franc, was 59.42 cents, against 59.41 yesterday.

Francs Heavily Sold.

This dip in the franc was the result of heavy selling of francs in favor of sterling in European markets. Nervousness over the outcome of the conference planned for Monday between the French and Belgian premiers was said to be the cause of the excited decline of all gold bloc currencies.

The Belga was the focal point of attack. In London the spot rate declined to 20.47 belgas to the pound. At the opening in New York belgas were quoted at 23.34, or 6 points below the gold import point, and 1 point above yesterday's close, but closed at 23.32 cents, off 1 point.

The discount on belga futures had widened drastically by mid-afternoon. Thirty day belgas were offered in New York around 40 points discount, while ninety day contracts were off about 100 points, with no bids.

Belgians Export Capital.

Reports from Paris said financial circles there entertained grave doubts as to the belga's ability to remain much longer on the gold standard unless France extends immediate substantial aid. What is particularly serious is that yesterday and today—and with growing momentum—the Belgians themselves were exporting their capital. This was evidenced by the fact that direct purchases of pounds and dollars have been made against heavy shipments of gold from Brussels. Hitherto the pressure was primarily speculative.

A new gold bloc conference will be discussed in Paris Monday when Belgian Premier George Theunis, Minister of Finance Camille Gutt, and Foreign Minister Paul Hymans consult the French government. Theunis seeks to make Franco-Belgian economic coöperation closer. It is known Theunis believes the proposed coöperation within the gold bloc has been allowed to lag.

Swiss Francs Weak.

Swiss francs also continued under the gold import point at 32.37 cents, off 3 points from yesterday's close. Guilders remained 2½ points above the gold point at 67.67 cents, down 3 points from yesterday. German marks dipped 5 points to 40.20 cents. Canadian dollars rose 18¾ points to 99 cents.

Bar gold in London dropped 1 shilling 7½ pence to 146 shillings a halfpenny a fine ounce, equivalent to $34.80.

Although no foreign engagements of gold for shipment here were heard of today, it was still regarded as likely that shipments would soon be made.

Trade Gains Soundest Since Low of Depression, Says Dun

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—The present business upturn represents the soundest revival since the depression low of 1932 Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., said today in its weekly review of business conditions.

"Neither the vagaries of March weather nor the continued uncertainty of the course of national legislation have been sufficiently potent to swerve the movement by any wide degree from its upward course," the review said.

"With natural forces vigilantly directed by men whose experience has weathered stress and storm periods of many economic readjustments the spread between buoyant sentiment and tangible results is being narrowed constantly, and proofs are multiplying that the gloomy views held in some quarters have not been wholly warranted, in the light of current, reassuring developments.

Expects Less Interruption.

"After a slow start, a less interrupted expansion during the next six months appears in prospect for the distributive branches. Spring buying has started with the public going ahead with purchases.

"Instead of having passed the season's peak, as has appeared possible in February, new highs are indicated for many industrial divisions before spring runs will have been completed."

The review asserted the expansion in motor production had not been checked and the output of farm equipment is at the best pace in years.

"An increase of 50 to 60 per cent in the sales of tractors and power machinery indicates the definite trend of the farmer away from horse drawn machinery, doubtless due to the higher valuation of horses and the prohibitive feed prices in most sections," it said.

Cotton Goods Trade Hurt.

"Already disrupted and unsettled by the paucity of orders, the cotton goods trade was left almost prostrate by the tumble which the price of raw staple took during the early part of the week."

The report said that manufacturers of uniforms were receiving more orders than for any spring period in the last four years, an action which the analyst declared was caused by replacement orders from firemen, policemen, and other uniform wearers, who were being paid more regularly.

RAIL OWNERSHIP BY U. S. TERMED UNSOUND POLICY

Lines' Counsel Tells Weakness of Plan.

No matter what standards are used or where one goes for comparison, there is "no sound reason for embarking on such an un-American experiment" as government ownership of the railroads, declared R. V. Fletcher, vice president and general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, in an address to 400 members of the Traffic Club of Chicago at the Palmer house yesterday.

Fletcher discussed the question from an economic standpoint. He presented much data to show that publicly operated railroads throughout the world fail in almost every particular to measure up to the present privately owned systems in the United States.

Sees No Incentive.

In service, economical operation, rates, wages, and working conditions public ownerships offer no incentive for governmental acquisition here, he declared.

Fletcher referred to Federal Coordinator of Transportation Joseph B. Eastman's study of advantages and disadvantages of public ownership. "The enormous addition to the debt burden already disconcerting, the probable necessity for subsidies, the influence of politicians on rate policies, the pressure of equipment manufacturers for an orgy of reckless spending, the likelihood of political control in the interest of place seeking constituents, the necessity for extending ownership and control to competing forms of transportation—all are mentioned by the coördinator," said Fletcher.

Could Spread Ownership.

"If the government owns and operates the railroads, buses, commercial trucks, vessels on the seas, lakes, and rivers, the pipe lines and the air lines, how long will it be before the government produces its own fuel, timber, rails, and other supplies, to the utter ruin of much and important private industry?"

Fletcher expressed doubt as to government credit being able to stand the strain of buying the roads—at a cost of 20 billions, if there is to be "any decent fairness to investors." With constant pressure on public credit, investors might find their government bonds able "to buy no more of the necessities of life than their present depreciated railroad bonds" for which they would take government bonds, he said.

To those who urge acquisition of the railroads and subsequent spending of huge sums for new equipment on the theory that increased spending is the road to prosperity, Fletcher replied that the money must be obtained through taxation, and if taxation fails, "as it must if pressed too far" currency inflation will be the next step.

Points to Dictators.

"When we look for an example of public ownership," he said, our eyes fall on Stalin, Hitler, and Mussolini.

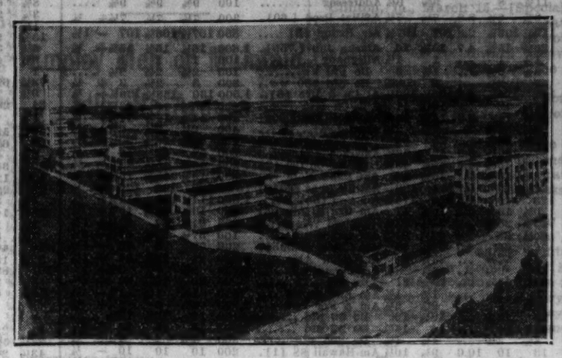
"About five-eights of the privately operated railroads are in the free democracies of the United States, Great Britain, and France; while 46 per cent of the public owned properties lie in the despotisms of Russia, Germany, and Italy; in countries where self-government is yet in its experimental stage, as South Africa and Poland, in imperial Japan, and in India—hardly to be accepted as a model of orderly government.

"I think it is very significant that in those countries which we are accustomed to regard most highly for their adherence to ideals of freedom and democracy, there is such a preponderance of privately owned railroads, while the contrary is true in those nations that have confessed their incompetence by yielding to the rule of tyrants."

Nash Employes to Vote on A. F. of L. Program Today

Kenosha, Wis., March 15.—[Special.]—The Federal Auto Workers' association of the Nash Motor company here will meet tomorrow afternoon to vote on adoption or rejection of the American Federation of Labor program for the auto industry. The ballot also calls for an expression on the use of the strike weapon if the national labor body finds it necessary. Racine employés of the Nash Motors company an demployés of the Seaman Body corporation, Milwaukee, a Nash affiliate, have already voted endorsements.

LOCOMOTIVE PLANT DESIGN



Architects' sketch of the new plant of the Electro-Motive corporation, a subsidiary of the General Motors corporation, which is to be devoted to the manufacture and assembly of new, high speed locomotives. The Winton Engine company will build Diesel motors for locomotives. The plant will be built near La Grange.

Rail Freight Decline More than Seasonal

Washington, D. C., March 15.—[Special.]—Freight traffic on railroads throughout the country last week showed a more than seasonal decline of 17,372 cars, or 2.8 per cent below the preceding week. The total was 587,270 cars, which was also 26,850 cars, or 4.2 per cent below a year ago, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

The total was 145,909 cars above the 441,361 reported for the corresponding week of 1933, the banking holiday over that period having resulted in general inactivity of business.

Loadings from the beginning of the year to March 9 total 5,687,984 cars, compared with 5,717,393 in the corresponding period of 1934 and 4,817,343 in 1933.

Miscellaneous freight last week totaled 223,253 cars, a decrease of 2,425 from the preceding week, but an increase of 6,646 over 1934, and 82,402 over 1933.

For a single class of freight coal showed the greatest decrease. Cars loaded totaled 130,074, a decline of 8,894 cars from the preceding week and 22,767 from 1934.

TAKE UP EDISON INVESTMENTS AT RATE HEARINGS

Attorney Harry R. Booth, for the Illinois commerce commission, cross-examined Purcell L. Smith, vice president of Commonwealth Edison company, concerning Edison's investments in affiliated companies at the rate hearing yesterday.

At the last session of the hearings, Attorney Harry Dunbaugh, representing Commonwealth Edison, had objected to this line of questioning on the ground that it had no bearing on the company's rates. At yesterday's hearing Booth intimated that he would attempt to prove that the benefits claimed from investments in affiliates were partly illusory.

The affairs of Commonwealth Subsidiary company, investment subsidiary, received the most attention. The $28,423,969 investment in stock of Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, according to Smith, now has a market value of about $5,500,000. Smith claimed that this investment yielded considerable benefits in economies from interchange of power and joint engineering studies.

The hearing was continued until March 21 at which time Booth will cross-examine Edison's witnesses on what constitutes a fair rate of return for utilities.

ARMOUR STOCK EXCHANGE OFFER AGAIN EXTENDED

The option to holders of the old 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock of Armour & Co. to exchange share for share for new 6 per cent cumulative prior preferred stock and a bonus of two shares of common stock to cancel dividend arrears was extended to June 10 by the board of directors yesterday.

Numerous extensions have been made on the option which originally was to have expired Sept. 15, 1934. Dividend arrears were $28 a share as of Jan. 1. Regular quarterly payment of $1.50 have been made on Oct. 1 and Jan. 1 on the new stock. Dividends on the common are blocked by the old preferred stock outstanding—now only about 5 per cent of the original 572,313 shares.

THE FAIR TO PAY TWO DIVIDENDS ON PREFERRED

Directors of The Fair yesterday declared two dividends of $1.75 each on account of accumulations on the preferred stock, payable May 1 to stock of record April 20. This reduces arrearages on the stock to $3.50 a share, a payment of $5.25 a share on accumulations having been made on Feb. 15.

Great Lakes Power Company, Ltd., declared a dividend of $1.75 a share on account of accumulations on the series A $7 preference stock, payable April 15 to stock of record March 30.

RFC HAS MORTGAGE UNIT WITH NO OFFICE, OFFICERS, FINAL PLAN

Washington, D. C., March 15.—(AP)—The RFC has organized a 10 million dollar mortgage loan agency, but today didn't know just what to do with it.

A deluge of inquiries from the press and from the "man on the street" followed an announcement yesterday by Chairman Jesse Jones that the RFC Mortgage company has been incorporated under the laws of Maryland.

To all inquiries, officials replied that details of the new company's organization have not been completed, and that arrangements for operation have not been made final.

"All we have now," one official said, "is a 10 million dollar corporation and three directors. We are working on the policies and application requirements. We have not selected a location for the company offices, and no officers have been selected."

Although the official was careful to explain that no official statement of policy could be made now, he expressed the opinion that the new company will make mortgage loans only upon business and profit producing properties.

STANDARD GAS SEEKS FIVE YEAR NOTE EXTENSION

A plan for a five year extension of maturity on $24,649,500 in notes of the Standard Gas and Electric company will be filed in a few days with the securities and exchange commission, following authorization yesterday by the board of directors.

The obligations are due Oct. 1, 1935, and include $14,823,000 in 20 year 6 per cent gold notes and $9,826,500 in 6 per cent convertible gold notes. Under the extension plan the rate of interest will continue at 6 per cent. Other funded debt will not be affected.

When 95 per cent of the maturing notes have been deposited, the plan will become operative, although the directors may declare it in force with the deposit of 66⅔ per cent. Following a practice in similar extensions, noteholders will be asked to include an acceptance and approval of the plan when depositing the notes, for the purpose of confirming a plan in federal court should proceedings be begun under 77B, the reorganization section of the amended bankruptcy law.

While no deposits can be accepted until the registration statement with the SEC is effective, depositories for the company are expected to be H. M. Byllesby & Co., the First Boston corporation, W. C. Langley & Co., and A. C. Allyn & Co.

EMPLOYES' FUND LARGEST HOLDER OF GEN. ELECTRIC

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—The General Electric Employés' Securities corporation at the end of 1934 continued to be the largest single holder of General Electric common stock, with 532,000 shares in its portfolio at the year-end, the annual report discloses. Income for the year, after expenses, was $3,450,000, compared with $3,675,000 in 1933, the decrease being attributable in part to sale of income producing securities sold to provide for redemption of bonds and in part to a net decrease in return received from securities held.

During the year 13,355 of the 19,323 holders of the corporation's 6 per cent bonds exchanged their securities for $22,541,510 new 5 per cent bonds. Dividends were paid in 1934 on the common stock amounting to $800,000, which was slightly over 2 per cent of the amount of its capital stock and surplus paid in by the General Electric company.

OLDEST U. S. BANK OBSERVES 151ST ANNIVERSARY

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—The Bank of New York and Trust company, the first bank established in New York, is observing today its 151st anniversary. The bank, of which Alexander Hamilton was one of the founders, is the oldest in the United States still preserving its original identity.

The bank made the first loan ever granted to the United States government, amounting to $200,000. Part of this went to pay the salary of George Washington.

The bank paid a dividend in every year of its existence except 1837, when payment of dividends was prohibited by law. That dividend was made up the following year.

CHICAGO GETS ANOTHER NEW HEAVY INDUSTRY

Locomotive Plant to Be Started Soon.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Chicago is soon to get a new plant and a new heavy industry. The General Motors corporation will shortly start construction of a plant near La Grange for the manufacture of Diesel-electric railroad locomotives. It is one of the products of the new higher speed era on the railroads.

The new plant will be built on a 70 acre tract, now an old farm, in the village of McCook, just south of La Grange, and ranging northeast of the intersection of 55th street and East avenue. Permission to sell the tract was granted yesterday to the Indiana Harbor Belt Railroad company, owners, by the Illinois commerce commission. Officials of the Electro-Motive corporation, a subsidiary of General Motors, announced last night that the purchase probably will be completed within a few days, and that construction will be started promptly.

First Complete Plant.

Engineers of the Electro-Motive corporation say the plant will be the first complete factory for the exclusive manufacture of Diesel-electric locomotives in America. It will consist of nine buildings, the largest of which will be 550 feet long and 170 feet wide. Contract for the erection has been let to the Austin company, Cleveland, O. Construction will be of steel, concrete, brick, and glass. A total of 2,000 tons of structural steel will be used.

In the erecting and machine shop the main aile will have a 104 foot clear span, 49 feet high. It will be served by one 200 ton and two 30 ton electric traveling cranes. Two 20 ton cranes will be placed in the machine shop. The office building will be modern and air conditioned.

Officials of the company praised the prompt action of the state commerce commission under Chairman Benjamin F. Lindheimer in approving an optional contract for purchase of the site. Purchase price of the land is about $750 an acre.

Cost Is Not Disclosed.

The cost of the new plant was not disclosed, but it was said that there is room for eventual expansion in the course of time into a $10,000,000 factory.

The site at La Grange was picked for two main reasons: First, its proximity to the Indiana Harbor Belt railroad and to excellent transportation; second, the ease with which foundations for the heavy machinery may be placed upon the Niagara limestone. Soundings have been taken into the rock, which near La Grange is closer to the surface than at some other sites that had been considered.

Diesel engines will not be made at the plant. They will be manufactured by the Winton Engine corporation of Cleveland, O., another General Motors subsidiary. The product of the new Chicago industry will be Diesel driven locomotives for use on the railroads in moving freight and passenger trains with economy and high speed.

Active for 13 Years.

The Electro-Motive corporation for thirteen years has been active in supplying railroad equipment. Since the streamlined, high speed engine period started, the demand for Diesel-electric locomotives has expanded at a rapid rate, and the company has had to sublet portions of this work to plants it does not operate. Three of its locomotives have been built in Erie, Pa., and to meet the growing demand it was decided to locate a complete plant in Chicago, which is center of the largest railroad car building pool in the world.

Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of General Motors corporation, in commenting on the project, said:

'We are firmly convinced that the railroads are entering a period of important development in which new and economical equipment will enable them to improve their service to the public. We believe the present trend of applying Diesel power to railroad requirements in the form of locomotives and switch engines for handling standard railroad equipment is only in its infancy, with wonderful possibilities for growth."

In the Matter of Deep Rock Oil Corporation, a corporation, Debtor. } In Bankruptcy No. 2318 Consolidated

NOTICE.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

TAKE NOTICE, That in the above entitled and numbered cause, the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Oklahoma on to-wit the 8th day of March, 1935, upon consideration of the petition of H. N. GREIS TRUSTEE, for authority to compound and settle the controversy with STANDARD GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY arising out of its claim against DEEP ROCK OIL CORPORATION and the amended objections of the TRUSTEE to said claim, and the reply of STANDARD GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY to said objections, TRUSTEE'S petition for authority to compromise and settle the controversy by agreement with the STANDARD GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY was by the Court referred to the undersigned as Special Master, with direction that a day be set by the Special Master for hearing said petition, and the Special Master was further ordered to notify, by mail, all creditors who have filed claims against DEEP ROCK OIL CORPORATION of said hearing at least ten days before the date set for hearing; and also to cause notice of the hearing to be published in the Chicago Tribune and the Tulsa Daily World at least ten days before the hearing; and that the special master hear said petition of TRUSTEE and consider said settlement, and any objection that may be made thereto, and report to the Court, in writing, his findings and recommendation thereon.

Accordingly, the Special Master has fixed the time and place for said hearing before him for 10:00 o'clock a. m.

MONDAY, MARCH 25, 1935

at the United States Court Room, on the second floor of the United States Court House [Post Office Building], situated at the corner of Third Street and Boulder Avenue in the City of Tulsa, County of Tulsa, State of Oklahoma; when and where all persons interested may be heard in regard to said proposed compromise and settlement; and if said hearing cannot be completed on the day last above named, it will be continued by the Master from day to day until completed.

Given at Tulsa, Oklahoma this 11th day of March, A. D. 1935.

PRESTON C. WEST, Special Master.

STOCKS RALLY WHEN TRADERS SEEK BARGAINS

More Cheerful News Items Also Help Market.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 15.—Mild recoveries were made by the more active stocks in most departments of the market today. Trading was at a slower pace and outside speculative interest appeared as light as ever. The volume was about 768,000 shares.

The sold-out condition of the list was given as the chief reason for the turnabout in trend. The combined averages had bumped a new low for the year in yesterday's dealings and numerous issues of various descriptions had settled to a new price bottom for a period of two years or longer. With no unusually bearish news in the offing, the "bargain prices" thus hung up evidently made the market look like a "buy" to the professionals who have been keeping it on the go for these many weeks, brokers said.

Prices Best Near Close.

Reports of further difficulties among the gold bloc countries tended to act as a check on the rally in its early stages but the hesitancy gradually disappeared and the movement proceeded to gather momentum in the afternoon, reaching its apex—if such it could be called—in the last half hour, when the best prices of the day were attained.

Preferred stocks were the laggards of the rally. Austin Nichols prior "A" shares fell 5 points more, thus bringing the week's decline to more than 10 points. Senior issues to counter the trend for losses of 1 to 5 points included those of Bethlehem Steel, Goodrich, International Railway, Reading, McCrory, Foster Wheeler, Tri-Continental, Congoleum, Burns Brothers, Great Western Sugar, and Pittsburgh Coal.

Railroad and mining stocks made as good a group showing as any. In the carrier section, Union Pacific rallied nearly 2 points and gains of a point or so were made by New York Central, Lackawanna, Northern Pacific, and Southern Railway. U. S. Smelting, as usual, set the pace for the mining group, improving its standing to the extent of $2.50 a share.

U. S. Steel Moves Up.

Among the standard industrials, U. S. Steel common held fast for a long time around 28 and then moved up a point. American Can did about as well. Consolidated Gas and Public Service of New Jersey were prominent in the public utilities division.

Chrysler and General Motors vied for attention in the auto sector, each rising more than a point. Case Threshing rallied easily from yesterday's dip on the strike news, finishing with a gain of $2 a share.

Some of the oils looked a trifle better, among them being Socony-Vacuum, which was an outstanding weak spot of last week. Johns-Manville showed the way up for building shares, rallying more than a point.

Trade in Cottonseed Oil Sets New All-Time Record

New York, March 15.—(AP)—Bleachable cottonseed oil had a record turnover of 334 contracts. The previous high was 267. The market broke sharply, losing 14 to 24 points during the forenoon, but later there was a turn about with the recovery in cotton, grains, and lard, and better buying by houses with cotton and southern connections.

Final prices were 9 points higher to 4 points lower. Bleachable spot nominal: March closed 10.50c per lb; May, 10.65c; July, 10.72c; Sept., 10.67c; Oct., 10.40c.

BONDS SEESAW IN DULL TRADE; FEDERALS WEAK

Sccondary Rails Decline; Utilities Firmer.

New York, March 15.—[Special.]—Bond prices showed considerable irregularity today as the volume of trading dropped sharply from that of the day before, when the first news was had on the treasury's call for redemption on June 15 of all of the first Liberty loan issues. Transfers aggregated $10,294,000, par value, compared with $16,516,000 on Wednesday.

United States governments were lifeless with transfers less than $2,500,000, and with few exceptions were lower. Liberty 3½s lost another four-thirty-seconds at 101.14 and declines of around that much were recorded in the majority of treasury loans. Indirect obligations were a trifle more steady.

New U. S. Issue on Market.

One feature of the day was the initial trading in the new treasury 2⅞ per cent bonds, due in 1960, callable in 1955. These bonds, which were recently offered in exchange for the series of fourth Liberty 4¼s called for redemption on April 15, opened at 100 23-32ds, which price was also the high and close. Prior to yesterday the bonds had been dealt in in the over-the-counter market.

In the domestic corporation group many of the lower grade rail bonds were under pressure, losing a point or more on the day, and automatically touching new lows for the year. Industrial bonds averaged lower, while high grade utilities gained ground slightly.

Some of Rails Slump.

Among the heaviest losers were Baltimore and Ohio 6s, Illinois Central 4s, New York Central consolidated 4s, and International Paper 5s.

American Water Works 6s were an outstanding strong point, and minor advances occurred in Detroit Edison 5s, North American 5s, and Laclede Gas 5½s.

The municipal investment market was interested in the sale of a one to 10 year issue of bonds by the state of New Hampshire on an average interest cost basis of 1.35 per cent. This is considerably less than the United States treasury pays on its five year notes.

Beech-Nut Packing.

Investors' Guide: Will you please send data you have on Beech-Nut Packing?—P. J.

Answer: Beech-Nut Packing company was established in 1899. It turns out a variety of foodstuffs, but the most important items are chewing gum and candies. These items sell at fixed prices; unit profits on them depend not so much on costs of labor, which are small, but on costs of materials, principally chicle and sugar. Both items have increased in price during the last year and a half.

Other items are ham, bacon, beef, jellies, peanut butter, mustard, coffee, etc. Items are extensively advertised.

Net income in 1934 was $1,911,000, or $4.37 per common share, against net income of $1,801,000, or $4.12 per share, for 1933. In 1932 the company earned $1,652,000, or $3.78 a share, against net of $2,085,000 for 1931.

Current position on Dec. 31, 1934, was strong. Cash assets alone were well over $9,000,000, while current liabilities were only $1,039,000.

There is no funded debt. Capitalization consists of 45 shares of $100 par preferred and 437,524 shares of $20 par common. More than half of the common stock is owned by Bartlett Arkell, president of the company, and associates, and 57,300 shares, or 13 per cent, are owned by Gold Dust corporation.

The common has paid dividends uninterruptedly since 1902. The current rate is 75 cents a quarter. An extra of 50 cents a share is payable April 1. Extras in 1934 totaled 75 cents a share.

A Probable 10 Per Cent Return.

Investors' Guide: I shall appreciate any information in regard to Southern Surety company [New York], in liquidation. Have any dividends been paid to creditors? I have a claim against the company.—M. H. A.

Answer: We have the following letter from K. B. Kelly of the insurance department of the State of New York:

"Liquidation of the Southern Surety Company of New York has progressed to such a point that we expect to be able to submit a report to the New York Supreme court in the near future. The only difficulty arising at the present time is in obtaining the final reports of the ancillary receivers pertaining to local proceedings, which involves some 5,000 claims.

"The liquidator has not declared any dividend to general creditors as yet. However, the eventual payment which will be made to the general creditors will be, in the writer's opinion, without binding the department in any way, 10 per cent."

HORDER'S LEASES SPACE FOR NEW, LARGER STORE

Albany Park Residence Is Bought for Club.

BY AL CHASE.

Horder's Stationery stores yesterday leased the premises at 58-60 East Adams street, in the former Alexander Revell building, for a term of years beginning May 1. The double store fronts forty-one feet on Adams, between Michigan and Wabash, with a depth of seventy-two feet. Harold H. Egan & Co. acted as agents for the Northern Trust company, trustee for the estate of Martin A. Ryerson, owner of the property.

According to Fred P. Seymour, vice president of Horder's, the policy now being followed by his company is the establishment of larger units instead of the former small type of store with 17 to 20 foot front. The opening of this new store will cause the closing of a smaller unit at 60 East Monroe street.

Buys Albany Park Residence.

The Young Men's Jewish Charities yesterday purchased the seven room two story residence at 4710 North Central Park avenue, in the Albany Park district, from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, for an undisclosed consideration. The lot is 30x150. Some interior alterations will be made from plans by Max Loewenberg of Loewenberg & Loewenberg, a director of the charities. Later a gymnasium may be added at the rear.

The organization already operates two boys' clubs. One is the American Boys' Commonwealth, in the Robert Franks Memorial building at 3415 West 13th place, and the Deborah club at 2441 West Division street.

Bartlett Quarters Expanded.

The Robert Bartlett Realty company yesterday leased 800 square feet of space in the Conway building, adjoining its present quarters on the fourth floor. This will give the firm practically all of the Washington street frontage. Increased business in merchandising and developing Beverly Shores, Indiana subdivision, is given by Robert Bartlett as the reason for enlarging the quarters.

"The general awakening of public interest in real estate is being reflected favorably in our business," said Bartlett. "It has been necessary to employ many more persons than we did a year ago to handle inquiries and show property."

BUTTER FUTURES DECLINE; EGGS ⅛ TO ¼ CENT LOWER

Reports of reduced consumption of butter and eggs, which is reflected in increased amounts going into cold storage, adversely affected the future market on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday. Heavy selling made its appearance, with butter closing at net losses of ⅛ to ½ cent per pound, while eggs were off ⅜ to ¼ cent per dozen. Trading in October eggs was the heaviest this year.
